INDUSTRY SEES POST-WAR LULL, THEN BIG BOOM

Hopes for Freedom of Initiative.

How about your job after the war? Your business? Your savings? Your standard of living? The Tribune assigned a reporter to seek the answers, not from frequently quoted politicians and college professors, but from the private industries which have made America. This is the first story.

BY HAL FOUST.

The whistles and bells celebrating victory—tomorrow, or a year or two or three from now—will signal the end of war time jobs for hundreds of thousands in shipyards, powder mills, airplane factories, and sundry munitions and armament works. There will be a period of all's quiet on the home front, too.

Industrialists interviewed agree that a business lull is inevitable while factories get underway in producing automobiles, washing machines, houses, electric razors, and nylon stockings — all of the thousands of things civilians have been wanting. They disagree as to the probable severity and duration of a slump immediately after the armistice. Divergent opinions from different authoritative sources will be published in subsequent articles.

Plead for Private Initiative.

If we can recover from the reconversion and demobilization slump, according to our industrial leaders there will be a boom. High prices and high wages, an era of prosperity will follow fairly promptly and continue for several years unless the political environment is hostile to private initiative, according to the business leaders. The industrialists, at the request of this interviewer, weren't referring to Republican or Democratic politics, but to governmental policies which would hamstring business regardless of who is in the White House at the time.

A foretaste of the slump expected immediately after the armistice is seen in the experiences of some of the 1,300,000 men discharged from army and navy in the first two years of the war. Yesterday's interview at the Chicago airport, it's to be hoped, was an exception and not a typical case.

We met Sgt. Arthur Gibbons, 21, of 927 Vernon Park pl. He was looking for a job. He was discharged Feb. 16 as engineer in a bombing crew. He had two years' service in the army as an aircraft mechanic. He was discharged because his heart began to rebel at work in excessive altitudes.

Experience of Veteran.

Gibbons found a job, but he didn't take it. He was a little shocked, not from his war experience, but from his post-army experience. For two years he had served to make the world safe from despotism. The best civilian job as an aircraft mechanic that he had found was at 65 cents an hour, with a chance for promotion to 70 cents an hour—$28 a week, minus pay roll deductions for income tax, social security, and war bonds.

Some measure of the economic shock of a sudden peace is seen in the fact that about half of America's industrial output today is devoted to war. The strain on the home front would be lessened substantially, it is believed, if Hitler falls a year or more before Hirohito. In this year or more, it is calculated that half of our war workers could switch to peace time pursuit, because with Germany out of the war, we would ship no arms to Russia, few to England and it is said that we could use against Japan only a fraction of all we are now making. There could be a partial demobilization of troops, according to some authorities.

Look for Delicate Period.

However, regardless of whether victory is won half at a time or all at once, there'll be a temporary slump in employment during a conversion to all-out civilian production. Some of America's business leaders believe it will be one of the most delicate periods in this country's history. They believe

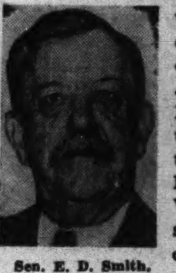
F.D.R. and Aid Back Down in Senate Fight

BY WILLARD EDWARDS.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]



Sen. E. D. Smith.

Washington, D. C., March 4.—The White House bowed to the senate tonight. Faced with a threat of contempt proceedings against Jonathan W. Daniels, administrative assistant to President Roosevelt, the White House issued a letter over Daniels' signature, withdrawing a previous refusal by Daniels to testify before a senate agriculture subcommittee.

A few hours after the subcommittee had unanimously recommended that he be brought before "the bar of the senate" on charges of contempt, Daniels said he was willing to answer the subcommittee's questions. He explained that he wrote the letter after a conference with Mr. Roosevelt.

The subcommittee, headed by Sen. "Cotton Ed" Smith [D., S. C.], was set up last year to investigate political manipulation of the rural electrification administration.

Balked at Questions.

Daniels, on advice of the attorney general's office, had refused to answer questions concerning White House activities in connection with the REA. Such testimony, he had asserted, would violate his confidential relationship to President Roosevelt, besides being "contrary to the public interest."

Daniels' letter, addressed to Chairman Smith, voiced the opinion that the committee could not force an administrative assistant of the President to testify regarding a conversation with the President.

Daniels, however, quickly disclaimed any intention of testing this theory.

"I have conferred with the President," he wrote. "He does not think that in this particular matter my testimony would adversely affect the public interest. Therefore, I advise you that I am entirely willing to appear before the committee and answer the questions propounded to me on last Monday, or any other questions with reference to this particular matter.

F. D. R. Ready to Appear.

"I do this because the President advises me that there is no statement made by him about this matter which he would not be willing for me to repeat to the committee.

"In fact, the President stated to me that if the committee wishes to discuss the matter with him personally, he will be happy to see the committee at any time."

Political observers saw in the letter a continuation of Mr. Roosevelt's new policy of going along with congress, first observed when he backed down last week and implored Sen. Barkley [D., Ky.], senate majority leader, to retain his leadership after Barkley had resigned in protest against the Presidential veto of the tax bill. Barkley retained the post, but not by Presidential order. He resigned and the Democrats reëlected him.

Termed Committee Victory.

Chairman Smith asserted that Daniels' letter is an admission that the subcommittee has the power to require executive department officials to testify. He said that contempt proceedings will be dropped if Daniels testifies in a satisfactory manner.

The Daniels incident followed testimony before the subcommittee by Harry Slattery, REA head, who said that Daniels had sought to force him to resign, presumably because Slattery had resisted efforts to turn the agency into a political instrument and influence the votes of 4 million farmers thru REA loans and other devices.

Senators Smith, Gillette [D., Ia.], Shipstead [R., Minn.], and Aiken [R., Vt.], voted for the contempt charges. A fifth member, Sen. Bilbo [D., Miss.], was absent.

TRUMAN GROUP DEMANDS MORE CIVILIAN GOODS

Assails Army and Navy Policies.

Sen. Truman.

Washington, D. C., March 4.—Denouncing those who would hide the truth from the American people, the senate Truman committee today told the nation its war production is "awe-inspiring," that its men on every fighting front are assured an endless flow of weapons.

The committee, investigating the war program under Chairman Truman [D., Mo.], said in its third annual report:

"There are those who believe the American people ought not to be told the full extent and meaning of their accomplishments, on the theory that they might become overconfident, and might place selfish interests above those of their country.

Insult to Intelligence.

"This paternal attitude is based upon the false assumption by those adopting it that they have a higher degree of patriotism than the average citizen. Such an attitude is an insult to the patriotism and intelligence of the American people."

The committee said the time has come when production of civilian goods must be increased, despite the opposition of those who wish to create unemployment in certain areas to force workers into other areas to complete war contracts on which speed is not essential.

The committee conceded the war emergency had required speed, but found that "many decisions were hastily and sometimes foolishly made, and many mistakes were continued long after they should have been rectified."

Details of Tool Scandal.

The report, for the year ending Feb. 29, revealed all the details of the war department and war production board Detroit tool scandal, in which new cutting tools which cost the government $1,721,136 were sold as scrap last August for $36,924 while war plants were clamoring for similar equipment.

Other major items in the report:

1. The Kaiser-Hughes Aircraft corporation's widely publicized 18 million dollar contract to build three giant transport seaplanes has been canceled on orders of WPB Chairman Nelson.

2. Army negotiations for the acquisition of hotels in Florida were "overbearing and inconsistent with fair dealing." The army changed its mind too often about hotels, taking them for long term use and then turning them back or abandoning them. The committee found the best examples of this probably were the Stevens and Congress hotels in Chi-

Hear Airman Over Radio as He Blasts Japs

Chicagoans listening to W-G-N last night heard a previously unannounced and thrilling broadcast from the plane of an American navy pilot who was dive bombing and strafing a Japanese position in the South Pacific.

The attack, by Lt. Joseph E. Butler of Irwinton, Ga., on a Japanese bridge on Bougainville, was the first ever reported by radio by the pilot of a plane in actual combat. He flew with one hand on his controls and the other on a microphone.

A recording of the broadcast was released last night by the navy and was carried immediately by W-G-N and Mutual without time for previous announcements. On W-G-N it replaced a scheduled orchestra period. Butler, who was interviewed from the flying field by Staff Sgt. James O'Harden of Marietta, Ga., said after his return that he hoped a record would be sent to Radio Tokio.

Roar of Plane Heard.

Butler's voice could be heard faintly, and sometimes was drowned out, in the roar of his plane, as he talked back to O'Harden.

"I will go ahead and describe the mission," Butler said. "The target is just off my port wing. The target is a bridge about 240 feet long, and I can barely see it. My altitude is 10,000 feet. Just off in the distance I can see the enemy positions, and I can see a volcano smoking. In about one minute I will be ready to make my dive. Do you have any questions?"

"Go ahead, please," answered O'Harden. "Go ahead, please."

"I cannot hear you," came back Butler's voice, "so I will go ahead. I am coming on my target now. They are beginning to fire flak. I am opening my diving flaps. My altitude is 9,000 feet.

"I Am Going Down."

"I am going down now, going almost straight down. My diving flaps are open. I am a little off the target, and I am swinging over to the right. They are shooting flak."

Bursts of anti-aircraft fire could be heard more loudly, and Butler's voice was lost in the noise. Then he was heard saying: "I am doing 300 knots. My altitude is 4,000 feet, 3,000 feet, 2,000—1,000. I am going to release now."

In the din of enemy fire, Butler could not be heard. After a period of silence, the worried marine correspondent back at the air field began calling, "Lt. Butler, are you all right? Come in, please. Come in, please."

At last Butler again came on the air, saying, ". . . but I just did make it. The bridge is going up in the air now, straight up, 75 to 100 feet, and I'm very low, just about at the tree tops. There are some Japs just ahead, and I'm going to strafe them.

"They are firing back. I have got to get out of here. Take it away."

31 ARRESTED BY FBI IN ROUNDUP OF RAIL TICKET PROFITEERS

Miami, Fla., March 4 (AP).—The federal bureau of investigation today announced the arrest of 31 persons at Miami and Miami Beach as the first step in a drive to stamp out "a vicious black market" in railroad reservations.

The FBI said those arrested included 16 railroad employes, 14 hotel workers, and one taxicab driver. The group was said to be showing a profit of between $15,000 and $20,000 a month.

The railroad men are charged with violating the United States criminal code, which forbids the sale of any service to a passenger at a rate in excess of that charged other persons for the same accommodations. The hotel men are charged with conspiracy to violate the same code.

"The viciousness of the whole thing," the FBI said, "is aggravated by the large number of service men who are unable to get reservations because they can't pay the $10 to $100 fees asked above regular railroad fare, while wealthy tourists can."

Convictions carry penalties up to two years' imprisonment and $5,000 fines for each violation.

LaBuy Chosen with Shaw for Federal Bench

Sen. Lucas [D., Ill.] announced yesterday that President Roosevelt had decided to appoint Circuit Judge Walter J. La Buy and Elwyn R. Shaw, former Illinois Supreme court justice, to fill two federal District court vacancies in the northern district of Illinois.

Judge W. J. La Buy [top], and Ex-Justice Shaw.

Former Justice Shaw of Freeport will fill the vacancy created by the death of Judge Charles E. Woodward. Judge La Buy will take the seat vacated by the retirement of Judge William H. Holly.

"The appointments will be before the senate for confirmation early this week," said Sen. Lucas. "I am positive the senate will confirm with all convenient speed."

"I am thrilled at the opportunity to serve," said Judge La Buy, "and I am thankful to my friends for their efforts in my behalf."

Records of La Buy and Shaw.

Judge La Buy, 55, was graduated from De Paul university school of law in 1912 and was admitted to the bar the same year. He served as city attorney of Chicago in 1913 and was elected a member of the county board of commissioners in 1930.

In 1933, he was elected to the Circuit court bench and has served there since. He lives at 1242 Lake Shore dr., is married, and the father of two married daughters.

Former Justice Shaw was born at Lyndon, Whiteside county, in 1888, was educated in the schools of the county, and was given his law degree by the University of Michigan in 1910. He has practiced law in Freeport, with the exception of 10 years on the Illinois Supreme court bench, since 1913.

Shaw Election a Surprise.

Shaw's election to the state's highest court was a surprise even in a year of political upsets. He defeated Justice Oscar E. Heard, 77 year old member of the court, and George T. Liddell, fiery county judge of Winnebago county in 1933.

After his defeat in 1942 by Justice William J. Fulton of Sycamore, De Kalb county, Shaw resumed private practice in Freeport.

Fight All Night for Airdrome; 61 Yanks Slain

ALLIED HDQ., SOUTHWEST PACIFIC, March 5 [Sunday]—(AP).—Standing their ground in one of the fiercest fights of the Pacific war, American invaders of the Admiralties killed or wounded 3,000 Japanese who attacked them in waves, headquarters announced today.

This turn in the tide of battle occurred Friday night and Saturday on Los Negros Island, invaded last Tuesday on the northeastern side of the Bismarck sea Admiralty group.

Gen. MacArthur's bulletin said:

"Shortly after dusk, in a final desperate effort to restore the situation and regain the key Momote air field, the enemy attacked in a series of continued assaults lasting the entire night. Again and again his forces hurled themselves against our lines in incessant but futile efforts to reach the field. Wave after wave was destroyed before his forces finally recoiled in complete defeat after one of the fiercest encounters of the war.

700 Jap Dead Buried.

"His casualties, dead and wounded, are estimated at 3,000. Seven hundred of his dead were buried by our men on the western perimeter of the field alone. We lost 61 killed and 244 wounded.

"Our troops are preparing to resume the advance. During the day our naval units had bombarded enemy shore installations at Lorengau and Seadler harbor. In the air our medium and attack units executed close support missions. One of eight enemy fighters attempting to intercept was shot down."

Seabees Work on Air Field.

The dismounted cavalrymen of the 1st division fought by night and worked by day with United States navy "Seabees" to put the air field in shape.

More than 100 Warhawks, Mitchells, Liberators, and Hellcats attacked Rabaul Friday in the face of intense anti-aircraft fire. One hundred and sixty-two tons of explosives were dropped. Clusters of supply barges were among heavily hit targets.

CLAIM U. S. CARRIER SUNK.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

The Tokio radio claimed last night that Japanese planes had sunk an American aircraft carrier and seriously damaged another in addition to sinking three more large warships, of which two might have been aircraft carriers.

The broadcast said the attacks took place Feb. 23 against American naval forces which raided the Mariana Islands.

Adm. Chester W. Nimitz reported on Feb. 25 that the American force battled fierce aerial opposition from the Japanese, but no United States vessel was sunk or damaged.

SHEKELS 2,000 YEARS OLD DUG UP IN HOLY CITY

[By Wireless to the New York Times and The Chicago Tribune.]

JERUSALEM, Palestine, March 4.—Workmen digging in a garden behind the main faculty and arts building of the Hebrew university on Mount Scopus in Jerusalem recently found a small hoard of silver coins in a pottery bottle—evidently somebody's ancient savings.

The bottle contained 11 silver coins struck at Tyre between 120-29 and 30-29 B. C. Nine were shekels bearing dates between 40 and 29 B. C. The other two were tetradrachmas dating back to the reign of King Demetrius II. of the Seleucid dynasty, struck at the Tyrian mint in the year 130-29 B. C.

The nine Tyrian shekels were excellently preserved with a thick, dark patina, while the two earlier coins were much worn, having apparently been in circulation a long time.

RACKETS' BOSS IS LAST TO DIE FOR '36 KILLING

Dewey, High Court Refuse Stay.

Ossining, N. Y., March 4.—Louis [Lepke] Buchalter, former overlord of the criminal syndicate called Murder, Inc., died tonight in Sing Sing prison's electric chair for the 1936 murder of a Brooklyn candy store proprietor.

Executed with Lepke were two of his associates in the slaying, Emanuel [Mendy] Weiss and Louis Capone.

Capone was first to die, then Weiss and Lepke.

Only Weiss spoke as he went to his death. Chewing gum vigorously, he declared:

"I'm here on a framed up case."

Takes Secrets to Grave.

Lepke rolled his tongue in his cheek and walked to the chair unaided. He was pronounced dead at 11:16 p. m.

Speculation as to whether Lepke had "talked" was rife, but officially, at least, he took with him to the grave any revelations he might have made concerning the crime-politics alliance in New York City.

24 Witness Executions.

Twenty-four witnesses saw the three executions. It was said to be the first Saturday night execution at Sing Sing since 1917. Originally scheduled for Thursday night, the three executions were delayed until tonight by an 11th hour stay of execution by Gov. Dewey.

It had been a hectic day for Lepke, with activity in the case shifting dizzily from Washington, to Ossining, to Albany.

In Washington, the United States Supreme court summarily rejected the gangster's plea that his constitutional rights had been violated when the lower courts denied his appeal for a writ of habeas corpus which would have transferred him back to federal custody.

The decision, a unanimous one, came less than an hour and a half after Albert E. Klapper, attorney for Lepke, filed the application for a writ of certiorari with the high court's clerk. This writ would have compelled a review of the earlier denials of a habeas corpus writ by the federal District and Circuit courts.

Claims Rights Violated.

The application was based on the argument that federal authorities violated the gangster's rights when they turned him over to New York state for execution instead of holding him to serve his 14 year term for narcotics law violation.

Ordinarily, such petitions are not considered until several weeks after filing, but the Lepke application was carried to the justices during their routine Saturday conference. When their decision was announced, no explanation was given.

In opposing Lepke's last minute appeal to the United States Supreme court, Burton Turkus and Solomon Klein, assistant district attorneys of Kings county, invited the court's attention to a Supreme court decision of 1927, which was cited in the lower courts' opinion. It said:

"The penitentiary is not a sanctuary. Life in it does not confer immunity from capital punishment provided by law. The prisoner has no vested constitutional right to serve out his unexpired sentence."

In Sing Sing, Lepke was taken once more from his cell in the deathhouse and installed in the same pre-execution chamber he left so jubilantly after the chief stay granted Thursday night.

Deaf to Wife's Pleas.

He turned a deaf ear to the pleas of his wife, Betty, that he ask United States Atty. James B. M. McNally in New York to listen to his story of a widespread coalition between crime and politics.

"He'll listen to you, Lou," she pleaded. "God knows, you can tell him enough to save you."

But Lepke shook his head.

"Look," he said. "Suppose I do talk to him. Suppose he asks for a reprieve. What's the best I could expect? I'll tell you: they'd give me another six or eight months—at the most, a year. No, if that's the case, I'd rather go tonight."

Issues Statement.

He smiled as his wife and son, Harold, left. He gave his wife a statement in which he denied his guilt and urged the appointment of a commission to examine the facts in the case.

"I am anxious to have it clearly understood that I did not offer to talk and give information in exchange for any promise of commutation of my death sentence," Lepke's statement, relayed to reporters thru his wife, said.

In Albany Gov. Dewey denied once more that he had received any communication regarding Lepke, altho it was reported that Frank S. Hogan, New York county district attorney, Friday night had prepared a detailed report to Dewey on his prison conversation with the condemned man.

The New York Daily News said it had received word from Lepke, thru a third person, that Lepke had told Hogan the name of a man high in political and labor circles who was "in back of several crimes."

The governor took the stand that the only requests which could stay the execution further must come from the district attorney of either Kings or New York counties.

Linked to 20 Murders.

His decision marked the end of one of history's most tortuous legal battles to escape the chair by the man who once muscled himself $500,000 a year as America's kingpin industrial racketeer, as the climax of a career of crime which included, police have estimated, more than 20 murders, many of them "on order," and such sidelines as hijacking, terrorism, and extortion.

The crime for which Lepke was sentenced to die was the firing of 17 bullets into the body of Joseph Bosen, New York candy store proprietor, to keep him from testifying in a rackets investigation. The prosecution charged that Lepke ordered Rosen killed, that Weiss, sentenced with Lepke, fired the shots, and that Capone, the other co-defendant, arranged the escape.

Begins as Package Thief.

Lepke began his career as a package thief on New York's east side. He was sentenced to Cheshire reformatory in Connecticut for a minor burglary when he was 21. He came back to New York and served time for larceny. After he got out he let the small fry criminals take the risks. He was the crime entrepreneur.

In this period he maintained a profitable partnership with Jacob [Gurrah] Shapiro, who pleaded guilty a year ago to extortion in the garment industry and was sentenced to 15 years to life. The pair organized a fur dressers' protective association and the Fur Dressers' Factory corporation and went in for extortion on a grand scale.

Their stock in trade was beating, slugging, bombing, burning, and murder, police charged. The combination produced a reported $5,000,000 to $10,000,000 a year.

Judge Convicted.

When they were sentenced to two years for violation of anti-trust laws, Circuit Court Judge Martin T. Manton, later convicted of accepting bribes, reversed the decision.

In December, 1939, Lepke was sentenced to 14 years in Leavenworth prison for smuggling narcotics valued at $10,000,000 into this country. In March, 1940, a New York federal court sentenced him to 30 years to life for extortion in the narcotics, furs, and trucking rackets, the sentence to be served at the completion of his term in Leavenworth.

Lepke was removed from Leavenworth in 1941 and on Sept. 15 of that year went to trial for the Rosen slaying, following an investigation of one of the most shocking and cold-blooded rackets in the history of crime—the murder-for-a-fee combine which became known as Murder, Inc., which the state charged Buchalter bossed.

7 Witnesses Slain.

During the trial, Dist. Atty. William O'Dwyer of Brooklyn said seven possible witnesses against Lepke were murdered.

After the conviction, Lepke was returned to Leavenworth to complete his federal sentence, and then began a tug of war between New York state and the federal government for Buchalter's custody, which the state finally won.

Lepke's retention by the federal government, in the face of demands by Gov. Dewey that he be turned over to New York state for execution, became a national political issue.

Charges were made that the government feared to release Lepke lest he name prominent New Deal politicians as "higher ups" in his crime syndicate, as the price of a commutation of sentence. In July, 1943, District Atty. Thomas C. Hughes of Brooklyn charged that federal authorities were blocking Lepke's execution, and in September of the same year, Gov. Dewey called on President Roosevelt to surrender the gangster to the state "in accordance with custom."

Boasted of Immunity.

Lepke had told guards during his trial that he never would be electrocuted, and associates had stated that if he talked, it might be embarrassing to several nationally known persons.

His ultimate release by the government, climaxing months of dispute, was on condition, laid down by United States Atty. Gen. Biddle, that he be returned to federal custody in the event he was not executed.

During the dispute, four reprieves were granted to Lepke's co-defendants, Weiss and Capone, Gov. Dewey refusing to permit their execution until Lepke was in custody.

Produce Penicillin on Mass Scale

One of tanks manufactured by John Nooter Boiler works of St. Louis, Mo., in which wonder drug, penicillin, once produced a drop at a time in "milk bottle" flasks, is now manufactured on a large scale for government distribution and use. Tank is of 2,500 gallons capacity. The company Friday won the army-navy E pennant for building the tanks.

THREAT ON LIFE TOLD BY WIFE IN DRAFT INQUIRY

Sam Halperin, 25, a taxicab chauffeur, was arraigned before Judge Heller in the Des Plaines st. court yesterday on a charge by his wife, Betty, 3845 Polk st., that he threatened to kill her to prevent her repeating his reputed boast that he had paid a $300 bribe to obtain a draft deferment.

Selective service board No. 38 at 3726 Roosevelt rd., began an inquiry several weeks ago on complaint of Halperin's wife, and officials ordered them to appear for a hearing Friday night. Mrs. Halperin, mother of an 18 months old son, told police she neglected to appear. Later she received a telephone message that her life "wasn't worth 2 cents," she testified.

Mrs. Halperin told Judge Heller her husband threatened to kill her unless she recanted her story of the bribe. The Halperins have been ordered to appear before the draft board at 1:30 p. m. today. Judge Heller deferred hearing a disorderly conduct charge against Halperin until Thursday.

COURT REFUSES BAIL FOR SIX IN FILM EXTORTION

New York, March 4 (AP).—The United States Circuit Court of Appeals today denied a motion to admit to bail pending appeal six Chicago men convicted on charges of conspiring to extort more than a million dollars from the motion picture industry.

The six, described by Boris Kostelanetz, assistant United States attorney, as former members of the Capone gang in Chicago, had been sentenced to 10 years in jail and each had been fined $10,000 Dec. 31 by Judge John Bright in the United States District court after being convicted in a three month trial.

Motion for bail was made on behalf of Louis Campagna, Paul De Lucia, Phil D'Andrea, Francis Maritote, Charles Gioe, and John Roselli. A seventh defendant, Louis Kaufman, business agent for the Newark, N. J., local of the AFL International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes, had been sentenced to seven years and released in $25,000 bail pending appeal.

FAWCETT, OFTEN HUNTED, AGAIN EVADES POLICE

Sought as Suspect in Williams Case.

In their search yesterday for James J. [Red] Fawcett, alias Red Forsythe, as a suspect in the shooting of John J. Williams, 29, gambling house boss, police were striving to lay their hands upon one of the most elusive hoodlums in Chicago's underworld.

James J. Fawcett.

Fawcett, who is 43, is known as a south side tough and gunman, reared in the back-of-the-yards district, whose livelihood has been derived from his connection with gambling, and earlier with bootlegging.

Arrested 15 Times.

Records disclosed that he has been arrested 15 times, winning discharges in all but a few minor cases when he paid trifling fines. He was sentenced to a year in the Bridewell in June, 1929, and fined $200 and costs, but the conviction was set aside by the Supreme court.

In October, 1931, he received a 90 day sentence in the Bridewell and was fined $100 and costs for defacing the identification marks on a revolver. He went free, however, when the Appellate court remanded the case, and the charge was dismissed.

Fawcett was named by James Egan as one of the slayers last Sept. 18 of Martin [Sonny Boy] Quirk, agent of the Guzik gambling syndicate. He was indicted for this killing, and still is being sought.

Linked to Stanton Murder.

Police also are seeking him for questioning in the murder of Danny Stanton, which preceded that of Quirk. The second slaying was a result of Quirk's seizure of Stanton's gambling interests.

Fawcett was pictured by police as a bodyguard and "heavy" man for both Quirk and Stanton whose ready gun was turned upon his benefactors as readily as upon their enemies.

Police described Fawcett at 5 feet 10 inches tall, of medium complexion, weighing 155 pounds, with blue eyes and brown hair.

Possibility that the barrage of shotgun slugs was directed at Williams last Friday because of his failure to pay off for the murder of Quirk was suggested yesterday by Chief of Detectives Sullivan, who recalled that Williams had instigated the slaying, according to Egan's testimony.

Physicians said yesterday that Williams probably would recover.

ILLINOIS BEATS ALL TOP QUOTA STATES IN LOAN

Illinois oversubscribed its fourth war loan quota by a larger percentage than any other of the first five big quota states in the nation, according to figures announced by the treasury last night in Washington, D. C.

Total sales in Illinois were $1,209,000,000, compared with a quota of 905 million dollars, or 134 per cent. Sales for all states and territories and possessions aggregated $16,730,000,000, exceeding the quota of 14 billions.

Illinois Outpaces New York.

In comparison with Illinois, New York reached only 111 per cent with subscriptions of $4,665,000,000 against a quota of $4,198,000,000; Pennsylvania reported $1,069,000,000 in sales compared with a quota of $978,000,000, or 109 per cent; California had $898,000,000, against its quota of $844,000,000, or 106 per cent, and Massachusetts with $827,000,000 and a quota of $794,000,000, reported 104 per cent. Mississippi outpaced all states with a percentage of 154; Alaska, with 202, led the territories.

Other midwestern states also far exceeded the percentages of the big eastern money center states and California.

Indiana, $292,000,000, quota $233,000,000, 126 per cent; Iowa, $229,000,000, quota $177,000,000, 129; Michigan, $585,000,000, quota $440,000,000, 133; Ohio, $896,000,000, quota $672,000,000, 133; Wisconsin, $336,000,000, quota $258,000,000, 130.

95 Counties Reach Quota.

Ninety-five of Illinois' 102 counties made their over-all quota and 83 made their E bond quota. Cook county was among the first group, but not the second in the drive from Jan. 18 to Feb. 29.

Eighty-five million dollars worth of bonds were sold thru the pay roll deduction and special employe purchase plans in Cook county, said George Huth, co-chairman with Kenneth Rich of the county finance committee's pay roll division. He cited the employes of the Sherwin-Williams company for outstanding performance in this division. The company's quota of $75,000 for special purchases was more than trebled with a final figure of $240,000.

Admission to yesterday afternoon's performance of Ice-Capades at the Chicago arena was thru purchase of war bonds, and the sum of $1,621,000 was realized, B. Harrison Neuman of the treasury department's special events committee reported. The highest sale was a $65,000 G bond.

FOUND SHOT TO DEATH.

Lawrence Nelson, 67, of 5019 Concord pl., a drill press operator, was found dead, shot thru the right temple, his revolver on the floor beside him, in the basement of his apartment yesterday.

SUSPECT, CAUGHT BY DOGS, DENIES ALKY TAX CASE

Thomas Dacey, 31, of 1033 S. Claremont av., who was trapped by three police dogs as he tried to flee from alcohol tax unit agents, and his brother-in-law, Rudolph Fratto, 27, of 2240 Campbell park, pleaded not guilty to transporting untaxed spirits yesterday when they were arraigned before United States Commissioner Edwin K. Walker. Dacey, who appeared with right hand and leg bandaged, was bitten by the dogs in a back yard at Lake st. and Western av., Friday night as he fled from the agents, who had seized Fratto in an automobile. The agents reported they found 25 gallons of alcohol in the car. Ball for the two was set at $1,000 each, pending a hearing March 15.

BERLIN RAIDED 1ST TIME BY U. S. HEAVY BOMBERS

40 Planes Lost in Smash Thru Blinding Snow.

LONDON, March 4 (AP).—Berlin was bombed by American Flying Fortresses today for the first time in the war as part of an extensive daylight attack on eastern Germany by the United States 8th air force.

Plunging 600 miles into the heart of Germany, one formation of heavy bombers hit the capital with the help of an escort of Mustang fighters.

Fourteen bombers and 26 fighters are missing from the operations, headquarters stated in a tentative accounting. Nine enemy planes were shot down by the fighters.

The Fortresses thundered thru blinding snowstorms and 58 degree below zero temperature in the substratosphere to make the first American attack on the capital. The German air force sent up only 30 to 40 fighters in defense of the city.

The weather over Germany was almost unbearable. Flyers wearing electrically heated suits nearly froze. As the clouds and snowstorms thickened over Europe, most of the big armada cut over to hit unidentified targets in eastern Germany in more favorable weather.

Illinoisan Navigates Lead Plane.

The exact size of the force which smashed at Berlin remained an official secret. It was led by Lt. Col. Harry Mumford, 26, of San Jose, Cal., who said his navigator, Lt. Malcolm C. Burr of Alton, Ill., "should get all the credit because he did a wonderful job. Despite the extremely bad weather we never were more than five miles off our basic course."

It was the first raid for Lt. Howard Zemman, 22, a co-pilot, of 5444 Wolcott av., Chicago. "There's really nothing I can compare it with," he explained, "but it sure could have been a lot tougher."

Thru momentary breaks in the clouds the flyers saw their bombs crash into Berlin buildings blanketed in heavy snow.

The German radio acknowledged the Berlin area had been attacked —only 24 hours after American Lightning fighters had reached the capital in their first penetration. The broadcast described the total American force as "very great," but claimed "hardly a handful of American bombers reached the outskirts of Berlin," adding:

"The majority of raiders turned westward over the Cologne area after having dropped their bombs aimlessly."

6th Raid in 4 Days.

Tho Berlin is a 1,200 mile round trip and the raids were made thru a cloud overcast often six miles high, they brought the capital area for the first time under "round-the-clock" bombing, R. A. F. Mosquitos having attacked Berlin last night along with targets in western Germany.

The American raid, sixth allied assault on the Germans in four days, was accompanied by a big R. A. F. attack on the coast of northern France.

Tonight the entire Vichy radio network went off the air, indicating the R. A. F. might be continuing the non-stop raids.

Swiss Sentence Major to Death, 4 to Jail as Spies

LONDON, March 4 (AP).—A Swiss broadcast said today that a major of the Swiss Interlaken motorized division had been sentenced to death and four other Swiss had received prison sentences for treason. They were members of a spy organization established to secure military information for a foreign power, said the broadcast. The name of the country involved was not given.

BRITAIN'S HONOR HELD AT STAKE IN POLISH ISSUE

Don't Betray Allies' Trust, Says Paper.

BY LARRY RUE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, March 4.—In contrast with most British opinion and even that expressed by Prime Minister Churchill, who sympathized with Russian demands on Poland, the Weekly Review today emphasized that in this dispute Britain's national honor is at stake.

"The ultimate reason why Great Britain — lamentably unprepared — entered this war and continued to fight when all seemed lost was to preserve her honor" it said. "If we abandon it now in our strength, all the toil, suffering, and heroism of four and a half years of war will have been wasted.

"Worse than that, we shall be execrated by all the nations who have been led to trust us, and our immortal dead, who gave their lives for the honor of their country, will have been grossly betrayed."

Cites Reds 'Aid' to Nazis.

It emphasized how Poland fought against tremendous odds with unsurpassed heroism, while our "other ally [Russia] during the first two years of the war gave its support to our enemy and assisted him to break the resistance of his first victim."

"Only when it was attacked by the reich did it take up arms on our side," the Review recalled.

Points to Soviet Attacks.

"Of these two allies, the second [Russia], now that the danger of defeat seems to be over, is demanding from the first [Poland] not only some half of its territory but the right to supplant its government and dismiss its commander in chief," it said. "For months it has been pouring out venom in its press upon that country, which is its ally, which it wronged abominably in the first years of the war, and which even now is helping on the field of battle."

It referred to Poland's appeal to Britain and America "to arbitrate in this unwarranted attack," but pointed out Churchill had made it "perfectly plain that our government never would tolerate the least whittling down of our pledge to Poland or our determination not to permit frontiers to be altered without a freely negotiated agreement between the countries concerned, for on the performance of those two duties our honor as a nation depends."

German Army Quells Strikers in Milan Area

BERNE, Switzerland, March 4.—The Nazi army in northern Italy today quelled strike disturbances and restored essential railroad traffic in so far as it concerned German war supplies.

PONAPE, KUSAIE AND MARSHALLS POUNDED AGAIN

U. S. FLEET HDQ., Pearl Harbor, March 4 (AP).—Liberator bombers continued the steady pounding of Ponape, Japanese base in the Caroline Island, with an eight ton bombing raid Thursday, Adm. Chester W. Nimitz announced today, and also struck enemy shipping and docks at Kusaie Island, southeast of Ponape.

Army Mitchell bombers and navy searchplanes same date attacked two unnamed enemy bases in the Marshall Islands, dealing out 17 tons of explosives, Nimitz announced.

Altho some anti-aircraft fire was encountered, all our planes returned safely.

YANKS BAG 97 PLANES IN RAID ON REGENSBURG

ALLIED HDQ., Naples, March 4 (AP).—Gunners on American bombers and escorting fighter pilots destroyed 97 German planes in the great air battle over Regensburg, Germany, on Feb. 25, revised figures showed today.

The bag was described officially as an all-time record for planes based in the Mediterranean theater, the previous record having been 85 off the Tunisian coast April 17, 1943.

Britain to Montreal in 13 Hours Is New Record

MONTREAL, Que., March 4 (AP).—The record for a non-stop flight from Britain to Montreal was shattered today when it was announced that a transport plane had flown the 3,140 miles in 12 hours and 59 minutes, bettering by 17 minutes the record set last week.

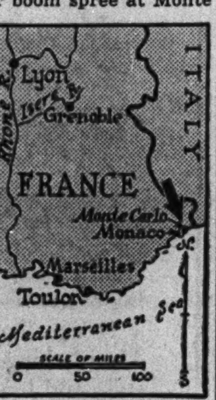
GERMANS DRY UP A GOLDEN OASIS IN MONTE CARLO

Fabulous Monaco Shut as War Boom Is Nipped.

MADRID, Spain, March 4 (AP).—The wild, war boom spree at Monte Carlo is over after three years of fabulous high jinks.



Arrow locates Monaco and Monte Carlo.

The tiny principality and gambling center was an oasis of good living until last week. Billions of francs crossed the casin's gambling tables every night. British whisky, Havana cigars, American cigarets, whipped cream, and all the luxuries drained from Europe's black markets found their way to Monte Carlo for sale at king's ransom prices.

Black market millionaires, quislings, and loot-heavy high officers on the loose sooner or later turned up at the wide open hot spot where everybody—so the word was spread thruout Hitler's Europe—could have a "pre-war good time" if he had the price.

No Rationing in Monaco.

Even for more modest incomes, Monte Carlo offered the luxury of no rationing.

Last week the war cracked down on Monaco. The Germans, reportedly getting a fat cut from the casino profits, finally decided the golden goose had to be sacrificed for fear the Nazi high command might find this soft spot so close to the allied bases in Corsica. [Apparently the Germans feared the possibility of an allied attack on a probably lightly defended front.]

Monacan Prince Louis and his divorced daughter, Charlotte, were told by their ministers of state, who in turn got their orders from the Germans, that rationing similar to that in force in France must begin right now.

5,000 Aliens Ordered Out.

Moreover, the orders specified that 5,000 aliens living in Monaco—German excepted, naturally—must get out.

Last week, the 5,000 were sent packing, together with thousands of casual tourists.

Here is what the Eveninger Madrid's correspondent reports of the gloomy last night of Monte Carlo:

"Monaco is a desert. As it vanishes into the shadows there dies with it the last illusion of those who used to say in Paris: 'When they are coming, we will go to Monte Carlo.'"

"They" are the allies. Those who always thought they'd have Monte Carlo as a fine, fat, comfortable haven from retribution are collaborationist Parisians.

BULGARS' PEACE FEELERS FAIL TO STIR ANY PEACE

Call Nation Greedy for Territory.

BY SAM BREWER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ISTANBUL, Turkey, March 3 [Delayed].—Bulgaria today celebrated her national holiday with an intensified campaign for a new "national unity" movement. The day's highlight was a speech by Premier Dobri Bojilov at Varna.

All reports received here indicate the Bulgarian government is haunted by the twin spectres of a coming Nazi defeat and a revolution in Bulgaria. More than 100 speeches by ministers and deputies, daily articles in the leading newspapers, and the constant reiteration of the radio beg the Bulgars to unite in the defense of the fatherland.

Docho Christov, minister of the interior, let down his guard enough in a speech Feb. 22 to admit three groups are working against the government. These he characterized as first, mercenary elements serving foreign powers; second, youths carried away by foreign propaganda; third, criminal and political evildoers. He estimated all forms of evildoers at 2,000 and said already 1,600 of those were "liquidated." But reliable reports estimate that 20,000 men are active Partisans in Bulgaria.

Peace Feelers Fail.

Reports that the Bulgars are trying peace feelers in Turkey continued to circulate here. There is every reason to believe they have had no encouragement. The Bulgars are greedy for more territory. All refuse to accept the idea that Bulgaria must give up the territory taken from Greece and Jugo-Slavia. Since they work on that basis, it is obvious that none of their unofficial emissaries can get very hopeful answers to any peace feelers.

There is not yet any sign that the government has lost control or really wishes to desert the Germans at the risk of becoming a batle field. They would have the greatest difficulty in withdrawing from the war because the Germans hold them firmly under control, and only a united national uprising would suffice to drive out the Germans.

Air Raids Scare Them.

Bulgaria entered this war to get rich quickly by grabbing her neighbor's territory after the neighbors were beaten by the Germans. The Bulgars did not believe the war could really reach them. The first air raids made them complain that they never harmed America and England, so why should we kill Bulgars?

The Bulgars frequently point out that they have sent no troops to the front. Bulgar occupation of Macedonia and Thrace, however, freed many German troops for service elsewhere.

The Bulgarian policy boils down to efforts to insure themselves against the consequences of a German defeat by putting out peace feelers abroad, at the same time making efforts to hang on to what they have gained by working for Germany.

REDS SEIZE NEW STRONG POINTS ON ESTONIA LINE

Smash Thru Mud to New Gains Near Narva.

LONDON, March 4 (AP).—Moscow announced tonight that soviet troops striking toward Ostrov and the Pskov-Warsaw railroad south of Pskov captured a town three miles east of the rail artery, while Red army troops in the north won several "heavily fortified strongholds" in their fight to widen their Estonian bridgehead below Narva.

The Russian war bulletin, recorded by the soviet monitor, also reported gains in the Ukraine as soviet troops south of the captured iron mine town of Krivoi Rog crossed the Ingulets river and seized seven localities. Among them were towns and rail stations 20 to 25 miles to the southwest.

No other details were announced by the official bulletin, which for the past three days has given unusually brief accounts of the war. Berlin reports, however, indicated a general slackening by both sides on the eastern front because of unseasonable thaws and mud.

Seize 17 Towns.

Indicative of the fight the Germans were prepared to put up to hold Pskov, Moscow said that "the enemy has transformed all populated places situated on the approaches to Pskov into powerful centers of defense and is putting up strong artillery resistance."

Nevertheless, according to the Russian announcement, the Red army troops captured 17 towns and four railway stations in yesterday's fighting, bringing their lines to a point eight miles southeast of Pskov.

Moscow disclosed that the Moscow-Leningrad railroad had been restored, with the first freight train traveling between the two cities. Passenger service to the long-beseiged city soon will begin.

NAZI WAR BULLETIN

The German Saturday war bulletin, broadcast from Berlin and recorded by the Associated Press, said:

"In the Krivoi Rog area [Dnieper bend] many strong soviet attacks failed.

"Between the Berezina river and the Dnieper, and north of Rogachev [White Russia] repeated soviet attacks collapsed with heavy losses for the enemy.

"Southeast of Vitebsk our troops held their positions against repeated soviet attacks supported by tanks and ground attack aircraft.

"Northwest of Nevel and southeast of Pskov the vigor of the enemy attacks abated.

"On the Narva front, however, the soviets continued their stubborn breakthru attempts. Several breaches were eliminated or narrowed by counter-attacks."

Cold February Retards French Vegetable Supply

BERNE, Switzerland, March 4.—A very cold February has had its effect on French food supplies, especially early garden vegetables. Reports from the south said there have been only scanty arrivals of leeks, carrots, and onions. Several score of frogs legs sold like hot cakes, altho very lean and skinny," said one report. "Snails will not be fit to eat for several weeks yet." The latest quotation for beef on the black market is 100 francs [$2.00] a pound. Many Frenchmen do not earn more than 40 francs a day.

REPORTS THEFT OF FLOODLIGHTS.

Theft of an iron standard bearing three floodlights from his used car lot at 83d st. and Jeffery av. was reported to police Friday by Arnold Merbitz, 7539 Blackstone av.

YANKS, BRITONS NOW LIVE AND TRAIN TOGETHER

LONDON, March 4 (AP).—The United States and Britain have begun an unique soldier exchange plan in preparing troops for the invasion. So the allies in the fighting line may better understand each other, British officers and enlisted men are living and training with American units and Americans are assigned to British forces.

The British live in the Americans' barracks and are allowed all privileges, even to the extent of receiving ration cards to buy cigarets, candy, and other things in American canteens.

The soldiers are placed with units comparable to their own and thereby learn each other's methods of doing things. At night the men go together to dances, movies, or pubs. Under the plan, exchange soldiers will be rotated every few weeks. Until now American and British soldiers seldom have mingled, partly because the average doughboy has more money and the Englishman finds his pace too fast.

Anti-Aircraft Blasts Rip Locks Off London Doors

LONDON, March 4 (AP).—London's anti-aircraft guns now fire with such blasts that they knock the locks off the doors of the control rooms, blow the doors open and shake blackout boards down. An official account said these things happened so frequently that the job of keeping the doors closed and the blackout boards up had been assigned to ATS girls.

2 ESCAPE-LINES OPEN TO GERMAN ARMY IN FINLAND

Col. Lanza Doubts Enemy Could Be Cut Off.

[This is the first of two articles analyzing recent war developments in Finland and southeastern Asia.]

BY COL. CONRAD H. LANZA.

[Regular contributor to the Field Artillery Journal and recognized as an authority on military matters.]

Russia's offer of an armistice to Finland, on terms which were communicated to the Finland representative on Feb. 16, have been under discussion by Finland's government and parliament for two full weeks. Finland may not accept the proposition; she may do so later, or she may be forced out of the war. So this is an appropriate time to discuss what influence Finland's withdrawal from the war would have on its general aspect, particularly in regard to the German troops serving in Finland.

Finland, with the aid of German troops at the beginning of the war, conquered a long stretch of territory beyond her east frontier. At the south it reaches Lake Onega, 200 miles away from Finland. At the Arctic ocean the advance east of Petsamo is only some 20 miles.

Hold End of Railroad.

The Finns hold the south end of the railroad from Leningrad to Murmansk. A branch connection farther north connects the Murmansk railroad with another extending south from Archangel. It is over this connection that lend-lease goods landed at Murmansk move.

For some time, the German troops in Finland, excepting air forces and other special arms, have been entirely in the far north.

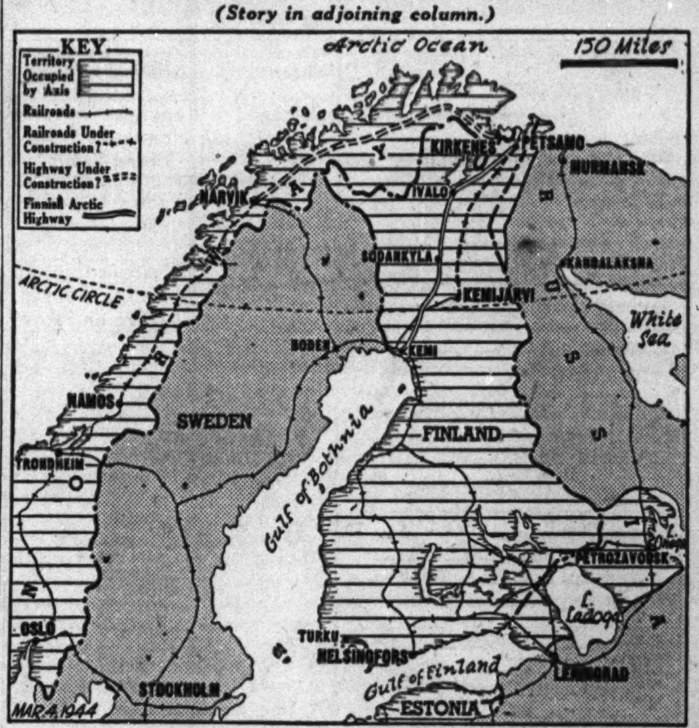
The Russians had a railroad, however, and have always been able to supply enough troops to guard it. Still the Germans never gave up hopes of eventually capturing Murmansk. To supply a force which would be stronger than anything the Russians could assemble, two projects were started to improve communications.

South Norway to Arctic.

The first was started in the summer of 1940. It was the building of a road and a railroad all the way from south Norway to the Arctic ocean. At that time there was no railroad in Norway farther north than Namsas, which was 650 miles south of the Arctic ocean, with what seemed to be impassable mountains and glaciers in between. The Norway roads extended some 125 miles farther north. Beyond, the sea was the only means of communication between south and north Norway.

Nazi Escape Routes from Finland

(Story in adjoining column.)



Reported German railway and highway construction in Norway and Finland, which Col. Conrad H. Lanza indicates might facilitate withdrawal of German troops from Finland in case Finns make peace with Russia.

Beyond Narvik, nly a road seems to have been projected. This was an extension of the original plan, and involved a road from Narvik to the vicinity of Kirkenes, all within Norwegian territory. This is a distance of about 400 miles, over country much less mountainous than that south of Narvik.

The second project designed to improve the movement of supplies to the far north is a joint German and Finnish plan. This involves the extension of Finnish railroads from their former railhead at Kemijarvi northward. This Finnish line extends from the head of the Gulf of Bothnia, from where sea transportation is available to Germany. There is also direct rail communication with the other Finland railroads, and with the Swedish railroads. No information is available as to how far this line has been extended.

Two Lines of Retreat.

If Finland does withdraw from the war, either voluntarily, or thru force, the Germans in the far north of that country have two lines of retreat, one into Norway, and the other to the head of the Gulf of Bothnia.

The Finnish divisions are all to the south of the Germans. Even if they were willing to turn against their present ally, it would be most difficult for them to cut off the Germans. It would be harder for the Russians who are farther away. The chances are in favor of the German divisions in arctic Finland making a get-away when they desire to do so, always dependent upon their starting in time.

Their most probable line of retreat would be to the eastern frontier of Norway. In that location they would be centrally placed to oppose a Russian advance overland, or an amphibious expedition along the north Norway coast.

BERLIN RAIDERS GET A TREAT: 2 SCOTCHES, STEAK

A BOMBER BASE IN ENGLAND, March 4 (AP).—Two rarities in England—double shots of the best Scotch whisky and second helpings of steak—were waiting for Flying Fortress crews tonight as they returned from the first American bomber raid on Berlin.

The double Scotches were handed the flyers as they entered the interrogation room at one base, and the steak with second helpings was waiting for another group returning to this base.

"It was a special meal," said Mess Sgt. H. J. Hakes of Des Moines, Ia. "We used the steak we had planned for Sunday's dinner."

FIND TRUCK BUT BEER IS GONE.

Police disclosed yesterday a trailer truck stolen Friday night from the Atlas Truck company garage at 4719 Chicago av., had been found abandoned after removal of its $1,200 cargo of 600 cases of beer, at Cicero and Wilson avs.

TAKES 6 YANKS TO HAUL CHICAGOAN FROM A FOX HOLE

SOMEWHERE IN NEW GUINEA, March 4 (AP).—Some of the boys are still chuckling over the first air raid Sgt. Michael Ratkovich of Chicago underwent. Ratkovich, who weighs better than 300 pounds, had started a foxhole but did not have it finished when the alarm sounded. Somehow he managed to cram his big frame inside the small hole, but when the all clear sounded he couldn't get out. It took six men several minutes to pull him free.

Ping Pong Downs Hero of 50 Combat Missions

ALGIERS, March 4 (AP).—Second Lt. Francis MacWilliams of Olean, N. Y., had finished 50 combat missions as navigator of a Flying Fortress with nary a scratch, including the heavy Regensburg raid Feb. 25. In Algiers awaiting orders, MacWilliams was playing ping pong with Lt. Robert A. Snyder, Toppenish, Wash. Stretching for one of Snyder's high ones, MacWilliams wrenched his back, was carried out on a stretcher, and is in a hospital.

ARMIES FOR 16 RED REPUBLICS WIN APPROVAL

[By Wireless to the New York Times and The Chicago Tribune.]

MOSCOW, March 4.—The supreme soviet of the Russian soviet federated socialist republics today unanimously approved proposals for the creation of separate republican commissariats of defense and foreign affairs in the 16 republics in the union. The principal address for the constitutional changes was made by A. N. Kosygin, chairman of the council of people's commissars. He predicted that the creation of separate army formations representing the republics within the Red army would strengthen the military force of the soviet union and that greater autonomy for the republics would strengthen the soviet union's international ties.

BELIEVE FINNS MAY SEEK U. S. HELP ON PEACE

Washington Expected to Refuse Arbiter Role.

LONDON, March 4 (AP).—Finland may ask the United States to intervene for mitigation of Russian peace terms, it was learned today, but it is believed such a plea would be rejected "with sympathy."

This view was based on the conviction that the soviet union disclosed its terms to the American state department, as well as the British government, before making them public—even tho the United States is not at war with Finland.

Shies at Arbiter Role.

Russia's action in pressing its demands, with Britain's unofficial but nonetheless firm backing, indicated that it was likely that the United States took the position it was not seeking the role of arbiter.

[The American government "hopes very much that the Finnish government will continue the conversations opened with the soviet government for the termination of hostilities," Acting Secretary of State Stettinius said in Washington Friday, when asked his reaction to reports that Finland seemed opposed to further talks with the Russians.]

Diet to Meet Tuesday.

The Finnish diet is reported preparing to meet Tuesday to discuss the latest developments in connection with the Russian armistice terms. Finnish party leaders are said to be touring the country, sampling public opinion.

A foreign office spokesman in Helsingfors said today that "nothing sensational is expected this week end."

The Helsingfors correspondent of a Stockholm newspaper said earlier in the day that the Finnish government "has received new information" regarding the armistice terms and found a way of reopening the negotiations. The Stockholm Dagens Nyheter said the Finnish parliament had rejected soviet demands for internment of German troops in Finland and restoration of the 1940 boundaries.

QUADS' FATHER WINS HEARTS OF BRITISH VILLAGE

It's Plain, but Makes Him No Villain.

BY GRAHAM MILLER.

[By Wireless to the New York News and The Chicago Tribune.]

HEANOR, Derbyshire, England, March 4.—Staff Sgt. Bill Thompson of the United States army, who, until one died early yesterday, was the father of quadruplets, has won the hearts of the not-so-romantic folk of this village almost as quickly as he won the heart, if not the hand, of pretty Norah Carpenter, currently the most publicized mother of two continents.

Funeral services were held here today for MacDonald, the quad who died Thursday night. Sgt. Thompson was unable to get a furlough to attend the rites.

The most striking thing about Bill's case, which he already has taken up with army authorities in an effort to get a dependents' allowance and with his wife in Pittsburgh, whom he has asked for a divorce, is the popularity of the man who normally is forced into the role of villain in these village seduction cases.

Oddly enough, nobody in this village has a harsh word to say against Bill Thompson. He is well known here. He has been a frequent visitor ever since Norah, discharged from the auxiliary territorial service [British WAC] because of her pregnancy, came home to await the birth of her babies.

Drinks Beer in Pub.

He has drunk tepid British beer with the locals in the Red Lion pub, where Norah used to be a bar maid, and he has been frank about his problem. The locals have known all along he was the father of Norah's expected. It is this frank acceptance of the facts of life and the equally frank determination to stand by Norah that has won him respect here.

And this is no romantic village. It is completely unlike those picturesque thatched roofed projections you see on the movies. There is a long straggling street, drab red brick cottages, the Red Lion pub, and that's all, unless you count the cinema, now aptly but ironically showing "Headline Woman."

Family Poor, But Proud.

The Carpenter family, like most of those who live in Heanor, are unashamedly poor. Their home is the sort of house that slum clearance enthusiasts get excited about. It is damp, the paper peels off the walls in long depressing strips, there is no proper place to keep the coal, and the plumbing isn't too efficient.

But, despite this, there is a rather pathetic pride about the family. Norah's father, straightbacked despite his 67 years, who at the beginning of the week suffered all the shame of a working class parent whose daughter "disgraced him," by now is so bemused with the publicity that he does not know whether to be glad or sorry.

With naive pride, he showed me photographs of his sons in the bedroom where Norah, pale but alert, was lying. Stuck on the background of crests of their regiments were pictures of his dead boys.

Son Fought to Death.

"He went down still firing his gun—could've got away if he'd left it, but wouldn't, not my lad," said Carpenter, pointing at one picture. "He died of wounds as a prisoner of war," with a jab at another picture. "But we'st got another lad now, eh Norah?" he said turning to the bed. "And he's a good un or I don't know a man and a soldier."

So it is that red headed Bill Thompson from Pittsburgh has won more hearts than Norah's in this village.

Praying for a Divorce.

Told that Bill's Catholic wife in Pittsburgh still refuses to give him a divorce, Norah said:

"I'm sorry to hear that. Nothing will ever part us. Bill has told me that if he does not get a divorce, he never will go back to America but will stay with me. We have vowed to give the children the best life possible, and we are praying for a divorce."

Norah said that if a divorce came thru, she and Bill would be married in the Heanor parish church.

Dr. P. H. J. Turton, who brought the quads into the world, today said Madeline had gained four ounces, Maureen, two, and Michael, one. All are in good health, he said, and there is no doubt they will survive.

LIFE OF PETAIN'S EX-AID AT STAKE IN TREASON TRIAL

Vichy Official Defends Himself in Algiers.

Pierre Pucheu.

ALGIERS, March 4 (AP).—Pierre Pucheu, on trial for treason for his acts as minister of the interior in the Vichy government, declared today that Marshal Petain now believes Germany eventually will be defeated and that "the policy of collaboration is dead."

Fighting for his life before a military court after indictment by the French committee of national liberation in its purge of collaborationists, Pucheu dramatically spoke in his own defense at the opening session, declaring that the Vichy government had prevented the Germans from totally occupying France, smashing thru Spain and occupying North Africa before the allies.

Pucheu said he had negotiated with Gen. Henri Giraud and United States Charge D'Affaires S. Pinckney Tuck late in 1942 before the allied landings in North Africa.

Marshal Shuns Scheme.

He asserted that late in that year he was convinced that the allies would have to seize North Africa in order to clear the Mediterranean and establish a base for attack on Hitler's southern bastions. Pucheu said that he interviewed Tuck, seeking to learn the terms whereby the Vichy administration could be accepted as an ally.

"I wanted them [the British and American troops] to come as allies and not as occupying forces," he declared.

Later Pucheu said he sought to have Marshal Petain join in this scheme, but the chief of state dismissed the idea as being childish.

Declaring he was "disillusioned with the marshal," Pucheu said he went to Lyons and contacted Giraud. He said that his "plan was to rally the armistice army [the forces left to France by the 1940 armistice] and other men of good will to assist the allied cleanup."

He said he had a rendezvous with Giraud on Nov. 15, 1942. Meanwhile, the allied landings occurred.

Flees to Spain.

Pucheu said he then fled across the Pyrenees into Spain, where the Spaniards held him in Madrid, and next sent word to Giraud, who obtained his release and arranged for his transportation to Casablanca where he arrived early in 1943.

Describing his relations with Marshal Petain in 1941 and 1942, Pucheu defended both the aged chief of state and Adm. Darlan, the former vice premier who was slain after having aided the allied landing in Africa, but he attacked Pierre Laval, the present chief of government in Vichy.

"Laval had a different conception of our relations with Germany," Pucheu observed.

The former interior chief said that he came to North Africa to join a fighting unit and called upon Giraud to verify this. The general, absent today after receiving official word yesterday of his daughter's death in Germany, is to appear in court later as a defense witness.

The whole position and policy of the Vichy regime were placed on the scales by the prosecution, which accused Pucheu of taking a post in an "illegal government."

Battle Destroys Boy's Home

ALLIES HANDILY REPEL NEW NAZI STABS AT ANZIO

Hold Solidly to Lines at Beachhead.

ALLIED HDQ., Naples, March 4 (AP).—The allies are holding solidly to their beachhead south of Rome and have handily repulsed such attacks as the Germans have been able to launch since they were soundly beaten Tuesday and Wednesday in their all-out attack by five divisions, allied headquarters announced today.

Three small German attacks have been hurled back in the last two days, the allied war bulletin said. Bad weather closed in yesterday to restrict operations in all the Italian battle sectors.

The Mediterranean air force, flying 1,400 sorties, attacked Nazi communications thruout northern Italy and Rome on Friday. Even tho there was no enemy air activity over the beachhead, 11 German planes were destroyed and 10 allied aircraft lost.

Planes Raid Foe.

At dusk Thursday the Germans attacked American positions along the Cisterna-Montello road. They were thrown back by heavy artillery fire and lost three tanks. Around Carroceto the British smashed back two strong Nazi patrols testing their positions. Infiltration attempts in the Moletta river area also were stopped.

[The German war bulletin said that "on the Nettuno beachhead several heights were captured by German raiding parties southwest of Aprilia and southwest of Cisterna," and added that allied counter-attacks "were repulsed in violent fighting."]

Take 3,500 Prisoners.

An allied headquarters spokesman disclosed more than 3,500 prisoners have been taken by the allies since they landed in the Anzio beachhead Jan. 22.

On the main 5th army front continued rains deepened the mud and brought streams to new flood heights. Many mountain parts of the 8th army line were snowbound, but Polish and Canadian patrols were active. Indian forces beat back one small enemy attack.

RESCUE 8 OF 11 ON U. S. BOMBER IN BISCAY BAY

LONDON, March 4 (AP).—Eight members of an 11 man United States Liberator crew have been rescued by British planes after being adrift 20 hours in open dinghies when their bomber was shot down by two German planes, it was disclosed today. Three of the crew died. The survivors, who suffered exposure, have been awarded Purple Hearts.

The Liberator was attacked while on patrol over the Bay of Biscay.

Two radiomen, hurt when the plane crashed, could not be removed before the plane sank. They were Robert C. Erdman, San Marino Cal., and Thomas E. Ryan, Louisville, Ky. Binnie N. Faubion, ordnanceman of Covington, Okla., was badly hurt when the crew got him aboard a dinghy and died during the night. Carleton F. Lillie Jr., ordnanaceman of El paso, Tex., got a bullet hole thru his flying suit without being scratched.

Other members of the crew were Richard C. McDaniel, Houston, Tex.; Robert M. Greene, Stafford Springs, Conn.; William E. Middleton, Rhome, Tex.; Lt. Lawrence M. Peterson, Seattle, Wash.; Ensign Robert W. Lacey, Centerville, Tex., and Robert A. Zabick, Oenaville, Tex.

IDENTIFIES ROBBERY SUSPECT. Joseph Rogers, 38, of 1818 Sedgwick st., reported to police yesterday that four Negroes had robbed him of his watch, ring, and $50 at Pershing road and Dearborn st., and identified Harry Davis, 18, 4433 S. Dearborn st., a Negro, seized by police shortly afterward, as one of them. Davis denied it.

ARGENTINA STILL HELPS THE AXIS, SAYS STETTINIUS

. S. Delays Recognition of Farrell Regime.

Washington, D. C., March 4 (AP).—Argentina still serves as a base for axis espionage and support, Acting Secretary of State Stettinius charged today, and American recognition of Gen. Edelmiro Farrell is being withheld until this situation is cleaned up.

Norman Armour.

Ambassador Norman Armour in Buenos Aires is under instructions to "refrain from entering official relations" with Farrell's regime, which ousted Argentine's President Ramierz on Feb. 25.

Stettinius made these disclosures at a speical press conference. He said he would not go so far as to say that this constituted nonrecognition of the Farrell government because relations never had been started. Thus, he appeared to leave the way open for American action in either direction.

Hits at Espionage Ring.

Stettinius put the issue squarely up to Gen. Farrell by saying there are many things Argentina can do to improve her relations with this country, for instance:

1. Intern axis diplomats, military attaches and other agents who have been at liberty in Argentina, even tho relations with Germany have been broken.

2. Clean up axis espionage rings in Argentina. Stettinius recalled that former President Ramirez himself described, Buenos Aires as a hotbed of international espionage.

3. Stop smuggling of critical war materials which still go to the enemy from Argentina.

4. Control communications which still exist between axis agents in Argentina and their homelands.

Stettinius raised a doubt over the coup which replaced Ramirez with Farrell. He said that after Argentina had broken relations with the axis, Ramirez suddenly abandoned active conduct of affairs "under well known circumstances," and the American government "has reason to believe that groups not in sympathy with the declared Argentine policy of joining in defense of the hemisphere were active in this turn of affairs."

Made Public in Argentina.

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay, March 4 (AP).—After Argentine censorship had held up for several hours the disclosure in that country of the stand taken by the United States toward the regime of Acting President Edelmiro Farrell, authorities tonight authorized publication of the following announcement:

"United States Acting Secretary of State Stettinius said today that Ambassador Norman Armour has been instructed not to enter official relations with the Farrell regime pending further instructions."

Britain Holds Up Recognition.

LONDON, March 4 (AP).—The British ambassador to Argentina is under instructions to refrain from making any move that would even imply recognition of the Farrell regime, it was learned reliably today.

Take Paternity Test

John Langan and Joan, after blood tests to determine paternity of girl.

Washington, D. C., March 4 (AP).—Former Movie Actress Joan Manners and John Langan underwent blood tests today in an effort to prove the paternity of 10 year old Joan Langan, about whose custody the couple has waged a bitter fight. Blood samples were taken from Miss Manners, Langan, and the child by Dr. Oscar B. Hunter, chosen by attorneys in the case. The physician will report his findings to Justice T. Alan Goldsborough in federal District court Monday.

Miss Manners testified this week that Langan was not the child's father. He insisted that he was. Their contest began in California more than five years ago.

ANTI-TOJO JAPS IN CHINA UNITE FOR 'FREE JAPAN'

CHUNGKING, China, March 4 (AP).—Establishment of a "free Japan" movement in the Communist controled territory of North China, apparently composed of a few Japanese prisoners and intellectuals at outs with the Tojo regime in Tokio, was reported today in the New China Daily News, Chungking's Communist newspaper.

The paper said the Japanese held a meeting at Yenan, the "Communist capital" in Shensi province on Jan. 15 and decided to form the Japanese People's Liberation league. The move was believed in Chungking to be similar to the free German committee started in Moscow by the Russians.

YANK PRISONER HAILS RED CROSS IN LETTER HOME

A testimonial of Red Cross service to American prisoners of war, which originated in a prison camp in Germany, was made public yesterday in Elgin's current fund campaign for the mercy organization.

It was written by Tech. Sgt. Wilmer D. Griffith, a member of a United States war plane crew shot down in a raid over Germany Dec. 20, to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. V. Griffith of 272 Orange st., Elgin.

"The Red Cross is treating us wonderfully," Sgt. Griffith wrote. "Don't stand short in giving them money. You have no doubt sweated me out [worried about me] in the last couple of weeks, but you don't have to worry now. The Lord was with our crew when we got it. I shall never forget it. War is hell, just as you always said, dad."

GETS 60 DAYS FOR HITTING WOMAN. Earl Ewing, 33, Negro, of 1609 S. St. Louis av., an ex-convict, who was accused of striking Mrs. Rosalie Yaeger, 51, of the same address, with a bottle, was sentenced to 60 days in the county jail Friday by Judge Joseph H. McGarry in Felony court.

KIMBALL—A Great Name in Music for 87 Years

When Grieg and Dvorak were young students, before Elgar, Sibelius or MacDowell were born, while Tschaikowsky was learning law and had shown no musical talent, the name of KIMBALL became a synonym for the best piano performance. The Kimball tradition for quality has grown hand in hand with the spreading fame of all the great composers of the last century. Kimball pianos have made the music of these masters more widely known than any other piano because more Kimballs have been made and sold than any other.

WOUNDED YANKS TAKEN ABOARD EXCHANGE SHIP

LISBON, Portugal, March 4 (AP).—Wounded American soldiers who arrived in Lisbon Feb. 25 on diplomatic trains from Germany boarded the exchange ship Gripsholm today.

With Col. Robert A. Solborg, United States military attaché in Lisbon, assisting, the wounded men were carried aboard from Portuguese Red Cross ambulances. They looked more cheerful and generally were feeling better after the eight day rest in an emergency hospital.

News men were not allowed to speak with them, but Red Cross and military authorities said "the men have been very well looked after and have been given all possible comfort." All officials and civilians were ordered to embark at 10 a. m. Sunday. Three diplomatic trains bringing 366 North Americans from Germany are due here this afternoon.

Report Holland, Belgium, Luxembourg Plan Pact

LONDON, March 4 (AP).—The Netherlands, Belgium, and Luxembourg are negotiating for close economic coöperation by establishing a post-war customs union of the three countries, Aneta, official Netherlands news agency, said today.

INDUSTRY SEES POST-WAR LULL, THEN BIG BOOM

Hopes for Reláxation of Federal Controls.

that, unless private initiative is released from governmental restraints, distraught unemployed might support communist and fascist elements in Washington, D. C., to impose upon America a totalitarianism which is expected to engulf most of the world after the war.

If the traditional American system of competitive enterprise is given its head, the leaders believe the initial struggle for a satisfactory peace at home can be won. Thereafter will come a boom of postponed civilian purchases.

To sustain prosperity, the industrialists foresee a need to raise the standard of living in America above its pre-war level. The productivity of the country has been swollen during the war. We will have to consume more goods to maintain employment.

For Economy of Plenty.

The business leaders are preparing for such a future, an economy based upon a plenitude and not a scarcity. They are preparing for peace while we are still at war. Unless suppressed by the government, they predict a more bountiful life. The sacrifices of men in uniform will not have been in vain.

The plans of individual industries and the opinions of some of their executives on the post-war outlook will be detailed in subsequent articles.

The conclusive order to cease firing on the foreign fronts will be followed by an order from managements to commence firing on the home fronts. About four and a quarter millions will lose jobs in manufacturing, including two and a half millions in the ship and aircraft industries, according to the post-war division, bureau of labor statistics, United States department of labor.

Jobs for Ex-Soldiers.

These estimates are not disputed by America's industrial leaders. They declared their confidence in the capacity of private enterprise to relocate war workers into peace time jobs and, most important, to provide work for eight or nine million young men who will be doffing their uniforms.

The generals of American industry are planning to win the peace—with new and better and cheaper and more goods, for a higher than pre-war standard of living. They see only one serious obstacle, governmental restraints upon individual initiative. Some of the individual plans and individuals' opinions will be detailed in subsequent articles.

First let's get a better picture of this peace problem which must be solved by private enterprise, liberated from burocracy, if America is to be preserved as a land of the free in a world of totalitarianism.

See Shift to Homes.

Five million men and women have left the state of their 1940 residence for jobs, mostly temporary jobs. The whang of Tennessee mountain vernacular is heard in the crowds changing shifts at an Ohio munitions plant. A Texas drawl is not uncommon at the Portland, Ore., shipyards. Many of those transplanted have uncertain futures. Others are going back home, cash their war bonds and buy a tractor or a filling station.

Other millions, while remaining in their home states, are in fields just as foreign to their pre-war experience. The former automobile salesman, middle aged, is now in a machine shop bossing a crew of women bench workers. A former radio store proprietor now is assembling walkie-talkies. An ex-teacher is manning a welder.

There can't be any freezing of these jobs when the wars are ended. Certainly the eight or nine million young veterans trained in personal competence and confidence won't accept a civilian regimentation. Business leaders plan an economy with opportunities for competition and venture. What burocrats plan may not make any difference as long as it does not interfere with private business.

Foresee Larger Output.

None of the top flight industrialists interviewed in this survey believe that America can safely slide back to its 1940 level of 46 millions employed with a gross national output of goods and services approximating 97 billion dollars. The increased tax burden and the expanded plant investment require a larger output. A larger output is necessary to maintain employment because technological advancements have upped capacity production per man.

The leaders are aiming at a 30 to 45 per cent increase in gross national production of services and goods, compared with 1940. They estimate that this will provide employment for 55 millions. It means richer living.

This total of 55 millions is slightly less than the anticipated total employment on July 1, 1944. On that date we also will have 11.3 millions in the army and navy. A further breakdown of this analysis of adult America in war time lists: 17.2 millions employed in manufacturing; 12 millions engaged in agriculture; 19.5 millions earning wages and salaries other than in manufacturing; 5.3 millions self employed, proprietors, and domestic servants; and 1 million unemployed.

Predict Job Distribution.

The first major shakeup of the civilian population will take place when Germany surrenders, presuming that the Nazis will quit before the Japs are whipped. An analysis, accepted as the best available calculation, lists the following distributions one year after the current war in Europe is ended: 13.9 millions in manufacturing; 12 millions in agriculture; 20 millions in nonmanufacturing jobs; 6 millions self employed, proprietors, and domestic servants; the army and navy cut to 8.3 millions; and the unemployed swollen to 4 millions.

Two years after the defeat of Japan, according to this study, there will be the following distribution: 13 millions in manufacturing; 12 millions in agriculture; 21 millions in nonmanufacturing jobs; 7.5 millions self employed, proprietors and domestic servants; 4.5 unemployed [there were 5.7 millions in 1941]; and an army and navy of 2.5 millions.

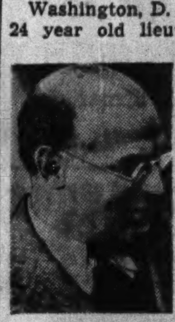
OFFICERS FIGHT TO SAVE ARMY CAREERS OF 4,000

2 Ask House Committee to Bar Discharges.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., March 4.—Two 24 year old lieutenants today appealed to members of the house military affairs committee to save them and approximately 4,000 other young army officers from return to civilian life.



Rep. Sadowski.

Committee members said they were shocked at the story told by the two men, both of whom worked whose names were withheld, have been placed on an inactive status and will soon be discharged honorably unless congressional action forces reconsideration by the army.

Two Branded "Inefficient."

No charges involving moral behavior have been placed against the lieutenants. They are being retired as "inefficient," altho both were selected by their commanding officers from the ranks to take the officers' training courses and both received their commissions with graduating honors.

Rep. Sadowski [D., Mich.,] branded a "stupid and senseless policy, cruel, and unfair," the discharge of healthy young officers for petty offenses not considered worthy of a court martial, at a time when pre-Pearl Harbor fathers in their 30s are being drafted.

"If the army has a surplus of thousands of officers, it should make a public announcement of the fact," Sadowski said.

Training Cost Put at $25,000.

Committee members noted that the estimated cost of training an officer is $25,000 and that the discharge of 4,000 officers would indicate a 100 million dollar waste in training.

One lieutenant's story indicated, in the belief of committee members, that he is being penalized for wounding a colonel's sense of propriety by petitioning for a transfer from his regiment.

"There are more than 4,000 other young officers in the same fix that we are," he told members. "We are willing to take demotion or any punishment except discharge from the army."

The young man, a graduate of Yale university, entered the army two months after Pearl Harbor as a private. After six months of training he was selected for officers' training and received his commission. Six months later he was sent to Alliance, Neb.

"There was a surplus of officers. I decided to have a talk with my colonel with a view to getting transferred to some other regiment where there was a better chance for promotion. I was astonished when he angrily informed me that I would be sent to reclassification center for making such a request.

"A court martial would have been preferable, as we had no chance at the hearing to cross-examine witnesses or bring in testimony to defend ourselves.

General Charges Preferred.

"It was our word against a ranking officer in regard to charges such as 'no interest in enlisted men,' 'reading magazines when he could be doing other duties,' 'going to parade without gloves on,' and general charges of 'laziness and inefficiency.'"

The other lieutenant was assigned as a company commander in the 290th infantry at Fort Underwood, Mo.

He said his troubles began when he ordered a consistent A. W. O. L. offender to wear a placard reading: "This man has disgraced his company."

Friend of the Yanks

[The Friend of the Yanks department will answer questions about the draft and military service, both in the daily columns and by mail, if stamped, self-addressed envelopes are sent with the queries.]

HYDROGRAPHIC OFFICERS.

The navy needs civilians who can qualify as hydrographic officers. Applicants should have a degree in civil engineering and at least two years' experience in one or more of the following fields: hydrographic or geodetic surveying; land and topographic surveying and mapping; city surveys or mapping, preferably with triangulation experience; construction surveys; plotting on maps or charts or working up field notes of survey parties along any of the above lines. In the absence of a degree, applicants should have two years of accredited college work in engineering plus four years of practical experience in one or more of the above mentioned fields. Experience in transit or theodolite work would be particularly desirable, or a knowledge of piloting and navigation. A college degree in geology, forestry, physical geography, or related fields, plus two years' experience in physical oceanographic, geologic, or related types of surveying or mapping, may be substituted for the above requirements. Those selected will be assigned duties in connection with surveying on board a fleet survey vessel or as cartographic officer with amphibious units. Further information and interviews can be obtained from the office of naval officer procurement, Board of Trade building, Chicago.

J. B. writes: "There has been considerable comment of late in regard to putting decorations on the letters to the boys overseas. What restrictions are there in regard to putting red, white, and blue decorations or other insignia on the envelopes or pages of letters?"

ANSWER: There is no objection to decorations of the type you mention insofar as concerns men overseas, but decorations of any kind must not be used on mail to service men held prisoners of war by our enemies.

D. A. writes: "I was discharged from the army Nov. 11, 1943, because of a kidney ailment which the medical officers said made me unfit for further service. I reported to my draft board and received a 2-A classification expiring July 19, 1944, and my draft board said that when it expired I would be drafted again. I would like to know if I have to go thru all that misery again of breaking up my home and going still further into debt just as I'm beginning to get thingse straightened out?"

ANSWER: From all the other statements in your letter it appears your local board has not too carefully explained your liability for further service. You received a certificate of disability discharge—hence your local board must first submit you to a selective service medical advisory board for clearance before you can be sent to the induction station for your preinduction physical. Technically, you should now be classified 1-C and remain classified 1-C until you are found acceptable by the medical advisory board and the army medical officers for further military service. If the army was not able to rehabilitate you before discharge there is little likelihood of your reacceptance now unless the condition you describe has been eliminated or improved sufficiently to make you acceptable.

30 Trainees at De Paul Donate Blood in Chicago

Thirty men from the army specialized training program at De Paul university gave a pint of blood each to the Red Cross blood bank, 5 N. Wabash av., yesterday. A similar number will report to the blood bank next Saturday, and other groups will follow this month. The men, enrolled in the pre-engineering course, voted to become blood donors as a farewell gesture to Chicago before entering active military service.

ARMY MYSTIFIED BY BRITISH SLUR AT U.S. WEAPONS

Previous Praise, Proven Superiority Cited.

BY WALTER TROHAN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., March 4.—British disparagement of American weapons was labeled unfounded today in military and congressional circles.

While military leaders confessed themselves mystified over British statements that American weapons are inferior to those of British design, congressional observers traced the beginning of a new empire policy.

Rep. Shafer [R., Mich.] said he probably would take the floor next week to call upon the state department to secure an official explanation of the British charge. He said he had talked the matter over with a number of colleagues who are indignant over the slur on American arms.

New British Policy?

"Evidently the British are formulating new policy in view of the huge weapon surplus or in the expectation of giving a new reverse twist to lend-lease," Rep. Shafer said.

"British weapons are being turned out in American factories as well as in British plants. When the British were not getting enough weapons of British design, they were eager to get American arms.

"Now that American production is piling up more arms than troops can use, the British evidently want to explain their preference for weapons of their own design by disparaging American weapons.

May Aim at Use by U. S. Troops.

"It may be that they wish to force British arms on American troops so that they can charge British designs off to lend-lease in the case of weapons produced in this country and all costs in the case of British weapons produced abroad."

It is widely acknowledged that American ordnance saved the British in Egypt and that it has contributed heavily to allied campaigns in Russia and elsewhere. The M-3 tank, known as the Gen. Grant, saved the British from defeat at the hands of Marshal Rommel. Later the British said the tank was no good.

At the ordnance bureau, Maj. Gen. Levin H. Campbell has a huge file of the testimonials of the efficiency and performance of American weapons from British and Russian commanders as well as from ranking American officers. These testimonials praise the American weapons as the best of their types.

Tests Prove Superiority.

Tests of American weapons against captured German, Italian, and Japanese weapons have clearly demonstrated the superiority of American types. The war department has confirmation of this from enemy circles in an intercepted Nazi broadcast, which was made for home consumption only to explain the failure of German troops to halt the Italian invasion.

"The enemy's strength lies in his extremely extensive and variegated artillery," said Dr. Fitz Meske of Berlin. "Whole batteries fire on every individual soldier or dispatch rider who shows himself, so that attacks and troop movements can hardly be made at all, except at night.

"Enemy artillery, often supported by heavy naval guns, covers with drum fire of World war dimensions every bit of the ground where the German main line is either found or believed to be. The whole district around Aprilia is covered by a milky smoke of shells. It is a hellish test for the nerves of the grenadiers."

First disparagement of American weapons came from Italy, where the supreme command is now British. It was said in news reports that the enemy has superior artillery, especially in heavier field guns.

It was reported that the American army has nothing comparable to the German 170 mm. gun. The American army has an 8 inch gun, which is equivalent to 200 mm. This weapon throws a more powerful projectile some miles further than the top range of the German 170 mm. gun.

AGENTS TO CHECK GAS COUPONS IN CITY TOMORROW

Agents of the office of price administration will be on duty at some service stations tomorrow to examine gasoline coupons presented by motorists, to see if they are endorsed with the owners' automobile license number and state of registration, in accordance with OPA regulations.

Owners of coupons not so endorsed will be notified to satisfy their local ration boards within 10 days that the regulation has been complied with.

Motorists so notified, who fail to visit their ration boards, will face hearings looking to the revocation of their gasoline rationing books, OPA officials said.

UNION MEMBER CLAUSE HELD NO CURB ON PRESS

Industry Group Hits WLB Decision.

Washington, D. C., March 4 (AP).—The war labor board, divided 8 to 4, today ruled that an order requiring maintenance of union membership among newspaper editorial employes "would not be an abridgement of freedom of the press or a violation of the first amendment to the constitution."

The board directed, however, that union maintenance orders covering editorial employes shall include a special additional clause designed to "further implement and extend" a provision in the constitution of the American Newspaper guild [CIO] guaranteeing that no member may be expelled from the guild or penalized for anything he writes or fails to write.

Members of Board.

The split decision found the four public members voting with the labor members to form the majority. The public members are Chairman William H. Davis, George W. Taylor, Frank P. Graham, and Lloyd J. Garrison. The industry members are J. P. McWilliams, H. B. Horton, J. Holmes Davis, and Walter T. Margetts. The labor members are Van A. Bittner, John Brophy, Robert J. Watt, and James A. Brownlow.

The four industry members wrote a dissenting opinion and the four labor members wrote a concurring opinion sharply attacking the views of the industry group.

Chairman Davis wrote the majority opinion in a case involving the Patriot company, publisher of the Harrisburg [Pa.] Patriot, and the Newspaper Guild. A number of other publishers participated in the argument, heard last October, including the New York Times, Time, Inc., Scripps-Howard, Minneapolis Star Journal, Minneapolis Tribune and Daily Times, and the Washington Evening Star.

"Freedom of Choice."

The WLB's standard union maintenance clause provides that within 15 days after the board's order is issued a union member may withdraw from the union but if he does not withdraw he is bound to maintain his membership for the duration of the contract.

Davis said the clause gives all employes the freedom of choice and upholds fundamental rights to make or refrain from making a contract and that the publisher's freedom to hire or his right to discharge is not abridged.

The dissenting opinion said the majority's arguments "rest on the assumption that each individual employe has a free choice to join the union or not, without coercion from his employer or his fellow employe. As a practical matter, this is seldom the case, because his decision is too frequently controlled by pressure, threat, and ostracism."

In the case of editorial employes of newspapers, the industry group said, the effects may be much more far reaching. They argued that "the editorial writer, or reporter, cannot help but feel certain restraint in his writing if he must maintain good standing with his union or lose his job as a result."

TRUMAN REPORT DEMANDS MORE CIVILIAN GOODS

Hails War Production; Raps Service Policies.

cago, returned to civilian use after 13 months' occupancy.

Stubborn Persistence.

3. The committee found that Navy Secretary Knox's bureau of ships "has, for reasons known only to itself, stubbornly persisted for over five years in clinging to an unseaworthy tank lighter [transport boat] design of its own. The bureau's action has not only caused a waste of time, but has caused the needless expenditure of over seven million dollars for 225 lighters which do not meet the needs of the armed forces."

4. Farmers must be allowed machinery if food production is to be maintained, despite the demands of the united nations' relief and rehabilitation administration for tractors.

Collateral Without Loan.

5. The Aluminum company of Canada was given the use of 25 million dollars in Reconstruction Finance corporation funds at 2 per cent interest and without collateral. Meanwhile the Reynolds Metal company, an American firm, was being charged 4 per cent for an RFC loan secured by a mortgage.

Reviewing American war production for 1941, 1942, and 1943, the report listed these totals:

Guns, tanks, equipment and clothing for 10 million men, 153,061 airplanes, 746 combat naval vessels, 1,899 Liberty ships with a total deadweight [cargo carrying] capacity of 20,450,800 long tons, 702 commercial ships of other types, 1,567,940 military trucks and 28,286 subsidiary naval vessels, including 23,867 landing craft.

In addition, accomplishments include construction of housing and training facilities for 10 million men, airfields and bases thruout the world and 20 billion dollars' worth of plant facilities.

Discussing the resumption of civilian goods production, the report said:

"The actual reconversion [of industry to civilian goods production] is now starting or about to start. At this stage, the materials have not yet been declared to be available, even where they are known to be in free supply. However, increasing supplies of materials and a higher rate of cancelation of [war] contracts makes it evident that materials soon will have to be made available for further civilian production.

"The opposition to increasing the supply of materials available for civilian production is not based upon a belief that the materials cannot be supplied, but rather upon a belief that a surplusage of materials, facilities, and man power would make it easier for the procurement agencies to achieve their programs.

"In short, idle plants and unemployed workmen are considered to be desirable because unemployment would tend to force workmen to leave areas where war contracts are completed or terminated and go to those designated as critical."

Opposes Labor Draft.

The committee commented that the national labor draft demanded by President Roosevelt is unwarranted.

The report said the army's Detroit tool scandal was exposed by a Chicago tool manufacturer who had unfilled orders for $1,250,000 worth of the type of tools that the army scrapped at a loss of $1,684,212.

The bulk of these were cutting tools ordered by the army for the Studebaker corporation of South Bend, Ind., which had contracts for airplane engines.

The army switched contracts so that Studebaker did not need the tools. Eventually Studebaker shipped them to the army at Detroit. Last July, the report said, the WPB wrote the army that since no use for the tools had been found, they should be classed as obsolete and scrapped. WPB said plans for cataloguing and sorting the tools in the army's Detroit warehouse would be a waste of man power.

The "Mosaic" Law.

An army air forces liaison officer approved the letter and wrote his staff chief at the army's Pentagon building here, "You had better write the order declaring it scrap." Relating the story, the report said:

"Without hesitation the staff chief issued an order to scrap the tools. In explanation, the staff chief has informed the committee:

"'When we ask the WPB for advice and they give it to us, we look upon that as Mosaic law and we say we cannot go any higher than that. The army air forces took the required steps under procurement regulation 7 and declared these tools as salvage'."

So the $1,721,136 worth of vitally needed tools were sold as scrap for $36,924.

After the Chicago firm exposed the scandal, the army conducted an investigation and reported absolute confidence in the officer who ordered the sale. But the committee then made an inquiry, which was followed, the report said, by the army's taking action against 10 officers involved in the sale.

Then the army made the purchasers bring the tools back and estimated that 95 per cent of them had been recovered. But, the committee observed, the army hadn't any inventories and "only the purchasers knew what they had hauled away."

Support of Argument.

The committee used the incident to support its position that disposal of surplus commodities should not be left to procurement agencies. The committee insisted that congress designate an agency to take responsibility for surplus commodity sale.

Announcement of the cancelation of the Kaiser-Hughes flying boat contracts recalled the long and bitter fight made by Henry J. Kaiser, west coast shipbuilder, for a chance to build mammoth cargo planes. He was denied the chance, but later a contract was given him and Howard Hughes for three planes.

The contract was actually canceled Feb. 11.

Kaiser had agreed to build the planes of wood after the army and navy protested use of steel for the project. But the WPB recently ordered an engineering inquiry, which found that the wooden construction would be unsatisfactory. The contract then was terminated.

Dealings in Florida.

The army and navy began acquiring hotels and barracks and hospitals early in their training programs, many on leases. The army took 549 hotels and apartment buildings and the navy 52 hotels. These are some of the report's observations about the army's hotel dealings in Florida:

"Despite the excellent response of the hotel owners, the army real estate division and the army air forces took the position that because a few owners had attempted to negotiate with them, the air training program was being thwarted. A high official of the air forces issued a statement indicating that five or six owners were holding up the army by increasing their prices to a point where it was impossible to do business with them.

Overbearing Manner.

"The negotiations were conducted in a manner which was overbearing and inconsistent with fair dealing. The army's representatives told the owners that streets would be blocked off, barring access to their hotels, so that their properties would be worthless if they did not lease to the army. Owners were brought to the army's real estate office, caused to wait for many hours before seeing persons with authority to negotiate and subjected to high pressure sales talks."

The committee's report on the navy's bureau of ships is based upon a 1942 report which was suppressed at the time at Knox's request. The committee emphasized that mistakes mentioned in the 1942 report have largely been corrected altho the bureau did complete 126 lighters of the design found unseaworthy after the report was issued.

The bureau of ships survey centered around lighters built by Andrew J. Higgins, New Orleans ship builder. Higgins designed and built —all in two and one-half days—a tank lighter which the committee found surpassed the lighters the bureau of ships had spent four years designing.

While navy men at sea were clamoring for the Higgins lighter, the committee found, the bureau insisted on building those of its own design. The bureau designed lighters had not been tested with a tank aboard, the committee found, or in rough water. The report commented:

"The committee considers it incredible that the bureau should have proceeded on a program of such magnitude with a design concerning which no data had been accumulated with respect to its performance in rough water or with a tank or equivalent weights aboard."

Demand 30,000 Tractors.

The committee emphasized the necessity for more farm machinery, and the aggravation of the tractor shortage by the demand of UNRRA for tractors to be sent to foreign lands. UNRRA has recently demanded 30,000 tractors.

The difficulty, the committee reported, is not lack of steel, but the war man power commission's refusal to give farm machinery a sufficient man power essentiality rating.

The aluminum situation was given considerable attention by the committee, which said the Aluminum Company of America, or ALCOA, was the only American producer of the metal in 1939. When the war shortage developed, the Reynolds Metal company entered the field.

Not a Subsidiary.

Of subsequent operations, the report said:

"The Aluminum Company of Canada is not a subsidiary of ALCOA, altho it is believed that a small group of individuals own the majority of the stock of both ALCOA and Aluminum, Ltd., the parent of Aluminum Company of Canada. On May 2, 1941, the Aluminum Company of Canada entered into a contract with the Metals Reserve company, a subsidiary of the RFC. It provided for the sale of 170,000 metric tons of aluminum ingot by the Aluminum Company of Canada to Metals Reserve company at the then prevailing price of 17 cents per pound.

"It further provided for a 'down payment' of 25 million dollars to the Aluminum Company of Canada, to be returned with interest at 2 per cent upon the delivery of the aluminum on the estimated monthly schedule extending to Nov. 1, 1944. A second contract, executed July 15, 1941, provided for a loan of 25 million dollars at 3 per cent to the Aluminum Company of Canada by the Export-Import Bank of the United States.

Secured by First Mortgage.

"Under this arrangement the Aluminum Company of Canada in effect received the use of 25 million dollars at 2 per cent interest and without collateral from a subsidiary of the RFC. At the same time Reynolds, the American company which had risked entering an industry dominated by a single producer, was being charged 4 per cent on a loan obtained from the RFC. In addition, the Reynolds loan was secured by a first mortgage on its plants.

"The difference in favor of the Aluminum Company of Canada was emphasized further by the fact that in August, 1941, only a few weeks after the 17 cent per pound contract with the Aluminum Company of Canada, the price of virgin aluminum in the United States was reduced from 17 to 15 cents."

Other members of the Truman committee are Senators Connally [Tex.], Mead [N. Y.], Wallgren [Wash.], Hatch [N. M.], and Kilgore [W. Va.], Democrats, and Brewster [Me.], Burton [O.], Ball [Minn.] and Ferguson [Mich.], Republicans.

INDUSTRIAL PROGRAM DRAFTED TO TRAIN VETERANS MENTALLY

Special workshops are being set up by the Goodwill Industries, 2425 Wallace st., as part of a rehabilitation program for returning war veterans who are mentally and emotionally upset, Walter C. Loague, executive director, announced yesterday. An additional 10,000 square feet of space has been rented for these shops, designed to care for the men's transition period.

The program will provide an observation service to test the possibilities of each veteran and provide psychiatric supervision and sheltered employment, Loague said. Two registered occupational therapists will work with individual mental cases. Loague explained the readjustment program would make it unnecessary in many cases to send veterans to a hospital.

An advisory committee of psychiatrists, Dr. Conrad Sommer, chief medical officer of the state of Illinois; Dr. Agnes A. Sharp, and Dr. Frieda B. Heisler, have been appointed, Loague said.

All real progress is based on research. With Reo, research is more than a laboratory word. Since 1904, three generations of Reo workers and Reo owners have contributed the valuable every-day lessons of experience. And out of this research in factory and field have come many important and enduring truck features pioneered by Reo, plus an outstanding quality which has been proved in the laboratory of war.

Slugging it out in the quagmires of the battlefield, Reo consistently passes the most brutal transportation tests. Consistently, too, Reo is stepping up production to meet the demand of the armed forces for trucks, special transport units, intricate ordnance assemblies, and other war equipment.

Out of the Reo test tube in the white heat of war comes assurance to truck buyers that in the future, as in the past, the name Reo will stand for the most advanced truck engineering.

LAWYER NAMED TO TAKE M'NARY PLACE IN SENATE

Oregon Governor Says He Won't Seek Seat.

Salem, Ore., March 4 [Special].—Gov. Earl Snell today named Guy Cordon, 53, attorney and former state commander of the American Legion, to the senate vacancy caused by the death of Charles L. McNary, the senate minority leader.

The governor accompanied the appointment with a statement that he himself would not be a candidate for election for the four years of McNary's unexpired term. A primary will be held May 19 and the election on Nov. 7. Cordon will serve under the appointment until November.

The governor's action came as a surprise. It had been reported that he aspired to the senate.

Accepts Appointment.

Cordon, who is in Washington on legal business, announced he would accept the appointment for the interim but has not had time to decide whether he will become a candidate in the May 19 primary. He said over the long distance telephone that "in spite of what Gov. Snell has said, the people of Oregon should insist that he become a candidate for the senate."

Cordon is known as a sharp critic of the Roosevelt administration, but has not been active in Republican politics. He has been serving Gov. Snell as legal adviser and, like Snell, has remained aloof from the state party controversy caused by the efforts of Ralph Cake, Oregon's Republican national committeeman, to deliver the Oregon national convention delegation to Wendell Willkie.

After Cordon's appointment was announced Charles A. Sprague, former Republican governor, who was defeated after one term by Snell in 1942, said, "There is a strong possibility that I will be a candidate for the United States senate to succeed McNary."

Ally of Willkie.

Sprague is an ally of Cake in the Willkie effort and a candidate for convention delegate as a Willkie man.

Cordon was a close friend of Sen. McNary and is well known in Washington as an expert in public land legislation. He has worked with the Oregon delegation in congress since 1926 on public land matters and represents the Interstate Association of Public Land Counties, comprising 11 western states.

He was born in Texas and came to Oregon as a child.

F. D. R. ENDANGERS ARMY'S RIGHT TO VOTE—BRICKER

Chapel Hill, N. C., March 4 (AP).—Gov. John W. Bricker of Ohio, candidate for the Republican Presidential nomination, said here tonight that "the President himself has jeopardized the opportunity of the soldier to vote in the 1944 elections."

In an address before the Carolina Political union, nonpartisan organization at the University of North Carolina, he said that too often federal judges in this administration "have been appointed not because of their legal ability but because of their political adherence to New Deal principles.

"Nowhere has the principle been more vividly brought before our people than in the attempt of the President to jam thru congress his soldiers' vote bill. His unwillingness to counsel with or accept the judgment of congress led him blindly to charge congress with fraud because of their insistence upon constitutional rights of the states to conduct the elections."

Willkie Shuns Ohio Vote Showdown with Bricker

Cleveland, O., March 4 (AP).—Wendell L. Willkie, candidate for the Republican presidential nomination, will not enter Ohio to contest with Gov. John W. Bricker for Republican national convention delegates, Willkie supporters announced today. Robert A. Weaver, Cleveland industrialist supporting Willkie, announced Willkie had made known his decision by telephone from New York.

ARRESTED IN GAS COUPON THEFT, 3 PLEAD INNOCENT

Three Chicago men charged with illegal possession of 1,984 B and C gasoline ration coupons believed to have been stolen from a Dubuque [Ia.] ration board, pleaded not guilty yesterday before United States Commissioner Edwin K. Walker.

They are Charles Berkowitz, 30, of 3035 Franklin blvd., a dress cutter; Norton Polsky, 23, of 1865 S. Springfield av., a taxicab chauffeur, and Harry Sherman, 29, of 3323 W. 15th st., a tavern employe.

In addition to coupons found in their possession Thursday when they were seized by police at Central Park and Armitage avs., office of price administration investigators asserted the three had sold enough for 3,000 gallons.

GYPSIES TREAD THE BOARDS IN THEATER OF AIR

Gypsy figures of the once peaceful Hungarian countryside trod the boards of the W-G-N studio last night as the Chicago Theater of the Air presented Marion Claire in the title role of Emmerich Kalman's "The Countess Maritza."

Co-starring with Miss Claire in the operetta was Bruce Foote in the dashing role of Bela Torek. Ruth Slater sang the part of Manya, and Henry Weber conducted the W-G-N orchestra and chorus. In the dramatic cast were Laurette Fillbrandt, Olan Soule, Eloise Kummer, Cliff Soubier, Norman Gottschalk, and Dock Good. John Holbrook was the announcer of the coast-to-coast broadcast over the Mutual network, W-G-N, and WGNB.

"My own
convinced me"

"Long ago, when I built my house, the plumber told me that Chicago Faucets give lifetime service. I discounted it heavily as over-enthusiastic sales talk; but I had confidence in him, so I had him install them. That was years before the war, and today those Chicago Faucets are as serviceable as when new. I'm convinced now that they really do give lifetime service."

F. D. R., IN GILDED CHAIR, PRAYS ON ANNIVERSARY

Royalty Joins in Service at White House.

Washington, D. C., March 4 [Special].—Flanked by royalty and in the presence of Supreme court justices, cabinet members, and heads of the army and navy, President Roosevelt sat in a gilt chair in the White House's East room today during special religious ceremonies commemorating the 11th anniversary of his inauguration.

This is the second consecutive year that services honoring the start of the Roosevelt administration have been held in the White House. An annual event since the President came to power, they previously took place in St. John's Episcopal church.

Episcopal services were conducted before an improvised altar set up against a background of the historic room's crimson, floor-length drapes. The glittering uniforms of distinguished guests were reflected in the room's huge, gilt framed mirrors, and added color was provided by a vested mixed choir from St. John's.

Asks Heavenly Guidance.

Rain and sleet, traditional in Washington on March 4 since the founding fathers selected that date as inauguration day, pelted against the East room windows as the Rev. Endicott Peabody, former headmaster of Groton school where the President was a pupil, led in a prayer for heavenly guidance for "Thy servant, Franklin."

Several members of the President's family sat with him in the front row. They were Mrs. Roosevelt, Mrs. John Boettiger, a daughter, and her son, John; Frederic A. Delano, an uncle, and Miss Margaret Suckley, a cousin. Nearby were Crown Princess Martha and Crown Prince Olaf of Norway and their three children, Princesses Ragnhild and Astrid, and Prince Harald.

Gen. Marshall, army chief of staff, and Adm. King, chief of naval operations, were among the high military officers present. Virtually the entire cabinet, Vice President and Mrs. Wallace, Democratic leaders in congress, heads of non-cabinet departments, and department officials of secondary rank attended.

Sen. Barkley Absent.

There was one conspicuous absence—Sen. Barkley, the senate majority leader, who broke with the President last week over the tax bill veto. Asked about "Dear Alben," the President said he understood Barkley was ill.

FARMER KILLED WHEN CAR IS HIT BY TWO TRAINS

Emmett Hon, 45, who lived on a farm near Joliet, was killed yesterday in a freak accident in which his automobile was struck by two trains. The car was struck first and demolished by a northbound Rock Island train, which carried the wreckage 300 feet along the track, then hurled it onto parallel tracks where it was struck by a southbound train and carried 300 feet back.

James Anton, 29, a machinist in a Harvey war plant, was killed on his way to work when his automobile was struck by a Chicago bound Rock Island railroad train at 147th st. and Hamlin av., Oak Forest. Anton lived on route 2, Tinley Park.

Frank Piasecki, 39, of 4232 Iowa st., died in St. Anne's hospital after he had been found lying in front of 4105 Augusta blvd., apparently the victim of a hit and run motorist. Piasecki, a machinist, leaves his widow, Shirley, 34, and two children.

There were 5,239 traffic accidents, resulting in 60 deaths and injury to 1,727 persons, on Chicago park district streets during 1943, Robert J. Dunham, president of the board, announced. Of the 60 persons killed, 50 were pedestrians and 31 of them lost their lives because of disregard of safe walking practices, his report stated.

FIND 2 TOY GUNS AFTER SLAYING OF EX-CONVICT

Police delving into the activities of Sam Gervase, 39, an ex-convict who was slain on Thursday night in his refrigerator repair shop at 609 Division st., were puzzled yesterday over two "toy" guns found in the shop on Friday.

The guns, which police said resemble real weapons so closely that experienced policemen cannot tell at first glance that they are dummies, were found in a refrigerator in the shop where Gervase's body was found. Police said the weapons apparently were handmade.

An inquest into the death yesterday was continued until April 4 to allow police more time for investigation. Neither Gervase's widow, Marie, 28, nor his brother, James, of 1508 N. Kedzie av., was able to help police by supplying a motive for the slaying. The slain man lived at 3339 Pierce st.

STEAL $1,371 MEAT, CHEESE.

Eighty-seven cases of cheese and eight cases of luncheon meat, all valued at $1,371, were stolen Thursday night from Mario Fabbri's store at 945 N. Wells st., by thieves who broke a lock on a basement door, the owner told police yesterday.

WAY TO DEFEAT F. D. R. OUTLINED BY SOUTHERNER

Washington, D. C., March 4 (AP).—On the 11th anniversary of President's first inauguration, Sen. Smith [D., S. C.], today proposed that anti-administration Democrats work together to name uninstructed members to the electoral college and "get a real honest-to-God Constitution-loving Democrat in the White House."

"We ought to have a man in there who will not only look after the welfare of the nation but who will take care of the sovereignty of the states and above all the sovereignty of the individual," Smith said.

The veteran South Carolina senator said voters in the south are not going to go Republican this year, but he contended there is no reason why they have to instruct their electors to support Mr. Roosevelt, should he become the Democratic nominee.

Could Deadlock Choice.

"Suppose the Democrats in states representing about 300 electoral votes feel the same way about it," he said. "It only takes 266 electoral votes to name the next President."

Even if that many anti-Roosevelt Democrats could not be found, Smith argued, enough uninstructed electoral college members could be named to keep either regular candidate from getting a clear majority, thus throwing the election into the house of representatives, where each state would have one vote only in selection of the chief executive.

Predicts 3d Party, If——

New York, March 4 [Special].—A prediction that a third party candidate will be entered in the field by his organization if President Roosevelt is nominated for a fourth term, was voiced today by Harry H. Woodring, former secretary of war and chairman of the newly organized American Democratic National committee, an anti-New Deal group.

At the same time he ruled out the possibility of a coalition with the Republican party.

Thirty to 40 per cent of the Democratic party voters, Woodring said, are against a fourth term "and there is another 10 per cent who are giving lip service."

100 WOMAN'S CLUB OFFICERS TO EXPAND HOME FRONT SALVAGE

More than 100 officers of woman's clubs from all parts of Illinois will attend a luncheon tomorrow in the Merchants' club of the Merchandise Mart to develop plans for extending the paper salvage and conservation campaign. Mrs. Anne V. Zinser, director of women's activities in Illinois for the war production board, will preside.

Among the speakers will be Lt. Gov. Cross, John R. Robinson of the Chicago Newspaper Publishers' association, and Miss Helen Blankenhorn, chief of the women's unit, WPB, in Washington, D. C. Marine Sgt. Edward M. Green, who has been invalided home, will tell how salvaged materials are needed on the fighting fronts.

The quantities of waste paper, fats, scrap metal, and tin cans needed from each housewife who pledges to contribute 10 pounds of salvage a week will be displayed. This exhibit will be arranged by Chicago newspapers.

OUR NAVY, DO WE KEEP OR SINK IT?

One of our admirals recently observed that by the end of the war the American navy would be greater than all others combined.

The United States will be the great sea power, the great sea and air power with new air and sea bases in both the Atlantic and Pacific. Napoleon thought that if the American Republic were allowed to grow—he used his foresight as one reason for the sale of Louisiana—the United States would do what no European nation could be expected to do. It would supplant the British in control of the sea. The idea of the then first consul will have come to pass by strange ways and for strange purposes—to keep the Germans out of England and drive the Japs out of Singapore. For whatever causes, we'll have dominating sea power, the sea power of planes, carriers, capital ships, and all their complements and widely distributed bases. What shall we do with this overpowering navy? Keep it, sink it, or internationalize it?

It is worth remembering that the most influential persons in the war party before Pearl Harbor were either pacifists or secondary Americans, expatriates in thought. The pacifists justified the war as one for a lasting peace. The alien minded Americans justified it as a war to save America's first line of defense, which they said was the British fleet. Both classes will oppose the retention of a powerful independent American military establishment on land or sea.

There is no place for a self-sufficient United States in any peace plan which has been discussed by our official peace planners. It must be assumed, therefore, that the American navy as it comes out of the war will be regarded by such people as a danger to a new world order, to the peace in which it is to be created, and to the methods which are to preserve the order and the peace. This doctrine, formulated and declared here, will find echoes everywhere abroad.

Since the Dutch wars of the English commonwealth under Cromwell control of the sea has been the paramount policy of the British empire. The formula required a preponderance which would be safe not only against any single opponent but against any probable combination of powers. We encountered the imperativeness of that formula after the other war when the completion of our building program and the finishing of ships launched or on the ways would have made us the first sea power.

The British approached the difficult problem indirectly. We were on very bad terms with Japan, being held responsible for the omission of a racial equality declaration in the covenant of the league of nations. Mr. Hughes of Australia said he would raise our west coast in revolt if Mr. Wilson made any concession. We had provoked the Nips by objecting to their proceedings in Shantung. We had been unwilling that they should be given the Pacific islands, where we are now fighting them.

The Japs were angry and the situation was serious enough to warrant some fear of war. In that situation the British imperial conference decided to renew the defensive and offensive alliance with Japan. Our government then made its own choice. To cancel the alliance it agreed to scrap the ships which would have made the United States the dominant sea power.

This time the United States undoubtedly will emerge from war as the greatest sea power the world has ever known. Our navy will then present the test of conflicting internal opinions. In what happens to it we may read the future. It will be the great, shining, and costly target for the attack on our independence of action.

What are the plans of our peacemakers? They have not yet suggested anything which would tolerate the continued possession of the ships by the people who built them. The influence of the internationalists, federationists, and pacifists is for disarmament here and for the creation of an international military force. It will be said that no international force would be worth its maintenance, at least outside Europe, if sea power remained concentrated in the United States. Certainly no such force would be able to impose the dictates of a super-state on an unwilling America.

The internationalists may propose one of several procedures: that part of the fleet be put into an international pool, that a large part of it be put out of commission and allowed to become ineffective, or that a large part of it be sunk.

Hundreds of thousands of American boys will have served their country afloat in this greatest of all navies. In it will be the ships which stopped the modern attempt of Asiatics to overrun the west. The battles will be greater than Lepanto where the Turks failed. Public sentiment will not readily grant permission to destroy or disperse this magnificent sea defense of the American Republic. It will have proved how the peace and security of this country can be preserved.

If the fleet is sunk our assured independence goes down with it.

REPUBLICAN STRATEGY.

Even at this early date it is apparent that the Republican party, if it has wise leadership and continues to represent American principles and the welfare of the American people, can elect a President and a congress and assume control of the federal government in November. The New Dealers know this. They know that the Republicans have elected 26 governors, have just short of a majority in the house, and have been winning most of the by-elections.

What success the Republicans make of these advantages will depend on their leaders. Those leaders must insist that Republicans shall be Republican. This is not a time when strength can be gained thru conciliation. The Republican party is not going to get any internationalist or New Deal votes, and if it seeks them thru a compromise of its principles will only alienate the loyal Americans who now support it.

If the party remains Republican, inviolate and uncompromised by Roosevelt stooges, it will win. If the party seeks to be at once nationalist and internationalist, New Deal and anti-New Deal, it will only succeed in keeping from the polls a great many disgusted citizens who won't vote for Mr. Roosevelt and won't vote for a party that lacks the courage to express its forthright opposition to his policies.

THE MYSTERY OF D-D-T.

Largely thru the initiative of trade publications the public is beginning to learn a little about a new insect killer called D-D-T. This is short for its chemical name, dichloro-diphenyl-trichlorethane.

D-D-T gives every evidence of being, in its own field, as miraculous a substance as the sulfa drugs or penicillin. It is harmless to humans and warmblooded animals, yet fatal to a wide variety of insects when used in fantastically dilute quantities. Clothing treated with it is still louseproof after five or six launderings and the chemical will kill flies a month or more after it has been sprayed on stable walls.

It has been one of the principal agents used in protecting the civilian population of occupied Italy against spread of typhus, which is borne by lice. It is used in "health bombs," a type of disseminator issued in large quantities to troops in Africa and the Pacific to protect their quarters and camps against insects.

The army, after an unfortunate experience with pyrethrum powder, which it bought in large quantities as a delousing agent, only to run into the well known medical fact that about one person in 30 is violently allergic to this substance, has now concentrated on D-D-T. At present the army is taking the whole production, which is large.

Commercial insecticide manufacturers and users do not quarrel, naturally, with this army priority, but they are more than a little disgruntled at suppression of any discussion of its uses. At a scientific meeting a few months ago in Philadelphia the department of agriculture, asserting that it was acting at the request of the war department, caused all the papers on D-D-T to be suppressed.

The patents on D-D-T are held by a Swiss company. Swiss industry is notoriously subject to German influence and, moreover, D-D-T was patented in Germany in 1939 before patents were obtained in either Great Britain or the United States. Some of the scanty information that American technical journals have printed on its uses, such as the protection of cow stables against flies, was translated from German publications. Any such information that the Germans have the Japanese are sure to get, as well.

Apparently the only people who are being kept in the dark by the suppression of information are the citizens of the United States. D-D-T is expected to be as useful in peace time as in war. If it fulfills present expectations it may displace the poisonous arsenates and perhaps other important insecticides, such as rotenone. The secrecy thrown about it, and the failure to provide modest quantities for experimental use by insecticide manufacturers and commercial fruit and vegetable growers, is a serious disservice to American agriculture.

HOW THE COMMUNISTS PAY OFF.

President Roosevelt has announced that a third of the captured Italian fleet will be awarded to Russia. This is another indication of his eagerness to curry favor with the Communists for reasons which were disclosed once again in the recent by-election in New York City. Mr. Roosevelt's candidate won, but only because of the support given by the American Labor party. The pinko New Republic, which is expert in such matters, has said quite frankly that the Communists are dominant in the A. L. P.

It was the A. L. P. and the Communists who gave Mr. Roosevelt New York's 47 electoral votes in 1940. Wendell Willkie, running on the Republican ticket in that election, received 3,027,478 votes in New York. Mr. Roosevelt, the Democrat, got 2,834,500. Mr. Roosevelt, A. L. P. candidate, got 417,418 votes, the margin he needed to win.

This same thing happened the other day when James H. Torrens defeated former Congressman William S. Bennett in New York City's special congressional election by the narrow margin of 1,531 votes. Bennett, the Republican, got 10,176 votes. Torrens got 8,481 votes as a Democrat and 3,226 votes as the A. L. P. candidate. The combination gave him his slim majority.

This is the same district that returned a New Deal candidate by a 29,792 vote majority in 1942 and an 80,570 vote majority in 1936. It will take a good deal more than the Communist balance to put New York state in Mr. Roosevelt's column this November.

TRIBUTE TO MacARTHUR

[Following is the address delivered last night by Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of THE TRIBUNE, on the Chicago Theater of the Air, over W-G-N, WGNB, and the Mutual Broadcasting system.]

BY COL. ROBERT R. McCORMICK.

I hold in my hand a Japanese rifle captured in the Pacific. I have never seen one before and I do not suppose many of you have. I would like to tell you about it.

The bayonet looks to me somewhat smaller than the one we had in the last war, but it weighs a pound, and that, as I recall, is the weight of our old bayonet. You can see by the woodwork that the gun has received hard treatment, but that is not reflected in the barrel, which is excellent, nor in the sight, which is a splendid instrument, and, like all other fool army rifles, is sighted to shoot 25 hundred yards. Five hundred yards is about as far as you can see an individual on a clear day when nothing intervenes.

The idea of long range shooting really comes from the Boer war, where the Boers were excellent shots in a treeless country and the English infantry was maneuvering much as it did at Bunker hill.

If you will look around either in the city or the country, there are very few places where you can see more than two or three hundred yards.

I have shot every kind of game on this continent, excepting buffalo, and only once did I shoot anything beyond the point-blank range of my rifle. That was up in New Brunswick. With my glasses I saw a deer across the lake. I used all of the conventional ways of estimating distance, seeing how big the trees were compared with the size they were with me—there are a number of ways of estimating it—and then I wound up by guessing the distance, set my sights, aimed carefully across a log and saw my bullet drop in the lake. I thought the deer might not have gone very far, walked around the lake, found my deer quite dead. I had hit him on the bounce.

I would not say that these gentlemen who shoot big game at great ranges are not telling the truth. I am just telling you my experience.

This gun has an excellent firing mechanism. It has stood up all thru this campaign, and it is as good as new. We call it a carbine. There is wood up to nearly the end of the gun to keep the soldier from burning his hand when the barrel becomes hot. It is the best balanced military rifle I have ever held in my hand. It is obvious from this gun that the Japanese have developed the art of sharpshooting, now called sniping, to a great extent. It is the most shootable army rifle I have ever held in my hands, but, thank God, it has two serious faults!

One, it is a bolt action rifle. Armies took up bolt action rifles for no other reason than that the Germans originated them 50 to 60 years ago when the German prestige was very high, altho American sporting rifles of other types were much better than the bolt action.

It is 40 years since the automatic rifle came into use in this country, but, for 30 of those years, the army would have none of it. Finally, 10 years ago, it began studying automatic rifles. Fortunately, Gen. MacArthur was chief of staff at that time. The proponents of the weapon wanted to make a smaller bullet, bringing it down to .25 caliber. Gen. MacArthur, who had been hit by several .30 caliber bullets and not badly hurt, said it would be almost a pleasure to be hit by a smaller one.

This Japanese rifle shoots a .275 caliber, much less damaging than our .30 caliber bullet and infinitely less damaging than our .45 caliber bullet fired out of a Thompson submachine gun.

Ever since anybody's day—David's, perhaps—the gangster has been ahead of the regular army men in weapons. I dare say, if the Chicago gangsters in the famous massacre on the north side had not drawn dramatic attention to the Thompson submachine gun, we would not have had it. That gun shoots a .45 caliber bullet and when a man is hit by that bullet he is thru.

We have that gun; we have what they call the GM1 gun, the automatic .30 caliber rifle, and then we have the carbine. We have three types of automatic hand weapons and the Japanese, thank God, have not any.

An American Infantryman is armed as well as any three Japanese. We owe to Gen. MacArthur the fact that our automatic weapon has not been made almost worthless. We owe to him also his extraordinary skill as a soldier. I conform to the common belief that war is a young man's game and generals should be young. I lived up to that when on my 50th birthday I resigned my commission as colonel to make room for a younger man, but the fact remains that the most outstanding man on our side of the war is Gen. MacArthur.

He is 64 years old, and far away from home. With small means he has achieved as much results with small losses as the other leaders in the Pacific, much nearer their bases, have achieved with much greater means and much greater losses.

Time does not remain for me to speak of the heroism of our Americans fighting at the Anzio beachhead. Half surrounded and with the enemy looking down upon them, they are fighting out their great courage as Americans.

Will you please stand one second with me in honor of them?

THEY'VE GONE UP AND UP.

While the talk continues about much higher taxes, it is interesting to note the amounts being collected now and in early prospect. In the demands for more, little or nothing is said about the enormous increases of recent years thru the enactment of one unprecedented tax bill after another.

A reasonably balanced picture on this score is provided by reports of the bureau of internal revenue. These show collections in the last fiscal year amounting to a total of nearly 32 billion dollars, almost double the 16,774 million dollars for the previous year. But the 1942 tax collections were more than double those for 1941, and nearly three times those for 1940. Individual income tax collections last year were approximately three times those for 1942, while corporate income taxes moved up from 3,933 million to 5,153 million dollars and excess profits taxes mounted from 3,049 million to 7,090 million dollars.

These figures fall far short of the complete story as federal taxation now is shaping up. For the total revenue, including that from the tax bill which the President disapproves, is estimated at 43½ billion or 11⅛ billion dollars more than that for the last year.

These vastly increased taxes over a short period of years and also lower war costs than had been expected explain the reluctance of congress to add 8 billions or more to the tax load at this time. How this could be done without wrecking individual incomes and industries is still to be shown.

PART OWNER.

[Eljer News, Ford City, Pa.]

An Englishman and an American were presented to the potentate of one of the eastern countries. On looking over the Englishman's passport, the dusky monarch said: "I see, sir, that you are a British subject?"

Englishman [twirling his mustache, and with pride]: "I am, sir!"

Monarch [looking at the American]: "And you, sir, are a subject of the United States?"

American [gazing at the monarch in amazement]: "Subject, my eye! I own a part of the United States."

We are not subjects of our country— we run it. We are not the property of our government—we own it.

EVERY SORE THROAT DEMANDS PROMPT CARE.

ONE of our important signs of trouble—an acute sore throat—should be heeded always. It may be that the symptom will pass quickly if resistance is high. More often than not, however—particularly with children—acute tonsilitis is in prospect. Numerous organisms may be responsible and, whatever the cause, the disorder requires prompt and skilled management.

Every now and then the manifestation will be the forerunner of some malady such as scarlet fever. But if the mucous surfaces appear red and hot, the tonsils puffy with grayish or whitish spots over the mouths of the crypts, we may anticipate an illness of at least a few days.

Unfortunately one attack predisposes to another and the lymph tissues [of which these glands are composed], together with their deep channels, offer excellent culture beds for germs. Of course, we hope that the invading organisms are not virulent and that the ailment will pass quickly. On the other hand, we must be ready for a sharp attack. The first thing to do is to make certain that diphtheria is not present and the careful physician will take a culture to rule out the presence of the "choker."

As a rule tonsilitis is ushered in with considerable prostration. The temperature is up and thirst and pains in the legs and back will be mentioned. There is difficulty in swallowing because, as the little one remarks, "it hurts." Every movement of the muscles of the pharynx will radiate soreness to the ears and sometimes to the back of the head. Within a few hours, or by the next day, swelling will be followed by voice changes. Utterances will be thick and muffled. The outlet to the Eustachian tube may be closed hence slight deafness will be experienced.

We cannot overemphasize the suffering of the patient. Breathing is harsh, sleep is fitful, and nourishment will be refused because a single mouthful may be accompanied by distress. If the condition persists for more than two or three days, the glands in the neck region will enlarge, especially those near the angle of the jaw.

Treatment is aimed at preventing the absorption of toxins and bacteria. We must stop the journey of the microbes to the heart, the kidneys, and other vital regions, including the joints. Among our most effective remedies are the salicylates and the sulfa drugs. Adequate doses may be administered, combined with alkalis. Plenty of fluids may be given and the victim must be encouraged to take liquids despite discomfort. If all is going well, perhaps the sulfonamides will not be needed but no one should hesitate to resort to one of these compounds if the infection is progressing.

The application of hot water to the inflamed areas offers relief. An irrigating can may be filled with salt solution and, with the patient's head hanging over the side of the bed, the stream may be directed against the back of the throat. This is allowed to flow outward via the open mouth. If a quart or more can be used at each session without fatigue, the sufferer will find that he can swallow more easily for some time thereafter. Hoards of surface organisms and mucous accumulations will be washed away. This has the effect of reducing toxemia. Not infrequently, gargles containing sodium salicylate or aspirin will bring comfort.

We dare not neglect a sore throat, no matter how mild. It may be the forerunner of acute rheumatic fever or the formation of pus within the middle ear. The reason that certain individuals are more susceptible is because they have allowed reserve to drop. In other words, the tissues of their throats displayed the welcome sign to noxious germs.

MOVE ABOUT.

M. R. writes: I was in an auto accident and received 15 fractures. I suffer with pains in these regions, especially when the weather changes. Do you think a warmer climate will help?

REPLY.

It may. On the other hand, activity is the best aid to rehabilitation. Using the parts even at the expense of some discomfort will assist return to normal health. If there is a tendency to arthritis [a constitutional malady], a less changeable climate is advised.

WHITEHEADS.

Mrs. F. writes: What causes whiteheads?

REPLY.

Much of the body is covered with a fine soft down. This is called lanugo. When something goes wrong with one of these follicles, a whitehead [milium] forms. It may require puncture, whereupon a tiny, hard ball will be exuded. This differs from a blackhead, which is a plug of dirt and sebaceous material in a skin duct.

MAN LIKES DOGS.

G. W. H. writes: I am 80 years old and all alone in the world except for my three dogs. I like to have these pets sleep at the foot of my bed at night. Is this harmful?

REPLY.

Certainly not in your case. The companionship of the animals is far more important than any possible sanitary disadvantages. You are lonely and they would be, too.

FATHER HONEYWINKLE'S NEW CHURCH.

Vincennes, Ind., Feb. 29.—A recent contributor lauds the theaters of this city for having provided "crying rooms" in order that mothers of small children may witness the movies and yet not disturb other patrons.

In Olney, Ill., 30 miles west of Vincennes, there is a new Roman Catholic church which provides a soundproof "all view" of all three altars which enables mothers to take their offspring to church, and do so without disturbing others. The name of the pastor is Father Honeywinkle.

MILITARY PRESIDENTS.

Austin, Tex., Feb. 22.—Where several are discussing their respective choices for President in the approaching election some one will suggest MacArthur. Immediately one or more of those who prefer some one else will say, "We do not want a military man for President." The statement is not only not wise, but merits rebuke. It is unwise because the history of the United States refutes it.

Washington, Harrison, Taylor, Johnson, Grant, Pierce, Jackson, and Garfield were each military men. When the Republicans nominated Garfield, the Democrats nominated against him Hancock, "because of his reputation as a soldier." And because of that reputation as a soldier, Garfield defeated him only by the small margin of 9,000 votes out of 9 million votes cast. From this record it follows that military men have occupied with distinction to themselves and benefits to the American people, the President's office.

No American dare say Washington did not make a good President. Andrew Jackson is the hero of the Democratic party, worshiped by all members of the party, tho followed only by few holding office now.

The statement should be rebuked because a military man is a soldier, and a soldier is a military man, and this statement implies that there is not a man in the 10 million Americans now under arms who is fit either now or hereafter to become President of the United States. The statement closes the door to the political ambitions and hopes of every ambitious soldier now under the American flag. The truth is that this is the time when we need a military man at the head of the American government to bring order out of the chaos which will exist in this government when this war is over.

CANDIDATES AND TWO TERMS.

Chicago, Feb. 11.—What is the matter with Sen. Byrd, or some other outstanding Democrat coming out, frankly and openly, with an announcement of his availability for the Presidential nomination — as Republican aspirants have already done? What are they afraid of—the master's voice?

If the congress does not have the courage to present a constitutional amendment, as requested by a number of states, prohibiting a Presidential tenure of more than 8 years, the states themselves, which under the Constitution are invested with jurisdiction over the ballot, could easily accomplish the same result by adopting legislation to the effect that the name of a candidate for President or Vice President shall not appear on the ballot if such candidate is now completing his second four year term, or has served 8 years in such office.

ANOTHER NEW DEAL IMPROVEMENT.

Chicago, Feb. 27.—Joseph was the first food administrator. He was appointed by the Pharaoh of Egypt to store up all surplus food during the seven good years so there would be plenty during the years of famine to follow.

Then came Henry Wallace, appointed by Roosevelt to kill the pigs and cows and plow up the crops during the good years to insure scarcity, want, and famine and to pave the way for food rationing and social regimentation during the bad years of war which they were then planning.

Thus has the New Deal improved upon the ways of God and the Bible.

ON REPORT CARDS.

Chicago, Feb. 23.—V. W. H., a weary teacher, told some disgruntled parents that if they would read the report cards "with some degree of comprehension" they would understand that E meant "working efficiently" and N meant "not working efficiently."

Will she now tell a disgruntled parent who has used all the comprehension he possesses just what C means. A child will have two E's in succession in a subject and then receive a C. The report card says C means "not working efficiently but showing improvement." Improvement over E?

Parents get weary, too. PULLMAN.

FRANKIE AND THE MANLY ART.

Chicago, Feb. 29.—I just came from seeing Frank Sinatra's new picture and, boy, am I disgusted. It's not the picture that's got me down, because I'm crazy about Sinatra. It's those fellows in the balcony of the theater who start wisecracking as soon as Frankie comes on the screen. I suppose it's on account of his thinness and the swooning the girls do, but that still doesn't pardon them for their terrible behavior. Why don't these fellows read the papers and read about the prize fighters that Frankie has as friends? If prize fighters like Sinatra why can't other men like Frankie, too? And, by the way, Sinatra is a very excellent prize fighter himself. MISS MARGARET NEUMANN.

TEACHING AMERICANISM.

Chicago, Feb. 29.—In THE TRIBUNE of Feb. 25, Carl V. Wisner infers that the schools of Chicago, and perhaps of the state, are not fulfilling the spirit and purpose of the law, "requiring the teaching of American patriotism and the principles of representative government as enunciated in the Declaration of Independence, the Constitution of the United States, and the constitution of Illinois."

"Available information shows that copies of the original documents have not been made available in convenient form to the pupils. . . . The educational objectives of Illinois seem to have been evaded in our Chicago schools," he said.

In the Chicago school system, the courses in history, civics, and related subjects [if the terminology of social studies is objectionable] were revised to emphasize the teaching and practice of the American way of life in keeping with the spirit of these precious documents of human rights. In addition to the available facsimiles of the Declaration, etc., and a special series of bulletins entitled "Americanism Program," every upper grade history text has a complete copy of all the aforementioned documents. A careful study of these is required in every school.

I would like Mr. Wisner and all interested citizens not only to witness our class work, but to be present at one of our elections for mayor, alderman, class or club president, patrol captain, etc.

WHEN WILLKIE RODE THE DONKEY.

Kent, O., Feb. 27.—I remember several years ago I was urged to attend a Democratic meeting in Bechtle hall here in Kent as a very good speaker from Akron was on the program. His name was Wendell Willkie. I do not remember his speech, but I do remember I was not impressed by it. E. J. KLINE.

THE FAVORITE COMMUNIST EPITHET.

Chicago, Feb. 26.—While fighting fascism on foreign soil it has crept into our very own congress. We must start now to clean out our own house. The ugly dragon of fascism has brazenly lifted its head high and made itself known in the recent soldier vote and tax bill issue. A. RODRIQUEZ.

THE PATTERN OF THE PEACE.

Detroit, Mich., Feb. 27.—Enough of the future peace has already been patterned to show plainly that the grand hopes and desires held out in the Atlantic charter no longer have substance, if they ever did have. The United States, under the direction of President Roosevelt, is not leading but is doing a good job of following.

In 1939-'40 Stalin took possession of Estonia, Latvia, and Lithuania, and parts of Poland and Finland with the collaboration of Hitler, but to the accompaniment of loud denunciation by President Roosevelt. In 1944 Stalin is about to retake for keeps these nations and parts of nations, this time the place of Hitler in collaboration being occupied by Churchill and Roosevelt.

The President bluntly tells Finland to make its peace with Russia and get out of the war on Russia's terms. At the request of Poland he offers with humility to mediate the dispute between Russia and Poland, an offer which Stalin peremptorily turns down. President Roosevelt says nothing regarding Estonia, Latvia, and Lithuania, but his supporters and apologists now discover that what was Russian aggression in 1939-'40 is virtuous in 1944 because Russia needs these lands in order to make herself secure and, further, because these nations and parts of nations belonged to Russia in 1914. And where does that land them? It lands them right in the arms of Adolf Hitler, who in 1939 claimed Germany was entitled to Danzig and part of the Polish corridor because they belonged to Germany in 1914.

Stalin has annexed Churchill and Roosevelt for the tail of his kite. An idealistic world program of everlasting peace cannot be built upon perfidy any more than grass can be grown on barren stone. GEORGE M. MONTROSS.

POST-WAR PLANS FOR VETS.

Naperville, Ill., Feb. 18.—I would like to suggest to President Roosevelt that he include in the farewell that he gives to the service men when they leave this country, a detailed account of the treatment accorded Paul Skobbeko when he attempted to go back into business after his country gave him an honorable discharge. Churchill might also play up that news item on the back page of his official welcome to the boys over there.

They might tell the boys that there will be no chance for them to get into their old business or their old job and that they will have to accept menial labor on some government sponsored road gang under the fourth term administration. America will no longer be "the land of the free and the home of the brave." C. CLARE SMITH.

WANTS BINGO TAX.

Chicago, Feb. 25.—Our government has overlooked its big opportunity to pay off the national debt. How? By levying a huge tax on the bingo games that are flourishing in the churches of the large cities all over the country. These games are paying sponsors a profit of from $500 to $1,500 a night and this is all profit, too, as there is not one cent of overhead involved.

MISSING HEIRS.

Elmhurst, Ill., Feb. 22. — [Legal Friend of the People].—My mother is one of six heirs to a 160 acre farm. It is now in the hands of an administrator and the Probate court. Only one other heir has been found and he has employed an attorney to partition the real estate. 1. Is it necessary to employ an attorney in order to obtain her share of the estate? 2. Is there a time limit in Nebraska for an estate to be settled? 3. Is there a maximum amount the court and administrator can charge? 4. If the other four heirs, or their heirs, cannot be located, will the estate be divided between the two known heirs? W. A. K.

1. Ordinarily it is not necessary for the heirs to be separately represented.
2. Ordinarily the estate is closed in about a year.
3. The allowance is largely discretionary with the judge.
4. The shares of the missing heirs will probably be held by a public official.

INSURANCE ESTATE.

Chicago, Feb. 22.—[Legal Friend of the People].—I, a widow with three grown children, recently married a widower with two grown children. He has an insurance policy on which his former wife's name appears as beneficiary. He claims in case of his death the insurance would go to me as his wife. 1. Is this correct? 2. If he dies before I do, who would get the insurance money, I or his children? 3. He claims I would be the beneficiary.

D. A. O.

1. No.
2. It seems probable that the policy is so worded that it would go to the estate of the insured. This means that it would be divided between the surviving spouse and his children.
3. We cannot give advice of much value without having the wording.

CITIZENSHIP REQUIREMENTS.

Cicero, Ill., Feb. 23.—[Legal Friend of the People].—Being married to a citizen, I was told to apply only for my second citizenship papers. 1. Is this correct? 2. Where can I obtain the questions and answers about our government which I will be asked? 3. If one cannot speak English can he employ an attorney to speak for him?

A. D.

1. Yes.
2. Apply to the naturalization service in the new postoffice building. You can talk your facts over with a competent adviser there.
3. No. Speaking English is one of the requirements.

HELP US DRAFT PLATFORM, G.O.P. URGES FARMERS

Invites Leaders to April Meeting in Chicago.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., March 4.—The Republican party today moved toward securing a sound agricultural plank in its 1944 platform by calling a conference of representatives of the leading farm organizations in Chicago for April 3 and 4.

Spokesmen for the National Grange, American Farm Bureau federation, Farm union, National Council of Farm Coöperatives, and the National Coöperative Milk Producers federation received invitations to meet with the committee on agriculture of the Republican post-war advisory council.

This is the first meeting of its kind ever called by a political party in which officials of the party confer weeks ahead of its convention with the leaders of a great industry. Gov. Bourke B. Hickenlooper of Iowa, has succeeded the late Sen. McNary of Oregon as chairman of the committee.

Comprehensive Program.

It is confidently expected that out of this two day gathering will come a comprehensive agricultural program for submission to the G. O. P. platform committee in June. This committee is one of eight appointed at the Mackinac conference of the advisory council in September to report to the national committee prior to the convention, which will be held in Chicago.

In announcing the scheduled conferences, Harrison E. Spangler, chairman of the Republican National committee, said his party believes the best place to get information and advice on agriculture is from the farmers themselves.

"It is common knowledge that the New Deal, thru its planned economy, regimentation and regulation has created a state of chaos on the farm front," Spangler said. "The theories of the arm chair farmers in Washington have brought us into a maze of confusion which must give way to a common sense program largely administered by the farmers themselves.

An Economic Problem.

"The administration and its palace guard have completely lost sight of the fundamentals which were expressed by Thomas Jefferson:

"'Were we directed from Washington when to sow and when to reap we should soon want bread.'

"The party believes the problem is economic rather than political and that it should not be made the subject of political controversy. It knows that our nation cannot prosper permanently until agriculture can be placed on a basis whereby the farmers will receive their full share of the national income."

TAX 'SHOPPERS' HUNT DEPUTIES TO CUT RETURNS

New York, March 4 [Special].—The evolution of the "income tax shopper," who moves from one internal revenue branch office to another, seeking the deputy or clerk able to reduce a tax to the lowest possible figure, was reported today by officials of the 2d internal revenue district. There is no prohibition against "shopping," it was explained, and a taxpayer who is dissatisfied with the work of one deputy may apply to another for a recheck.

Officials attached to the staff of Collector William J. Pedrick said one of the "shoppers" was from Long Island City. He was very frank about his intentions. He showed them a return completed by a deputy in Queens, said he was dissatisfied with it and wanted a recheck by another deputy here. In fact, the Queens taxpayer said he was "looking for something better."

Several others who admitted they were "shopping around" were assigned to deputies. Results of the rechecks were not available.

SEE LIBRARIES AS AID TO VETS WHEN WAR ENDS

The role of America's libraries as information centers for returning service men during the post-war period of readjustment was discussed yesterday by 250 librarians from 12 midwestern states attending the Chicago regional institute on demobilization and readjustment in the La Salle hotel.

The institute, which concludes today, is sponsored by the Illinois, Indiana, and Wisconsin library associations.

DEMOCRATS MAP PRIMARY TOUR FOR TWO WEEKS

Cook County Drive to Last 11 Days.

Candidates on the Democratic state ticket, headed by State's Atty. Courtney, aspirant for governor, and Sen. Lucas will open a two weeks primary tour on March 13 in Harrisburg. The tour will end March 30 in La Salle, and the last 11 days of the primary campaign will be devoted to meetings in Chicago and Cook county.

Besides Courtney and Lucas, those who will make the trip are: Edward C. [Ted] Hunter, candidate for lieutenant governor; William Vicars, for auditor; Earl W. Merritt, for state treasurer; Sveinbjorn Johnson, for attorney general; Casimir Griglik, for clerk of the Supreme court, and Mrs. Emily Taft Douglas, candidate for congressman at large. Edward J. Barrett, candidate for secretary of state, is serving with the marines.

Courtney headquarters said the primary tour was limited to a two weeks tour instead of a general caravan, to comply with the gasoline rationing program. An afternoon organization meeting with county and district candidates is planned for each congressional district.

The tour itinerary is: March 13, Harrisburg; March 14, Herrin and West Frankfort; March 15, Salem; March 16, East St. Louis; March 17, Madison county; March 18, Jacksonville; March 20, Springfield; March 21; Decatur; March 22, Danville; March 23, Bloomington; March 24, Peoria; March 25, Galesburg; March 27, Rock Island; March 28, Rockford; March 29, Aurora, and March 30, La Salle county.

REGISTER, VOTE, SPECIAL APPEAL MADE TO WOMEN

The special appeal to woman voters that they will have proportionately greater influence than normally in this election, is being made by the Cook County League of Women Voters and the Woman's City club, as part of the drive for full registration conducted by the Joint Civic Committee of Elections, with which the women's groups are affiliated. The last day for registration is March 13.

Thru its 50 local groups in Chicago and the rest of Cook county, the league in a telephone canvass is urging women to regard voting as a patriotic duty and explaining the need and means of registering. This objective was outlined yesterday by Mrs. W. W. Ramsey, president of the Illinois League of Women Voters, and known among her associates in the league as "the mother of permanent registration in Illinois."

Urged to Guard Home Front.

"The importance of registration to enable one to vote in the coming election should be self-evident in a war year," she said. "Thousands of our boys on the war front are being killed to prevent tyranny from running rampant in the world and unless we here protect the home front by exercising our duty as citizens we have failed to keep faith with those men in uniform."

Mrs. Harry Mulberry, president of the Woman's City club, said the club's directors would meet Monday to make plans for reaching women thruout Chicago.

Male Voters Also Laggard.

With the registration period ending a week from tomorrow, the joint civic committee found the male voters also laggard. The committee repeated the warning that registration at this time is imperative for new voters and for voters previously registered who have changed their addresses or changed their names.

Both new registrations and corrections are reported by the election commissioners as below normal.

Besides the two women's organizations the joint committee, which is nonpartisan, includes the Chicago Bar association, Chicago Association of Commerce, City club, Citizens' Association of Chicago, and the Union League club.

Firemen Save Paralytic, Daughter Slightly Burned

Mrs. Ida Moore, 64, a paralytic, was rescued by firemen yesterday when fire started in the home behind the notions store operated by her daughter at 260 N. Kedzie av. The daughter, Mrs. Anna Ramsey, suffered burns on her arms when she tried to reënter the rooms to get three dogs, which were saved by firemen. Chief George Staley of the 18th battalion said the fire apparently started from papers which were placed too near the stove.

Seize Nine Slot Machines in Raid on Moose Lodge

Capt. Thomas Duffy and a squad of police from the Central station late yesterday raided the rooms of the Loyal Order of Moose on the second floor at 130 N. Wells st. and seized nine slot machines. MAJOR IN ARMY ADMITS BRIBING 20 LEGISLATORS

Democrat Tells About Michigan Conspiracy.

Lansing, Mich., March 4 [Special].—Maj. Charles F. Hemans, former Democratic University of Michigan regent, admitted on the witness stand before Judge Leland W. Carr today that he was the "pay-off" man who bought legislative votes on a wholesale scale during 1939 session.

Accused of vote buying by many previous witnesses during the preliminary examination of 22 of the 26 respondents named in a grand jury warrant charging graft conspiracy, Hemans was produced as the principal state witness as the hearing apparently neared its close.

Hemans, who has been attached to the provost marshal's office in Washington for more than a year, created a sensation by his appearance. Wearing a major's uniform and seemingly in excellent spirits, he launched into a detailed story of his lobbying activities in behalf of a group of independent loan and finance companies that were opposing proposed regulatory legislation and a reduction in legal interest rates.

Says Only Cash Talked.

Hemans prefaced his disclosure of graft payments by saying he "wished to God" it had not been necessary to resort to bribery. He asserted, however, that a "condition had arisen" in the Michigan legislature in which only cash talked.

"Whether you liked it or didn't like it, you had to do this thing," Hemans charged. "Others bumped into the same situation."

He produced a "little black book" to "refresh his memory" regarding names and payments to 1939 legislators, 20 of whom are named in the blanket indictment along with six finance company executives. He said he first had been retained by the finance group in 1937 with the understanding that he would be allowed from $3,000 to $5,000 to pay off legislators, and meet other expenses.

Names Nagel First.

The first legislator identified by Hemans as having received cash from him to "influence" his vote was Ernest G. Nagel, former Detroit Democratic senator. Nagel, he said, received $125 in several payments, all made in the bathroom of Hemans' hotel suite in Lansing The bathroom, he said, was referred to as "the library."

Under guidance of Sigler, who read the list of legislator defendants from the warrant, Hemans identified each as having been paid for supporting the loan company legislative program. To Sen. Jerry T. Logie, one of the two Republicans among those indicted, the lobbyist said he had sent $300 in an envelope, receipt of which the senator acknowledged, and later paid him $100 more.

Logie's connection with the conspiracy had been discounted yesterday by Miles M. Callaghan, Reed City, the other Republican respondent, who has already pleaded guilty, but whose testimony referred to Logie as a "fine man."

Hired Again for 1939.

Prior to the 1939 session, Hemans said, he was hired again at a conference in the office of Abraham Cooper, president of the Union Investment company, Detroit. Among those who attended, he said, were George Omacht, general counsel for Associates Discount corporation, South Bend, Ind.; Ernest Prew, vice president of the General Finance corporation, Detroit, who already has pleaded guilty to the grand jury warrant; Mark S. Young, then Detroit representative for the National Discount corporation, South Bend, and Samuel N. Hopkins, vice president, Union Investment.

The sixth small loan official named in the indictment, John E. Hancock, assistant vice president, Associates Discount corporation, was not mentioned as attending the meeting, but later was identified as having written a letter inclosing a $500 retainer fee for Hemans. Hancock has been named by previous witnesses as having acted as treasurer of the group.

CITY TO DEMAND QUICK ACTION TO HALT POLLUTION

City officials and representatives of civic organizations will present strong evidence tomorrow at a hearing to be held in Gary, Ind., by Col. H. J. Woodbury, district United States engineer, for action to improve the polluted water supply which serves 1,400,000 south side residents.

Commisisoner of Public Works Hewitt, who has made a close study of the coliform bacteria count in the city's water, will offer suggestions to reduce the hazard to health from sewage entering the lake from northern Indiana. He will be accompanied to the hearing by John R. Baylis, city water purification engineer and a national authority on water contamination, and Martin W. Ottershagen, harbor engineer for Chicago.

The need for action has been increased, Hewitt pointed out, by the recent outbreak in northern Indiana of a typhoid epidemic, in which 221 cases and a dozen deaths have been recorded.

CHICAGO MEDICS DERIDE BRITISH TENET ON BIRTH

Chicago doctors were chuckling yesterday over a story from London quoting the Lancet, British medical journal, as saying that babies born from May to October generally are more intelligent than those born in other months because they have the most intelligent parents. Chicago physicians and obstetricians agreed with Dr. George Finola of 104 S. Michigan av., who said: "I am sure the months of the year have nothing to do with a child's intelligence. There is an old story that a mother should not wean her baby in May because the birds, flying north, would make the child restless and unable to settle permanently anywhere thereafter. There is as much logic in one story as the other."

226 WAR HOMES PLANNED FOR 2 SUBURBAN AREAS

Westchester to Get 100 and Dolton 126.

BY AL CHASE.
[Real Estate Editor.]

Completion of plans for two big privately financed home projects, totaling 226 living units, was announced yesterday. One is in Dolton, far south side manufacturing suburb, and the other in Westchester—the late Samuel Insull's "dream suburb" which has been only partially developed.

Teninga & Co., south side home builders, said plans are under way for 74 more homes in their 20 acre Ivanhoe Manor development in Dolton, where 52 homes are completed or under construction. They expect to complete all 126 war dwellings this summer. The project is east of Indiana av. between 142d and 144th sts.

Two-thirds of the Teninga homes will be for rent to war workers only. The remainder may be sold. Rentals will be $48 to $50 without stoves or refrigerators. Designed by Vitzthum & Burns, the homes will have two bedrooms each, with space for two more when needed. Walls will be solid brick and basements full. The Roseland Standard Building and Loan association is financing the dwellings with federal housing administration loans.

All to Be Ready July 1.

Twenty war homes will be completed in Westchester within 30 days. One hundred units originally announced by the Ahlvin Construction company for the area bounded by Roosevelt rd., Hudson av., Canterbury st., and Haas av., will be ready for occupancy by July 1. These statements were made by Vernon E. Crosell, secretary and treasurer of the construction company. He added 28 have been completed and rented and 16 occupied.

Eighty-two of the homes are to be 1½ stories, with living room, dinette, kitchen, and bedroom on the first floor, and a second bedroom and a bathroom on the second floor. A third bedroom will be roughed in. They will be brick and frame.

The remaining 18 homes will be two stories of brick. They will have living room, dinette, and kitchen on the first floor and two bedrooms and bath on the second.

All will have full basements and will be heated with hand-fired coal furnaces. All are insulated.

Second Big Home Project.

Rentals are to war workers only at $49 for the 1½ story units and $52.50 for the two story. Rentals do not include kitchen stoves or refrigerators.

Lot dimensions are 48 to 54 feet wide and 117 to 133 feet deep. Utilities are installed and most streets paved.

The Charles Ringer company, 7915 Exchange av., is underwriting the project with FHA insured mortgages of $5,400 on each unit.

This is Westchester's second big war home development. The first included 200 single family homes built a mile northeast of the Ahlvin project by the Commercial Home Building corporation.

SAVINGS LEAGUE FAVORS PRIVATE SLUM CLEARANCE

State law should provide for private redevelopment corporations with adequate power to assemble land, and for the future taxation of redevelopment projects, public, semi-public, and private, according to a plan for slum clearance being drawn up by the United States Savings and Loan league. A post-war savings and loan program committee of the league is putting the finishing touches on a "progress" report growing out of its studies during the last six months, officers announced yesterday.

The report also recommends that authority be granted under state law for state, county, and local governments to acquire and clear slum areas, dedicating portions for parks and other public use, and reselling the remainder to private parties.

Chicago Puts 2 Million into Congress St.

Chicago already has spent $2,068,231 for engineering and administrative costs and for land acquisition for the 40 million dollar post-war Congress st. super-highway project, Philip Harrington, commissioner of subways and super-highways, disclosed yesterday in a report prepared for submission to the city council finance committee.

Expenditures already made include $89,257 for engineering and administrative services, $73,860 for purchasing land, easements and rights of way, and $1,905,114 for the acquisition of 37 parcels of property east of the Chicago river. Altho land has been surveyed west of the river, no purchases have been made.

Negotiations are pending on other property and a price of $293,175 has been agreed upon for seven parcels of land east of the river.

Included in the 37 parcels of property already purchased are 27 buildings. Tenants in 19 of the buildings will be allowed to remain there until demolition projects are begun, probably after the war.

Harrington's report disclosed that all money expended on the project so far has been from the city's share of the state motor fuel tax fund. The money was released by the state Feb. 29, Harrington said.

TERMS PRESENT GOOD TIME TO ACQUIRE REALTY

Arthur Rubloff.

Never was there a better time than today to invest in real estate, particularly in commercial properties with income possibilities, Arthur Rubloff, of Arthur Rubloff & Co., told members of the Chicago Real Estate board at their monthly meeting. Rubloff was one of four realtors who gave a review and forecast of the Chicago realty market. Others were: Stewart Matthews, vice president of Baird & Warner, Inc.; Frank J. O'Brien, vice president of McKey & Poague, Inc., and Louis Sudler of Sudler & Co.

"Taking all economic factors into consideration, commercial properties have maintained a good earning record during the war, and offer much greater earning possibilities in the post-war period," Rubloff said.

ARMY ABANDONS INTER-AMERICAN HIGHWAY WORK

BY STANLEY JOHNSTON.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica, Feb. 26—[By air mail].—The Central American division of the inter-American highway, the completion of which at all costs [and they were not niggardly] was a defense "mandate" in midsummer of 1942, has been abandoned by the army. Bowing out with the service branch were the United States engineering department and the public roads administration.

Only the bureau of public roads is left to father the orphan project, which, in its development stage 10 years ago, was envisioned enthusiastically as an American "Burma Road."

Fear of attack on the Panama canal stimulated the army's demand for completion of the highway to Panama before the close of 1942. Growth of land and marine power and subsequent halting of the menace to American shores ended the army's interest in the highway. But not before more than 20 million dollars had been allocated to the job from army funds and 28,000 men had been put to work to reduce the jungle, broach the volcanic monutains and bridge the intervening waterways.

Total Cost a Secret.

Presumably this appropriation was spent along with an additional 3 millions pledged by the army. There also is a matter of 20 millions for the inter-American highway demanded by President Roosevelt in 1941 and authorized by congress in December of that year.

About the only thing out in the clear is the progress of the road building. Mexico's stretch, a well constructed and popular link, has been opened several years. It is more than 600 miles long from its start at Laredo on the Rio Grande frontier to Oaxaco, below Mexico City.

"Dry Weather" Road.

In Guatemala the goverenment operates a link in the inter-American but under strictly local conditions. In short, it maintains a "dry weather" road almost from its northern frontier to El Salvador on the south. Several million dollars of ours are said to have gone into this section, which cannot be used during wet weather.

El Salvador, on the other hand, has spent its 3 million dollar American highway loan wisely and is the only one of the Central American nations to have finished practically its entire length. It has a paved, usable road of which only 36 miles remain to be built to make it a border to border arterial highway.

Contractors now are deep in the backwoods doing their best to hack out this short piece which will extend the link to the border of Nicaragua, where another dry weather road extends as far as the capital, Managua.

Wind Whips Chicagoans Around

Robin weathers snowstorm in yard of Mrs. E. Helmeniak.

Streets and highways will continue to be slippery today with lower temperatures, but there will be no more snow until perhaps tomorrow and the wind will abate to gentle or moderate, Forecaster G. L. Canaday said last night.

Yesterday the city shoveled aside nearly three inches of snow, while high winds buffeted pedestrians and motor traffic skidded over the ice covered pavements.

Low temperature this morning was expected to be about 20 degrees, with a high of 36 today and a low of 26 tonight.

Traffic in the north shore area was slowed by the storm, but the state highway department kept the Skokie highway open and Sheridan rd. near Waukegan and Lake Forest passable. Roads were slushy in the south suburban area.

Mrs. E. Helmeniak, 2990 Milwaukee av., spotted the year's first robin in her yard.

9,800 CAFES AND GEISHA HOUSES IN JAPAN CLOSED

New York, March 4 (AP).—A total of 9,800 "high class entertainment" places in Tokio, ranging from the Imperial hotel's restaurant to geisha houses, will be closed tomorrow under a measure adopted by Premier Tojo's government to "fit the mode of public living to war time requirements," the Domei News agency said today.

Domei said the closing would affect 4,300 geisha houses, 850 restaurants, and about 2,000 cafes, cabarets, tearooms, and similar establishments, as well as nine leading theaters.

But Today, at United Medical Service

12th Year of Responsible Medical Care

MANY new and wonderful things are promised by post-war planners for "our life tomorrow," but what could provide more wonderful benefits than the great pool of medical knowledge and scientific instruments which exist today. The problem is no longer a lack of knowledge or proper technique, but a broader utilization by the public of the many services now available. While the average span of life already has been lengthened many years through reduction of infant mortality and control over the infectious diseases of childhood, it is now possible to add years to the lives of the middle age groups. Diseases which threaten the later years of life are usually the result of "degenerative" conditions which begin to develop in the late thirties and forties. Unless diagnosed early and properly treated these conditions often cause serious heart disease, kidney disorders, bladder and urinary disturbances and prostate trouble in men and female trouble in women. Other results are hardening of the arteries, high blood pressure, diabetes, nervousness, stomach and gall bladder complaints . . . and to those past 40 cancer invasion is a dangerous possibility.

All necessary medical knowledge and scientific facilities for the early diagnosis and proper treatment of these conditions are available to the public through United Medical Service. These include qualified physicians, X-rays, electrocardiograms, clinical laboratory tests and other special medical procedures. United Medical Service is now in its 12th year of successful and continued service to the public. Despite the many additional demands being made upon the service because of the War and the thousands of physicians now serving the Armed Forces it is ready to serve you as it has served thousands of others. United Medical Service is conveniently accessible by railroad trains, street cars, buses, elevated and subway trains and automobiles. The fees are moderate and the same to all. Detroit, Mich., March 4 (AP).—The Detroit Red Wings increased their second place margin in the National Hockey league to six points tonight in defeating the Chicago Blackhawks, 6 to 2, before 10,583 spectators in Olympia Stadium. It was Chicago's first defeat in seven games.

The Hawks and the Red Wings meet again tomorrow night in Chicago Stadium.

The Hawks, who haven't won on Detroit ice in 17 games since March 15, 1940, didn't score tonight until the Wings had gathered six goals. Mud Bruneteau shot two goals and Liscombe, Syd Howe, Don Grosso, and Bill Jennings each got one.

Detroit Scores 4 Goals.

Carl Liscombe scored a goal and set up three others in the second period as Detroit scored four times. The Wings also made single goals in the first and third periods. After this sprint, Chicago broke thru on goals by George Allen and Doug Bentley.

The victory was costly to Detroit, however. Defenseman Bill Quackenbush was injured in a third period collision with Art Wiebe of the Hawks and suffered torn ligaments below the left knee that will keep him out of the Red Wings' lineup a week. Connie Dion, Detroit's little goalie, suffered a two-stitch cut over the right eye in the first period but remained in the game.

Karakas Handles 19 Chances.

Bruneteau's first period score came while Detroit was shorthanded. With Allen in the penalty box in the second period, Detroit scored twice within 70 seconds for the winning margin.

Goalie Mike Karakas handled 19 chances in the Chicago nets to Dion's 14. Liscombe's activities tonight ran his scoring total to 61 points, a record high for a Detroit player.

KIEFER BREAKS HIS OWN MARK IN BACKSTROKE

Annapolis, Md., March 4 (AP).—Chief Specialist's Mate Adolph Kiefer of the Bainbridge naval training station swept thru the waters of the Naval academy pool today to set what may be a new world's record for the 200 meter backstroke—pacing the course in 2:19.3 to better his own world's record of 2:24.

The new time for 200 meters—a length equivalent to 218.7 yards—will be submitted to the National and International Swimming associations for official approval, academy swimming judges said.

Kiefer, former star of the Medinah club in Chicago, broke his own 100 yard backstroke record of 57.2 last Saturday by going the distance in 56.8 in the navy pool.

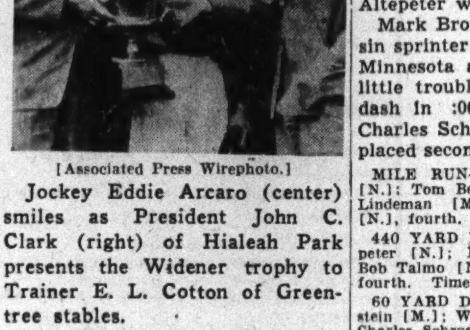
FOUR FREEDOMS WINS WIDENER

Arcaro Rides Long Shot; Sun Again 2d.

Miami, Fla., March 4 (AP).—The brilliant Eddie Arcaro whipped Greentree stable's Four Freedoms to victory in the $25,000 Widener handicap today and put the finishing touches on a riding feat without modern precedent.

He did it the hard way, beating a better horse and the winter's leading jockey in a magnificent duel down the length of the homestretch.

When Arcaro pushed Four Freedoms' nose ahead at the finish, he completed a Hialeah Park slam. He captured both of the park's big stakes—the Flamingo and the Widener—with outsiders in 1942, and scored again the Flamingo last Saturday with the longshot Stir Up.



[Associated Press Wirephoto.]

The races were not run in 1943 when the park was closed.

Alquest Is Third.

Calumet farm's Sun Again, a favorite held at almost even money in an 11 horse race, and Ted Atkinson, succumbed to Arcaro's riding magic in today's tremendous stretch battle. Once, as they thundered toward the finish, Sun Again took the lead—but Arcaro worked furiously with his whip and had Four Freedoms out in front when the picture was taken.

N.U. Triumphs in Triangular Chicago Meet

Northwestern's 12 man track team scored 60 points to win the triangular track meet at the Chicago fieldhouse yesterday. Minnesota was second with 51½ points and Chicago third with 18½ points.

The Wildcats, who lost 10 men last week in the transfer of navy and marine personnel, won eight first places and scored in all events except the high jump and broad jump.

Jim Warfield of Northwestern captured individual scoring honors with 10 points by winning both the high and low hurdles. He also ran on the winning relay team.

Eggleston Wins Mile Run.

The best individual performance of the meet was turned in by Ardin Bauman of Minnesota, who won the high jump with a leap of 6 feet 2 inches.

Erwin Eggleston, Northwestern freshman, came from behind in the stretch to win the mile run by nosing out Tom Benedek of Chicago. Gordon Lindeman of Minnesota, who led going into the last lap, faltered and finished third.

Northwestern's Hank Altepeter was an easy victor in the quarter mile, finishing 10 yards in front of Bruce James of Minnesota. Bob Talmo, also of Minnesota, was third. Altepeter was timed in :51.5.

Mark Brownstein, former Wisconsin sprinter who was transferred to Minnesota as a naval trainee, had little trouble winning the 60 yard dash in :06.5. Bill Madden and Charles Schroeder of Northwestern placed second and third respectively.

Army Sgt. Joe Louis, world's heavyweight champion, started his fight career in the 1934 tourney when he defeated all comers in the light heavyweight class and then stepped into the professional ring to become one of the greatest fighters in history.

Chief Specialist Tony Zale of the United States navy didn't win a Golden Gloves title, but he made a spectacular showing in two tourneys and entered professional ranks to battle his way to the top of the middleweight division before turning his attention to war duties.

Sports After Peace

Sheldon Clark Sees Mike Jacobs' Monopoly Broken; Begun Predicts Record Gates in Boxing.

[This is the first of a series in which sports leaders will give their conception of "Sports After Peace."

BY EDWARD PRELL.

WHEN peace comes, Mike Jacobs will yield his stranglehold on American boxing. This will come to pass not because the New York promoter wills it so, but because there will be such a tremendous increase in fighting men that no one state —New York—will be able to control the sport as it now does with a few.

Sheldon Clark.

This is the No. 1 post-war idea projected by Sheldon Clark, Chicago sportsman, and chairman of the Illinois Athletic commission, the supervising body of boxing and wrestling in this state.

The Dempsey-Tunney record gate of $2,658,660 will be broken and Chicago fans will see weekly shows at the Stadium, Wrigley field, or other big spots when the clouds of war have passed. These are two of the more important futures in the ring sport as envisioned by the town's young promoter, Jack Begun, who grew up in Maxwell street with Barney Ross.

"The military services are training thousands today in the art of boxing," says Begun, who teams with Irving Schoenwald in presenting weekly fistic productions in Marigold Gardens and occasionally more pretentious numbers in the Stadium and Wrigley field. Hundreds of these boys, spurred on by the promise of quick riches, will turn pro. All of a sudden there will be more boxers than we have ever known. And, like Mr. Clark, I defy Mike Jacobs to keep strings on even a small percentage of 'em!"

"We'll know a return to Chicago's glory days of boxing when we produced such topnotchers as Tuffy Griffith, Barney Ross, Harry Dublinsky, Eddie Shea, King Levinsky, and countless others. All cities, large and small, will have talent right in their own back yards. Boxing stars really will be a dime a dozen.

Begun Predicts Long Career for Louis After the War.

"The first big natural after the war will be Joe Louis vs. Billy Conn and it's a cinch to go over a million dollars at the gate. That will be a real touch for the boys. The top will be at least $37.50. And before boxing rides out its post-war boom,

Three Glovers Honored for Ring Conduct

BY CHARLES BARTLETT.

Three Golden Gloves fighters—Pvt. Ragon Kinney of the Los Angeles Times team, Collins Brown of Chicago's Catholic Youth organization, and Merton Herrick of the Minneapolis Star Journal and Tribune—yesterday were named the winners of the three trophies which are rated as valuable as the diamond studded golden gloves which will go to the winners of Friday night's final bouts in the Chicago Stadium.

These trophies are awarded for outstanding sportsmanship in the weight divisions of the three most distinguished alumni of the tournament. Maybe you've heard of them. They are Sgt. Joe Louis, Sgt. Barney Ross, and Chief Specialist Tony Zale. That threesome went on to win world's championships in the heavyweight, welterweight, and middleweight classes after brilliant debut performances in Golden Gloves competition.

Judges Hard Pressed.

Kinney, Brown, and Herrick were awarded the trophies for their conduct in and out of the ring during the three night warfare of the Tournament of Champions. The choices were made after a thoro balloting of the judges and referees, who admitted that they were hard pressed to arrive at their decisions.

The Ross trophy is named for the Iowa City, Ia., March 4 [Special].—A calm, steady Northwestern basketball team, led by Ben Schadler, long shot artist, robbed Iowa of a share of the Big Ten conference basketball title here tonight, defeating the Hawkeyes, 42 to 41, on a last minute basket by Duane Sickels.

With a one point lead and four minutes remaining, Iowa tried to stall, but the Wildcats took the ball on a rebound and Sickels slipped thru the Hawkeye defense for an easy shot that gave Northwestern a split in the two game series.

Wildcats Are Spoilers.

Iowa was the second team to be knocked out of the title race by the patched up Wildcats. Last weekend Northwestern spoiled Purdue's chance of a share of the crown.

The duel for the Western conference individual scoring championship between Dick Ives and Dave Danner, both freshmen and both Iowa forwards, wound up with Ives the winner, 206 points to 193.

Losing an early lead to the one-hand shooting of Schadler, Iowa trailed, 22 to 16, at half time and failed to regain the lead for 16 minutes of the second period.

Four quick baskets by Ives touched off the Iowa scoring splurge and closed Northwestern's lead to 40 to 39. Then Danner stole the ball from Frank Clawson and tossed in a fielder to give Iowa a one point lead.

Frank Clawson Stars.

After Sickel's basket, which put Northwestern out in front again, the Wildcats controlled the ball for 50 seconds. The Hawkeyes finally got the ball on a jump, but before they could get it down the floor the gun sounded ending the game.

Three times in that last hectic minute the Wildcats took the ball out of bounds on fouls committed by Iowa men, thus aiding their stalling tactics.

To little Frank Clawson, fiery red-haired guard, goes most of the credit for the victory. After Schadler left the game on four personal fouls, it was Clawson who almost single handedly held the Northwestern team together. And his clever dribbling in the final minutes prevented Iowa from getting its hands on the ball at a crucial time.

Wisconsin trounced Chicago last night on the University of Chicago court, 74 to 46, to finish in a tie with Iowa for second place in the Big Ten basketball standings. Gulfport, Miss., March 4 (AP).—Harold [Jug] McSpaden of Philadelphia continued to pace the $4,500 Gulfport Open golf tournament today, firing a 1 under par 70 for a 36 hole total of 138.

The Philadelphia Country club star was tied with six others in today's second round, but his brilliant 3 below par 68 yesterday gave him enough margin to improve his position.

Three Stroke Lead.

Six contenders were just three strokes behind McSpaden yesterday, but after today's round Jug found himself three strokes ahead of Tony Penna of Dayton, O., and five strokes ahead of five others, some of whom were closer to him in the first round.

Penna was one of the 70 shooters in the second round and pushed his 36 hole total to 141 for a two stroke lead over five others who tied for third place with 143.

The group included Sammy Byrd of Detroit, winner of the New Orleans Open, who put together a 72—71 for the two rounds; Byron Nelson, Toledo, O., pro, who scored a 70 against 73 in the first round; Leonard Dodson, Kansas City, with a 70—73, and Bob Hamilton of Evansville, Ind., who also scored a 70—73.

Turfmen Say Derby Is to Be Open Race

BY MAURICE SHEVLIN.

The nomination list of 148 thorobreds for the 70th running of the Kentucky Derby at Churchill Downs on May 6, released yesterday in Louisville, Ky., points to one of the most open affairs in the history of the tradition bound event which for the second time will carry an added purse of $75,000.

Many turfmen say there isn't a star among the 1944 3 year olds which were graduated from the ranks of 2 year olds of 1943. This is their premise for forecasting one of the liveliest races in Derby records. The race still is two months away and a good line on the ability of the speedsters most likely to go to the post must await the various preparatory events which will be run between now and the opening of the regular Churchill Downs meeting on May 1.

No Outstanding Favorite.

There's no Count Fleet, no Whirlaway, no Bimelech to attract attention as a standout and to be made the odds-on favorite to win the fixture for 3 year olds. In fact, the thorobreds most likely to face the barrier took turns beating themselves as 2 year olds.

However, experts agree that the best of the colts on their 1943 form and breeding are Pukka Gin, Platter, Occupy, and Lucky Draw, while the filly ranks are topped by Durazna, Miss Keeneland, Twilight Tear, and Boojiana.

Platter, owned by George D. Widener, is chosen by many handicappers as the probable winner of the Derby and other distance events to follow in Chicago during the coordinated Washington Park-Arlington Park meeting mainly because he demonstrated stamina as a 2 year old.

Occupy Nominated.

Chicago owners have mustered a representation of 13 nominees for the race, three of which won stake events as 2 year olds—Occupy and his stablemate, Jezrahel, and Warren Wright's Miss Keeneland. Occupy won the Washington Park Futurity and the Belmont Futurity and ran second in the Primer, the Arlington Futurity, the Prairie State, and the Breeders Futurity. Jezrahel's stake triumph was scored in the Arlington Futurity at the expense of Occupy. Miss Keeneland won the Selima Stakes at Pimlico and ran second to her stablemate, Twilight Tear, in the Arlington Lassie.

The others nominated by Chicagoland owners are Warren Wright's Pensive, James Emery's Sunnip, and High Harp, Mrs. Al Sabath's Civil Liberty, R. W. McIlvain's The Man and Old Kentuck, the Brolite Farm's Challenge Me, Warren Wright's Bull Weed and Easy Chance, and Mrs. Edward McEvoy's Paragram.

you'll see a show with a $100 top. That's when the Dempsey-Tunney gate record will be smashed. Where? Maybe in our own Soldiers' field." [If that arena, which once housed big fights, the College All-Star football game, and other national sporting events, again becomes a sports center.]

Sgt. Louis will be in the middle of this unparalleled prosperity, Begun is confident.

"Heavyweights are never too old," he said, pointing to success attained by Bob Fitzsimmons, Jim Corbett, Jack Dempsey, and other big fellows after they reached their 30s. "In fact, most of them hit their peak after they're 30. The reason? Heavyweights punch harder and fights are shorter. They don't fight as often as the lighter men. Louis can keep going until he's 40 and knowing Joe, I'm sure he'll be around a long, long time. He's the cleanest living fellow among all the boxers I know."

Georges Carpentier, the Frenchman, came to the United States as a hero after the first World war and reaped riches. There will be an invasion of these shores of foreign fighters, says Begun, all with a colorful background of exploits in the global conflict. Boxing will reach new heights as an international sport, with the fighters flying from one country to another. The Filipino boxer, always popular in the United States, will be more so because of the tremendous battle the islanders waged against the Japanese invader.

There'll Be Weekly Fights in Stadium or Wrigley Field.

Because this is a young man's war, Begun, in his fistic fancies, can see fighters who attained majorities or colonelcies in the war. Sgt. Barney Ross, Guadalcanal hero, will be in demand internationally as a boxing referee. So will Fred Apostoli and countless other former fighters who waded knee deep into the war.

"When the war's over, thousands of these boys will be ready for the professional ring," continued Begun. "A boxer should have two years of instruction, at least, before starting out. This means they'll come out ready. Perhaps 75 per cent of the present day fighters will be passe when peace comes. Many old timers now are getting by—more power to 'em—because of the scarcity of talent. In normal times they wouldn't be able to get a fight. The other night we sold out Marigold with no talent at all. Think what it'll be when the fighters start filling gymnasiums. There'll be so much local talent we'll go every week in the Stadium or Wrigley field."

Clark Hopes State Commissions Will Work in Harmony.

Commissioner Clark hopes that the state commissions, thru the National Boxing association, will act in closer harmony to make for uniform rules and supervision. "The nearer we come to this the better for all concerned," he said. "The athletic program in this war has overshadowed that of the last war. It is important more than ever because of the hand to hand nature of the fighting, especially against the Japs. I don't know whether we'll have another Dempsey or Tunney after the war, but it very likely will produce great champions."

"All sports will get a big lift from the war," he concluded, "the boys have become sports conscious thru their training so that they'll be strong for athletics in civilian life. And what's wrong with sports right now? They're doing a great job, affording the home front relaxation and diversion from their labors and their worries. Sports after peace—that's really something to anticipate."

LA PORTE GAINS INDIANA STATE SEMI-FINALS

Indiana Setup

HOW the teams line up for Saturday's semi-finals of the Indiana State prep basketball tournament:

At Hammond: Converse vs. Culver; La Porte vs. Frankfort.
At Anderson: Whiteland vs. Waynetown; Anderson vs. Aurora.
At Muncie: Decatur vs. Fort Wayne Central; Muncie Burris vs. Kokomo.
At Vincennes: Washington vs. Bedford; Evansville Bosse vs. Mooresville.

The La Porte [Ind.] High school basketball team defeated Gary Emerson, 45 to 29, last night in Hammond to gain next Saturday's Hammond semi-finals of the Indiana State basketball tournament.

La Porte, which had defeated Mount Ayr, 47 to 28, in the afternoon round of the regional in the Hammond civic center, led all the way as it easily disposed of Emerson. Walter Radecki and Zcygmund Balzowski, with 12 points each paced the winners.

Emerson, which was led by Bill Levack's 10 points, in its losing effort gained the regional final by beating Hammond, 36 to 23, in the afternoon.

La Porte to Meet Franklin.

La Porte will meet Frankfort in the second game of the Hammond semi-finals Saturday afternoon in the Hammond civic center. Opening the program will be a game between the only two undefeated teams in Indiana, Converse and Culver, at 1:30. Each team has won 27 and lost none.

The winners of the two afternoon contests will then clash at 8 p. m. for the right to compete in the state finals in Indianapolis the following week-end.

Undefeated Culver gained the regional championship, its first in eight years, by defeating South Bend John Adams in the South Bend final. A hook shot by Don McKee in the final 15 seconds of play meant the victory. McKee was good for six points, altho teammate Ralph Pedersen was high scorer with 15.

Converse Quintet Rallies.

Converse put on a third quarter rally to bring it from a 1½ to 14 lead over Delphi to a 35 to 19 third quarter lead in taking the Logansport title. Bob Macy was the individual star, getting 13 points.

Fort Wayne Central continued its surprising drive to the 1944 finals in Indianapolis by stopping Warsaw, 38 to 24, in the Fort Wayne final. Central held a 14 to 11 lead at the half. Ronald Lewton paced the winners with 12 points. Only two regulars are back from last year's champions. Lineups:

Arcaro Wins in Widener on Long Shot

came A. C. Ernst's Alquest, and the early pace maker, Havahome Stable's Eurasian, trailed by another three lengths. Coward and Dupuy's secondary favorite, Marriage, winner of the $25,000 New Orleans handicap two weeks ago, was fifth by a head.

Winner Pays $17.30.

Arcaro sent Four Freedoms over the mile and one quarter in two minutes, four and three-fifths seconds—never threatening the track record of 2:01 4-5.

Altho Four Freedoms won the Palm Beach handicap at Hialeah earlier this winter, and finished a good second to Sun Again in the McLennan stakes two weeks ago, the four year old colt was believed by the bettors to be in over his head today, as evidenced by his $17.30 to $2 win price.

He was $4.20 to place and $3.30 to show. Sun Again, closing at $1.05 to $1 in the straight pool, paid $3 and $2.70. Alquest returned $3.60.

Refused to Falter.

As the grinning Arcaro leaped off Four Freedoms in the winner circle, he shouted:

"I thought I was beaten when I lost a stirrup iron five lengths from the wire."

But he praised Four Freedom's courage.

"He refused to falter when Sun Again got head and head with him in the stretch," Arcaro explained.

The distance running Shot Put finished eighth, behind Alex Barth and Twoses, while Townsend B. Martin's stakes star, Bolingbroke, wound up a disappointing 11th.

Lake Forest had gone into command by the end of the first half, holding a 23 to 11 lead at the half. Altho held to five throws against Culver's 10, the victors outscored Culver in field goals, counting 18 to 10. Each team had 13 personal fouls. It was Lake Forest's second consecutive tournament championship.

The champions advanced to the finals by defeating St. John's, 45 to 36, in the semi-finals yesterday afternoon after Culver had beaten Pullman Tech, 37 to 27. Culver rallied for its victory after trailing, 15 to 14, and was behind 20 to 16 at the half in its semi-final game.

Three Glovers Honored for Ring Conduct

west sider who won the 1929 Golden Gloves featherweight championship, went on to win the world's lightweight, junior welterweight, and welterweight championships, before going into the Big Fight, wherein he was decorated for bravery as one of the marines at Guadalcanal. Louis won the light heavyweight Golden Glove in 1934 before going out to dominate the world heavyweight situation. Zale fought in the 1934 tourney also, and subsequently was a member of the intercity team of that year. Tony later won the world's 160 pound title.

Kinney No Stranger.

Pvt. Kinney, winner of the Louis trophy, is no stranger to Golden Gloves fans. The 25 year old Arkansan fought as a light heavyweight and won his intercity bout in 1939. He now is stationed at Camp Callan, Cal., and came to the present tournament as the heavyweight representative of the Los Angeles Times team. Ragon will be one of the four heavyweight swingers in next Friday night's climax.

Brown, the Chicago postal employe who thus far has carried heaviest punching ammunition in the middleweight class, also is one of the 32 survivors of the Tournament of Champions. Collins was awarded the Zale trophy. Herrick's deportment and fighting ability, before he was eliminated in the second round by Coast Guardsman Harry Sparrow of the Chicago squad, were such that the referees and judges gave him the Ross trophy.

IOWA SEAHAWKS BEAT WISCONSIN IN TRACK MEET

Madison, Wis., March 4 [Special]. —The Iowa pre-flight indoor track and field team swamped the remnants of a University of Wisconsin squad here this afternoon, the Seahawks winning by the top heavy margin of 73½ to 30½ points.

Fred Winters, former Compton college star, paced the Seahawks to their victory, the flashy cadet winning the pole vault and broad jump and tying a teammate for first place in the high jump. Johnny Morris, member of the 1932 Olympic team who has not competed since 1936 when he was a national hurdling champion, came out of retirement to take second places in both the high and low hurdles.

McKinley Quintets Take Wilson Grammar Titles

McKinley school of Bellwood won both the heavyweight and lightweight championships of the 15th annual Wilson grade school basketball tournament last night in Wilson school gymnasium in Bellwood. The heavyweights defeated Nixon of Westchester, 44 to 11, and the lights stopped the host team, 21 to 19.

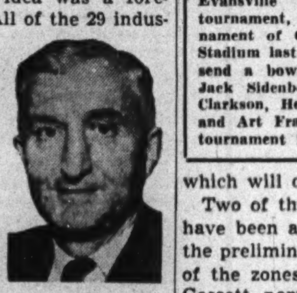
The Home Front

BY WILLIAM BAYLISS.

THE first Industrial Amateur golf tournament last autumn was such a success that perpetuation of the idea was a foregone conclusion. All of the 29 industries which entered a team in the meet held in September at the Northbrook Country club voted in favor of making it an annual affair and the first official meeting of the new Industrial Amateur Golf Tournament association was held last week. The sponsors expect the event to be one of the highlights of industrial athletics in Chicago in this and future years.



Claud S. Gordon.

The association was incorporated during the winter with the 29 industries already mentioned as charter members. Articles of incorporation and by-laws were approved and officers and directors for 1944 chosen at the session Tuesday night in the Morrison hotel.

Elect Treasurer to Take Care of Anticipated Funds.

The three men who served as officers during the informal but very successful first year of the organization were given a merited vote of confidence by being reëlected. Claud S. Gordon, president of the Claud S. Gordon Co., headed the triumvirate and again will serve as president. C. H. Stevenson, vice president of the Lindberg Engineering Co., has the same title in the golf association and George R. Kane, also of the Gordon company, is the secretary.

Last year, when the organization was informal, it had no funds and no treasurer. Now that it is a corporation it still has no treasury, but expects to take care of that matter before the season starts. That made the selection of a treasurer advisable and A. W. Eskridge of Wilson & Co. was chosen to handle the money, when it rolls in.

These four officers, with a trio of newly selected directors, will form the executive council. The directors are Frank Ogrin of American Steel & Wire, Waukegan; E. J. Gossett of Bell & Gossett, Morton Grove, and S. Frank Kiss of the Belden Manufacturing company, Chicago.

Membership of 150 Teams Is Goal Set for Season.

In 1943 the Industrial tournament was a one day affair, with all of the 29 teams competing. The plans for the future are more elaborate, calling for north, west, and south zones, with 50 teams in each zone set as the goal and one which the present members believe can be attained without too much trouble. Each of the three divisions will hold its preliminary competition, possibly on a round robin basis, during the summer. Each member firm will be allowed to enter one or more four man teams in the preliminaries and the three district champions will qualify for the final tournament, which will climax the season.

Republic Aviation corporation, Indiana division, in Evansville, gives sports a prominent place in its plant program. Republic's boxers won the team championship trophy in the Evansville Courier's Golden Gloves tournament, a preliminary to the Tournament of Champions in the Chicago Stadium last week. The plant also will send a bowling squad, made up of Jack Sidenbender, Harold Meyer, Bill Clarkson, Herb Bryan, Elmer Schultz, and Art Frantz, to the Indiana state tournament in Muncie Saturday.

Two of the I. A. G. T. A. officials have been assigned to take care of the preliminary competition in each of the zones. They are Ogrin and Gossett, north; Stevenson and Kiss, west, and Gordon and Kane, south. Chairmen of the three major committees for the year are: Len Ansley of Inland Steel Container corporation, tournament; George A. Ferber of Lindberg Steel Treating company, membership, and Dan O'Brien of Wilson, Sporting Goods company, ways and means.

Women to Have Equal Rights in Tourney Competition.

The association recognized the important part women fill in the industrial field by opening the tournament competition to members of that sex. There'll be no special class for the gals, who will compete under the same rules and on the same teams as the men.

A handicap system will be used with the idea of giving the duffer just as much of an opportunity to enjoy the game and share in the prizes as the low shooter. The main objective will of course be to gain possession of the big Claud S. Gordon cup, donated last year by the league president and now one of the most valued possessions of the American Steel & Wire plant in Waukegan.

GEORGE WILSON became known as a master of split second timing during his seven seasons with the Chicago Bears, so it should not be a surprise to learn that he now is operating as a time study engineer for Mills Industries. George handles a stopwatch on which each minute is divided into hundredths instead of the customary 60 seconds. His work is the timing of various intricate machine operations in the three Mills war factories and they do say that George gets just as much of a kick out of delving out a means of saving a hundredth of a minute on some machine operation as he does in blocking a would-be tackler out of a play on the gridiron.

Chicago to Be Host to I. R. A. Meeting in April.

Chicago will be host to the national conference of the Industrial Recreation association, April 4 to 6. . . . Recreation, personnel, and industrial relations men are urged to attend. . . . Plans for the convention were made at a recent meeting in Chicago, at which Dr. Floyd R. Eastwood of Purdue university, president of the I. R. A., was in charge.

That redhot race in the Clearing Industrial Bowling league, which ran for 20 weeks with no team being able to get a solid hold on the lead, has opened up somewhat of late and the Wrisley Olivil-Os now have a lead of four games over American Gear. . . . That may not seem like much of an advantage, but the Olivil-Os hope they can keep it the rest of the way down the home stretch. . . . J. Ansler of the J. & J. Gas Masks is the individual leader with a 185 average.

Didn't Go for Winter Sports, So Now He's in Ski Troops.

Remember these boys?—Phil Morrealle, who played basketball at Loyola university and softball with the Olson Rugs, was proficient in those sports but did not go in for outdoor winter activities. . . . So now that he's in the army his friends were surprised to learn that he's in the ski troops at Camp Hale, Col. . . . What's more, he likes it. . . . Nick Reff, who pitched for Chicago Latrobe and played basketball for the same outfit, is an air corps cadet. . . . And Tony [Gaspipe] Piraino, the former Wilson Sporting Goods basketball and softball luminary, probably is in gunnery, radio, or armored school by this time. . . . He was awaiting shipment to one of those when last heard from by friends at the North Av. Y. M. C. A., his old hangout.

ARMY WINS IN JC-4A TRACK MEET; NAVY 2D

New York, March 4 (AP).—Track teams from the Army and Navy academies combined operations at Madison Square Garden tonight to dominate the 23d annual IC-4A indoor meet, the Cadets winning the championship with 47 points and the Middies taking the second with 36½.

The two service schools were in such control of the meet, featured by the 4:10.2 mile of Boston's Gil Dodds in a special race, that they grabbed six of the 11 individual crowns.

Four of the latter went to Navy, one of them on a fluke when John Dibeler of Penn tate, apparent winner of the 600 yard run, became confused at the finish line and stopped 10 yards too soon. Midshipman John Caskey snapped the tape in 1:14.8 while Cadet George Berger was only a half step behind in third.

Individual Army titles were taken by Cadets Leon Dombrowski in the 35 pound weight throw with a toss of 47 feet 2⅛ inches, and Phil Lansing with a 13 foot pole vault.

Other Navy crowns were grabbed by Capt. George Brown, Jr., in the shot with a toss of 46 feet 3¾ inches; Bert Atkinson, Jr., who high jumped 6 feet 1 inch, and Frederick Bowman, with a 22 feet 11½ inch leap in the broad jump.

RUUD REPORTED RELEASED FROM PRISON BY NAZIS

New York, March 4 (AP).—The Office of War Information said tonight the Nazi controled Scandinavian Telegraph bureau had reported that Birger Ruud, Olympic ski jumping champion in 1932 and 1936, had been released from the Grini concentration camp in Norway after nearly a year's imprisonment.

Last month the Swedish newspaper Aftontidingen reported that Ruud had been sent to Germany, but the OWI quoted the STB dispatch as saying the plan "never materialized."

Ruud and his brothers, Sigmund and Asbjorn, in company with a number of other prominent Norwegian skiers, were arrested by the Nazis in 1943 for arranging illegal skiing contests for the unofficial Norwegian championships. All but Birger were released last summer.

Phillies Have a New Name— It's Blue Jays

Philadelphia, Pa., March 4 (AP).—The Philadelphia National league club announced today that its new nickname—chosen in a prize contest that produced 5,064 letters and 634 other suggestions—will be the Blue Jays.

[The jay is defined as "a small, crow-like bird, usually of brilliant coloring; also, a poor actor, a country bumpkin, a greenhorn."]

The winning name was submitted by Mrs. John L. Crooks of Philadelphia, who received a $100 war bond. Mrs. Crooks chose the name, she said, "because it reflects a new team spirit. The blue jay is colorful in personality and plumage. His plumage is a brilliant blue, a color the Phillies could use decoratively and psychologically."

Will Carry Out Motif.

Bob Carpenter, president of the club, said he hoped to have the club's farm system identified by the same color. His Wilmington, Del., team is called the Blue Rocks and the New Bradford, Pa., outlet may be named the Blue Wings.

The new name with a blue jay pictured above it probably will be on the sleeves of club uniforms this season, General Manager Herb Pennock said.

Thirteen Members Signed.

All manner of names were suggested for the Phillies, from "daisies" to "stinkers."

Thirteen members of the club are now under contract and will report for spring training in two weeks.

Illini Quintet Wins, 53 to 27, Over Gophers

ball team closed its season tonight by upsetting the Boilermakers from Purdue, 51 to 45. It was Indiana's second victory in 12 Big Ten games, and Purdue's fourth defeat in 12 conference games.

Even the partisan home team crowd of about 4,000 wasn't too excited when Indiana led its traditional rivals from Lafayette, 23 to 20, at the end of the first half.

Hoosiers in Form.

When Purdue came back in the opening minutes of the second half to tie the score at 29 and then go ahead, 35 to 31, it looked like Indiana had shot its bolt. But the Hoosiers were invincible from there on in. Dick Peed, former Richmond High star, playing the outstanding game of his first year in Big Ten competition, sparking the Indiana attack with 11 points. Hitting with amazing accuracy and consistency, Indiana pulled away to win coasting.

The victory gave Indiana a season record of only seven games won in 22 contests. The Boilermakers were knocked out of a chance to share runner-up position in the Big Ten, finishing in a fourth place tie with Northwestern, and ended their season with a record of 11 victories in 21 games. Lineups:

SORENSEN OUT AS FORD CHIEF OF PRODUCTION

Clashes with Other Aids Reported.

C. E. Sorensen.

Detroit, Mich., March 4 [Special].—Charles E. Sorensen, 62, close associate of Henry Ford for 40 years and production genius of the Ford Motor company, severed his Ford ties today under circumstances which caused one local newspaper to headline the event, "Henry Ford Fires Sorensen." The Danish born production expert, who is credited with creating the moving assembly line and who designed and supervised construction of the Willow Run bomber plant, announced his resignation from the Ford organization in a statement issued at Miami Beach, Fla., where he has been vacationing. He gave poor health as a reason, but friends here discounted this, asserting he has been indulging in vigorous sports in the south.

Paid $220,004 in 1941.

Sorensen was one of the Ford company's three vice presidents. The others are Henry Ford II., 26 year old son of the late Edsel, and B. J. Craig, who is also treasurer. The official salary list for 1941 gave Sorensen's salary as $220,004 for that year, a figure exceeded in Detroit only by Edsel Ford and C. E. Wilson, president of the General Motors corporation.

Sorenson's announcement follows:

"In answer to your inquiries I am resigning as vice president of the Ford Motor company after 39 years of continuous service.

"I have enjoyed every minute of it and it is with great regret that I am asking Mr. Henry Ford to relieve me of my duties. The great war program that was developed by the company is well organized and is in competent hands.

"I am compelled to take a much needed rest. I expect to return to Detroit about May 1. I have no immediate plans for the future."

Leaves Bennett at Top.

Retirement of Sorensen leaves Harry H. Bennett, personnel manager, as the top man in the Ford organization next to Henry Ford, who resumed the presidency after Edsel's death last May. Henry II., a Ford director, was placed on the inactive list by the navy last July 26 and in August was released from the naval reserve to take up duties with the company. He was elected a vice president in January this year.

Bennett and Sorensen are reported to have clashed frequently in the past but their encounters never got into the company records.

"Shakeup" Was Expected.

Reports that a shakeup was expected in the Ford company have been prevalent here since the revelation that Sorensen was one of the top salaried officials of the motor industry. He delayed his annual vacation this year until after Christmas, and when he left for Florida it was rumored that he was out.

Ford is said to have talked to Sorensen by phone from Dearborn a month ago and at that time it was said that the two "talked business—serious business—about the car." The Detroit Free Press said tonight that the decision to oust Sorensen was made in a phone call from Ford, who is at his winter home in Way's, Ga. No authority was quoted for this statement, which appeared in a signed story by the newspaper's automobile editor.

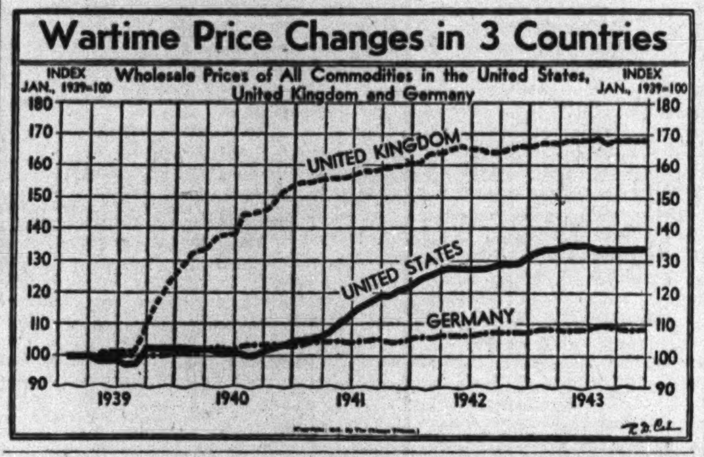
Ray Rausch, acting production chief since Sorensen went on his vacation, will continue temporarily in that capacity, it was understood. Rausch was elected a director last summer.

Joined Ford in 1904.

Sorensen came to the United States from Denmark at 14 and got a job in 1904 with the newly organized Ford Motor company as a pattern maker. He and Ford became close friends. He became known as the man who could put into practice the production theories Ford expounded.

He is said to have demonstrated the practicability of the moving assembly line by dragging an automobile chassis on a tow rope thru the various assembly stages. He substituted casting for forging wherever possible. When the Willow Run bomber plant was projected he designed the mammoth factory in rough sketches which he turned over to the architects.

He has been the company's production chief since shortly after the close of World War I. Before that he headed Ford's foundries and supervised construction of Ford plants abroad.



Grain Trade to Handle U.S. Sale of Wheat

Distribution of government owned wheat will be handled by the regular grain trade as the result of an agreement reached late Friday between representatives of the Commodity Credit corporation and warehousemen. The contract will become operative as soon as signed by warehousemen and is expected eventually to embrace all markets. The grain will be handled on a fixed fee per bushel basis, and is expected to speed distribution of the wheat.

The CCC will allocate wheat for feed to purchasers on the basis of 1943 sales with warehousemen parceling it out to distributors for sale to consumers who have certificates issued by the CCC.

Corn Sold for Lend-Lease.

Sales under the new program are expected to start this week, or as soon as the CCC can distribute certificates to those entitled to buy the grain. It is expected that March sales will aggregate 18 million bushels, or about half the average monthly sales during the latter half of 1943.

Purchase of 600,000 bushels of cash corn for lend-lease purposes by the CCC earlier in the week was confirmed by Chicago elevator men. This is the first large lend-lease purchase of corn, an acute scarcity of which has restricted live stock and poultry feeding operations. The elevator men were said to have told CCC officials they did not have 600,000 bushels on hand but could deliver it if given a little time, an offer which was accepted. They will be released from their contract if the government finds it necessary to place restrictions on the purchase and sale of corn.

Say It Is Needed in U. S.

Cash corn handlers admitted they did not like to dispose of corn for use abroad, asserting that it would result in small amounts available for shipment to New England and other areas urgently in need of feed grain. In all 800,000 bushels are involved, of which 200,000 bushels will be drawn from stocks owned by the CCC.

Grain futures advanced late yesterday on the Chicago Board of Trade on short covering. Wheat closed ⅛ to ⅜ cent higher, oats gained ¼ to ⅜ cent, and rye ¼ to ⅝ cent a bushel. Trading was relatively light. Rain and snow fell over a large part of the winter wheat belt and was regarded as favorable for the new crop.

SPARE TRUCK PART STOCKPILE PLANNED BY ODT

Truck operators will be able to obtain rebuilt engines, transmissions, and rear axle assemblies thru plans announced yesterday by the office of defense transportation. This war time rehabilitation program will aid in maintaining the nation's motor trucks by obtaining economical use of replacement parts and decreasing the drain on manufacturers making new units.

WPB has already included more than 18,000 transmission and 7,000 rear axle assemblies as an initial inventory for the program and will add 138,000 engines, ODT said. Fleet owners with 25 or more vehicles may buy one spare unit for each vehicle.

The new plan will be discussed in a series of meetings beginning March 13.

Chicago Bank Clearings Gain for Week and Month

Chicago bank clearings last week totaled $490,400,000, compared with $438,600,000 during the preceding week, and $441,200,000 in the corresponding week last year, the Chicago Clearing House association reported yesterday. The total for February was $1,998,931,877, compared with $1,639,653,825 in February, 1943. The figures:

	Clearings.	Balances.
Monday	$76,000,000	$10,100,000

Chicago Gets 10 Million More in War Contracts

Chicago's war contracts were increased by $10,039,000 last week, the Chicago Association of Commerce said yesterday.

134 SHIPS ARE BUILT IN MONTH; INCLUDE FIRST OF NEW VICTORY TYPE

Washington, D. C., March 4 (AP).—Merchant shipyards delivered 134 vessels in February, including the first of the fast new Victory ships. This total was 10 larger than in January, but far below December's 208.

"Indications are that production will continue to rise during the next few months as yards get under way on the Victory ship program and complete the conversion of facilities for building various military types of ships," the maritime commission predicted in its monthly production report today.

Emphasis on fast cargo ships useable in post-war trade was reflected in the February delivery of 18 of the commission's standard sea-type freighters. The slow, but easy-to-build, Liberty ships, however, continued to lead the list, with 77 delivered.

Packaged Oil Going to Spain on Old Permits

Washington, D. C., March 4 (AP).—Outstanding export licenses for packaged petroleum goods to be shipped to Spain were not cancelled at the time a British-American embargo on tanker loadings for Spain was announced January 28, the state department said today.

The statement was issued following reports that a quarter million gallons of high grade Pennsylvania lubricating oil had been loaded at an east coast port for transport to Spain within the next few days.

Amount Held Small.

The amount of lubricants being shipped represents only a small portion of the petroleum products which Spain could import were it not for the suspension of loadings, the state department declared.

The statement recalled that on Jan. 28, the department announced that "the loadings of Spanish tankers with petroleum products for Spain have been suspended, thru action of the state department, pending a reconsideration of trade and general relations between Spain and the United States in the light of trends in Spanish policy."

This announcement relates only to Spanish tanker loadings in the Caribbean area, the department explained. In addition to the suspension of tanker loadings, the department decided to suspend the granting of export licenses for the shipment of packaged petroleum products, including lubricants from the United States, so long as the tanker loadings were suspended, the department said.

Licenses Still in Force.

In taking this decision, however, the department did not cancel outstanding licenses for packaged petroleum goods.

The packaged goods involved in the Philadelphia report are being shipped under licenses granted before the suspension took effect, it was said.

A departmental spokesman indicated that the products being shipped are mainly special lubricants required for Spanish industry and that agents of the department will trace all shipments after their arrival to make sure they do not fall into enemy hands.

ANGUS CATTLE BRING RECORD PRICES AT SALE

Two hundred and seventy-six bulls and cows sold for $366,000 at the three day National Aberdeen-Angus show and sale in Dexter park pavilion to set the highest total on record for the breed, it was announced at the concluding session last night. Average price per animal was $1,326, compared with $1,260 in 1943.

The modern record price for a bull was paid the second day when Prince Eric of Sunbeam sold for $40,000. Top price paid yesterday was $5,100 for Miss Burgess II. of Roano, reserve grand champion cow of the show. Shown by Roano farms, East Lansing, Mich., she was bought by the Ralph L. Smith farms, Chillicothe, Mo.

Liquor Stocks Rise on Cuban Exports Curb

New York, March 4 (AP).—The stock market today finished an uneventful week with scattered liquors and specialties advancing, but the list as a whole was little changed.

The liquor gains came in the wake of Cuba's temporary embargo on exports of beverage alcohol to the United States and reports of heavy domestic sales for some distillers. New 1944 highs were posted for Schenley, up 3⅛; White Rock and Flintkote. Gainers of fractions to a point or so included Distillers corporation, National Distillers, Canada Dry, Cuban-American Sugar, Montgomery Ward, International Harvester, and J. I. Case.

Index Is Unchanged.

The Associated Press 60-stock average was unchanged at 51.3 and on the week showed a net loss of 0.1 of a point. Dealings were relatively slack thruout the week and today's total of 332,440 shares was the smallest since Feb. 5.

Moderate firmness Monday lifted the average to a peak for the year but purchasing was highly selective and apparently based mainly on earnings and dividend hopes. Profit taking Tuesday started the recently strong rails on a downward trend. Offerings were inspired by disappointing January net income compilations.

Moderate and selective recoveries predominated Wednesday and Thursday without much outstanding news to bolster the trend. The power and light division came to life yesterday, as industrials and rails moved lower, apparently spurred by reports the securities and exchange commission would approve integration programs of several companies.

CHICAGO LIST SAGS.

Prices and trading volume declined again on the Chicago Stock exchange yesterday. Transactions totaled only 9,000 shares, and of 68 issues traded only 21 advanced and 30 declined. Most active issues were off fractionally. Asbestos Manufacturing, Commonwealth Edison, and Advance Aluminum all closed ⅛ down, and Cities Service lost ¼. Three new 1943-'44 peaks were reached, with Consumers company A, at 11, up 1; Consumers company B, 4½, up ¼, and Gardner-Denver, 17¼, up ⅛.

RAIL BONDS HEAVY.

New York, March 4 (AP).—The bond market was mixed today with reorganization rail issues under pressure. Losses ranged from fractions to 2 points for New Haven obligations, Baltimore and Ohio 4s of '48, Rock Island 4s of '88, and Denver and Rio Grande 4½s.

Investors' Guide

Sunday, March 5, 1944.

[Copyright: 1944: By The Chicago Tribune.]

OUTLOOK FOR EQUITIES.

Investors are familiar with the arguments usually advanced in favor of common stocks for longer term investment, such as the prospects for lower taxes and improved tax legislation, possible inflation, and the new industrial techniques and efficiencies developed thru war time experience.

Two additional, but less familiar, factors of considerable weight are listed by a brokerage firm as favoring equities. One is the fact that the newer industries and some having particular appeal because of growth characteristics have relied almost entirely on common stock issues as capitalization. Examples of such industries are airlines, television, electronics, plastics, and vitamins.

The other factor is the relatively favorable tax treatment of long term capital gains. The maximum income tax on a gain from the sale of capital assets held more than six months is 25 per cent, in contrast to rates reaching a maximum of over 90 per cent on ordinary income.

Individuals in the high tax brackets, and not necessarily the 88 per cent bracket, are much more interested in a long term capital gain than in additional ordinary income. They can keep 75 per cent of the profit made on an asset held more than six months, but only a small portion of any increase in their income from salary, interest, dividends, or short term capital gains.

The risks involved in seeking capital gains are small for the high bracket tax payer, for if his venture proves a failure, most of the loss may be offset by lower income tax liability for the year.

Brokers report a sizable volume of money seeking opportunities for capital gains, and with the likelihood that individual income tax rates will continue high for some time after the war, such funds are considered a market factor of no little significance.

LOWER OUTPUT OF FATS IN 1945 VIEWED LIKELY

Supply Ample This Year, Says Bank.

Production of fats and oils is expected to be increased during 1944 with prospects good from a supply standpoint, the Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago said yesterday in its monthly report on business conditions in the 7th reserve district. However, factors point toward an extremely tight situation in 1945 and serious adjustments may be expected after the war "when price supports become ineffective," the report said.

"Income to United States farmers from the marketings of butter fat, the lard in hogs, and from the oil-bearing crops has recently accounted for about 10 per cent of the total income from marketings," the report said.

"For the farmers in the five states of the district, income from these items has accounted for 13 per cent of total cash farm income. Roughly one-third of the United States farm income from these sources is paid to the farmers in the five states."

Support Prices Raised.

Increased support prices for important oil seed crops have been announced by the war food administration. Growers are guaranteed $1.94 a bushel for 1944 crop green or yellow soybeans, No. 2 grade or better, at country elevators or other normal delivery points, compared with $1.80 for the 1943 crop.

The support price for flaxseed is based on $2.95 a bushel for No. 1 seed at Chicago and Minneapolis, a rise of roughly 10 cents from the 1943 level, and WFA raised its price for peanuts by $10 a ton. Hogs are supported at $13.75 a hundred pounds at Chicago.

"It is expected from preliminary indications that, due to the feed situation, farmers will reduce their hog production and that 1945 will see a rather sharp reduction in the contribution of lard and pork fats to the fats and oils supplies, probably as much as 400 to 500 million pounds," the bank said.

Predicts Price Pressure.

Serious readjustments may be expected after the war, it continued. Price supports are scheduled to continue for two years after the war, but the bank suggested that once the Pacific war "proceeds to the point where important sources of oils are again freed and the output becomes available in this country, and the peak of European demands has been reached or passed, considerable downward pressure may be expected on oil-bearing crops and animal fat products produced in this country. When that pressure rises it may prove difficult to maintain support prices effectively."

"Corn belt farmers will then be faced with the problem of adjusting their farm enterprises to meet the changing situation," the bank said. "Soybeans may be found to be a lower cost source of oils than hogs, since using corn to produce lard is considered by many to be a relatively expensive and wasteful method of obtaining oil and fat."

UNION ASKS U.S. TO TAKE OVER DEERE'S PLANT

Moline, Ill., March 4 [Special].—Officers and members of local 150, United Farm Equipment and Metal Workers of America [CIO], have asked the federal government to take over operation of the John Deere plow works in Moline, union representatives announced today. The factory employs approximately 1,500 persons and is engaged both in war work and the production of plows.

The union statement contended the management had locked out several employes and threatened the lockout of hundreds more tonight. The company contended these employes and those threatened with dismissal were not meeting the company's production standards.

War Workers' Award Entries Close Thursday

Nominations for the Chicago Tribune War Workers Award for February will close Thursday. The award is given monthly for outstanding performance on the production front. Workers in war plants in Illinois, Lake county, Ind., and Racine and Kenosha counties, Wis., are eligible. Nominations should be sent to the War Workers Award editor, Tribune Tower, Chicago [11], Ill.

Cotton Belt Is Losing Rank as Producer of Pork Supply

BY ARNOLD ERICKSON.

The cotton belt which shifted heavily to hog and corn raising a decade ago under Washington crop planner guidance is not the threat to corn belt pork producers that it was during the slim production period a few years ago. Converting cotton plantations into hog farms on a large scale was held impractical by many agricultural leaders, and the swing back to the corn belt is not a surprise to them.

Altho all parts of the country on Jan. 1 had more hogs than ever before, the southern share of the total for the entire country was smallest since 1932 and the corn belt's share largest since 1934. Hogs follow corn, the principal hog feed, and the north central states are best adapted to production of this grain. Despite New Deal promoting the southern plantations can never be a real contender for the corn or pork crown when volume is needed, it was said.

Survey Hog Population.

A recent department of agriculture survey disclosed 57,420,000 hogs of all ages on farms in the north central states, including Iowa, Illinois, Indiana, Missouri, and Ohio. These are the largest hog raising states in the order named. This total comprised 68.5 per cent of the nation's total. Back in 1937 the north central region had only 26,554,000 hogs, at that time 61.6 per cent of the country's total.

Production in the south continues large, but further expansion is presented chiefly by the inability of the southern soils to produce the grain needed for pork production. On Jan. 1 the south central states had 13,644,000 hogs, 16.2 per cent of the nation's total, whereas in the years 1935 to 1940 the region controled 18 to 20 per cent of the total.

The shift of a larger share of the pork industry into the south, dating to the pig killing days of 1933, was accelerated by the marked difference in labor cost. Cheap southern labor made it possible for plantation owners and packers to make money on hogs and pork at low prices that placed farmers and packers in the north at a disadvantage. The millions of pigs and bred sows destroyed by the AAA were taken chiefly from the corn belt where herds were depleted rapidly under management of the first crop planners set up in Washington 11 years ago.

More inroads on corn belt production were made in later years thru penalties imposed on farmers raising more hogs than AAA committeemen permitted, and by fines for exceeding corn acreage plans laid out for the program of scarcity. As a result of this forced shift many new packing plants were built in the south as hog raising expanded there, while some northern plants shut down as volume declined and per unit costs increased.

Southern Slaughter Gains.

The building of new packing plants in the south has enabled that region to butcher a larger percentage of the hogs raised there. Before 1932 the south central area slaughtered less than 3 per cent of the country's total under federal inspection. In 1937 this percentage rose to 4.7 and last year set a new record of 5.7. Formerly most of the southern hog producers had to find northern markets for their animals.

Hog Prices Lower

The Chicago hog price average last week declined 15 cents per hundred pounds to $13.55, lowest in three weeks and $1.10 under a year ago. The cattle average was unchanged at $15, compared with $15.40 a year ago. Lambs averaged 25 cents under last week at $15.90. The price was $16.10 a year ago.

Park District Debt Is Cut 7.5 Millions in '43

How the Chicago park district is reducing its funded debt and its total liabilities is shown in a comparative balance sheet made public by Robert J. Dunham, president.

The parks' gross funded debt as of Dec. 31 was $75,304,700, or $6,405,000 less than the $81,709,700 of Dec. 31, 1942. Sinking funds on hand were less by about $592,000, but the sinking fund and gross funded debt combined were $5,900,654 less than they were a year ago.

Reduction of $5,165,248.

Floating debt was shown as $2,795,193, an increase of $735,046 as compared to the figure at the end of 1942. Giving effect to this, the statement showed the parks' total debt, exclusive of tax anticipation warrants, was reduced by $5,165,248.

On warrants outstanding and accrued interest on them a reduction of $2,367,331 was made during the year. The total debt of the parks Dec. 1 stood at $74,088,676, or $7,532,579 less than the figure of Dec. 31, 1942.

It was also shown that the total debt has been reduced by 53 millions since the consolidation of all the smaller park districts into one in 1934.

Bond Debt Reduced.

The board of education reported that at the end of 1943 its bonded debt had been reduced about 3 million dollars during the year, after giving effect to an increase in sinking funds. Its floating debt, however, was about $218,000 more than it was a year earlier. The total bonded debt at the start of this year approximated $21,500,000.

The board had outstanding educational fund tax warrants for 41 millions as of Dec. 31, about the same as a year before, but had nearly 2 millions more cash in the sinking fund for this item.

EASTERN GROUP BUYS FORMER CHICAGO FIRM

Rahway, N. J., March 4 (AP).—Frank Campbell, New York industrialist, announced today a New York group which he heads had bought control of the National Pneumatic company, manufacturers of automatic door and signal equipment, which came to Rahway from Chicago in 1919. The announcement said Campbell would succeed Frank Johnson, one of the company's founders, as president.

People and Events

C. P. Monaghan.

C. P. Monaghan has been named manager of the news and sales training section of Edison General Electric Appliance company, makers of Hotpoint Electrical appliances, it was announced yesterday. Monaghan has been in the advertising and sales department of the Public Service Company of Northern Illinois since 1933. Before that he was engaged in industrial publicity and advertising.

Arthur G. Sullivan of Buffalo, N. Y. was elected president of the Chemical Fire Extinguisher Manufacturers association at its 25th annual meeting in the Hotel Sherman. Herman W. Diener of Chicago was elected treasurer.

George H. Meilinger, formerly of Chicago, has been appointed manager of the household refrigeration department of the Westinghouse Electrical Appliance division. He has been with the company five years.

WFA INCREASES MILK SUBSIDIES 20 TO 30 CENTS

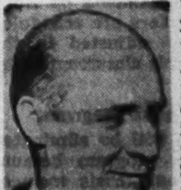
Washington, D. C., March 4 (AP).—The war food administration announced sharp increases today in its subsidy rates for dairy production in March and April and promised at the same time to reëxamine returns to the producer from milk used in such products as cheese, evaporated milk, butter and skim milk powder.

The subsidies are designed to compensate dairymen for increases in production costs since the OPA established cellings on milk last year.

The new rates on milk vary from 50 cents in Illinois and 14 other midwestern and western states, to 80 cents per hundred pounds in five southern states. Farmers selling butterfat rather than whole milk will get a flat subsidy of 8 cents a pound. Rates in effect during January and February ranged from 30 to 50 cents for milk and from 5 to 6 cents for butterfat.

ELGIN WATCH'S EARNINGS RISE ON PEAK SALES

Net Income Equal to $2.85 a Share.



T. Albert Potter.

Elgin National Watch company's sales in 1943 were largest in the company's history and almost 25 per cent more than in 1942, T. Albert Potter, president, disclosed yesterday in the annual report. Profit was $1,140,176, equal to $2.85 a share, compared with $1,123,627, or $2.81 a share, in 1942.

The 1943 profit was shown after deducting $176,000 for contingencies, compared with $200,000. After charging contingency reserve with $76,000 net additional refund on 1942 war contracts, there remained $300,000, part of which the company plans to use for training and rehabilitating employes on their return from military service.

Income Taxes Increase.

Potter explained the small gain in net income, despite large expansion in sales, was due to higher taxes and operating costs. Federal taxes on income, less post-war refund, amounted to $2,125,000, against $1,925,000 in 1942.

The report disclosed that the company is making sapphire products, which it described as critical materials never before manufactured in this country. These are fabricated by Elgin from synthetic sapphire, such as now manufactured by Union Carbide and Carbon corporation, for use in jeweled watch movements.

During 1943, Elgin sold a small quantity of civilian watches from its inventory, but because of pressing war orders was unable to place in civilian production some materials on hand, as permitted by the war production board.

"Imports Flood Retail Channel."

"The importation of foreign made watches continues to flood the retail channels of this country," Potter said. "We understand from unofficial sources that imports in 1943 were almost three times those of normal years. We will not be in the happy condition of many other manufacturers whose manufacture of civilian products has been stopped, but whose market has not been usurped by foreign products."

John R. Thompson company's profit in 1943 increased to $811,271, equal to $2.74 a share, from $560,285, or $1.89 a share, in 1942. Last year's earnings were shown after reserving $250,000 for post-war contingencies. No similar deduction was made in 1942.

Spiegel, Inc., reported a net loss of $2,376,714 during 1943, compared with a net loss of $1,375,821 in 1942. Net sales decreased to $27,827,618 from $40,915,353.

Credit System Changed.

M. J. Spiegel Jr., president, informed stockholders that the unsatisfactory result was caused primarily by the change from an exclusive time payment business featuring "no charge for credit" to cash business with a time payment service offered with a carrying charge. The loss was increased by shortages of man power and merchandise and by larger collection expenses. However, the extraordinary expenses have declined since midsummer, he said.

Despite the loss shown by Spiegel on an accrual basis there was a taxable income of approximately $410,000 in 1943 on the cash collection basis used in computing federal income tax liability. The tax was $165,000.

Coca-Cola company's profit in 1943 increased to $25,526,222, equal to $5.93 a common share, compared with $23,267,445, or $5.37 a share, in 1942.

10 SCHOOLS LOSE ARMY STUDENTS IN THREE STATES

13,000 Trainees Will Be Cut to 3,700.

Curtailment of the army specialized training program will reduce the 13,000 trainees now enrolled in 23 colleges and universities in Illinois, Michigan, and Wisconsin to 3,700 in 13 schools, Maj. Gen. H. S. Aurand, commanding general of the 6th service command, said yesterday.

The soldier-students will complete their departures from campuses to new military assignments by April 1, he said. Transfers are scheduled on a cycle basis adjusted to the status of the men's classroom training.

Eliminated from Program.

Schools which will be eliminated from the ASTP program because they have had only basic trainees will be: De Paul university and the Illinois Institute of Technology, in Chicago; Lake Forest college, in Lake Forest; North Central college, at Naperville; Wheaton college, at Wheaton; Bradley Polytechnic, in Peoria; Illinois college, at Jacksonville; Michigan State Normal, at Ypsilanti, Mich.; Kalamazoo college, Mich., and Hope college, Holland, Mich.

Ripon college, at Ripon, Wis., and St. Norbert college, at West Du Pere, Wis., will lose basic A. S. T. P. units, but will continue their R. O. T. C. programs.

Medical, dental, and veterinary curriculums in the A. S. T. P. program will be continued at Michigan State college, at East Lansing, Mich.; Wayne university, in Detroit, and at the Universities of Chicago, Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin, and Detroit.

Some Programs Not Affected.

Professional training programs will not be affected by the curtailment at Loyola university, Chicago; Northwestern university; Marquette university, at Milwaukee, in medical and dental, and the Michigan College of Mining and Technology at Houghton, Mich., in advanced engineering.

Approximately 1,100 students in the senior division basic R. O. T. C. will not be affected by the curtailment in the 6th service command.

Gen. Aurand said the departures of trainees from a campus constitute troop movements, and the enrollments in the individual schools cannot be broken down. In the national curtailment the number of soldier students will be reduced from 145,000 to 35,000.

3D WOMAN SHOT MRS. WILLIAMS, SAYS NAUGHTON

The theory of Lt. John A. Quinn of the East Chicago av. police station that Mrs. Adele Born Williams was slain in a struggle over a gun with her daughter, Mrs. Patricia Goodbody, in the former's Drake hotel room last Jan. 19, does not fit the known facts in the case, Capt. Michael Naughton, head of the police department's Scotland Yard detail, asserted yesterday.

Lt. Quinn, who first voiced his theory at the original inquest hearing, reiterated it at the second session of the inquest Friday.

"The information we have all supports the theory that a third woman was in the room, and that she shot Mrs. Williams," Capt. Naughton said.

He pointed out that two business men waiting in the corridor had seen the woman emerge from the room, followed by Mrs. Goodbody, and that the victim's description of her assailant, given during the brief interval that she retained consciousness, tallied with that offered by the two men.

The captain added, however, that he is not excluding the possibility that the assassin was known by Mrs. Goodbody.

5 ROB AUTOIST; LEAVE HIM TIED IN CAR IN ALLEY

Nathan Vihon, 42, of 915 Carmen av., a coin-movie machine repairman, reported to police yesterday that five young men forced themselves into his car and robbed him of $18 and a ring valued at $50. They left him blindfolded and bound hand and foot in his car in an alley at 1347 Foster av.

Police said they believed the same five men seized Fred Rizza, 45, of 4703 Gladys av. in a similar manner a short time later in the day. They blindfolded him and drove about the city for five hours before they abandoned the car at 21st st. and Wentworth av. They took $80 and a $300 ring from Rizza.

Rizza told police that the men, two of whom were armed, stopped three times. Police said they may have been the gang who entered the Garfield Arms hotel at 3256 Maypole av. and took $125 from the desk clerk, Jack Bergman.

$100,000 Fire in Joliet Ruins Cooperage Plant

Good Night, Sweet Prince

TOMORROW The Tribune will begin reprinting in daily instalments the current number one best seller, "Good Night, Sweet Prince," which is the life story of John Barrymore.

Barrymore was easily the most romantic figure the American stage and screen ever produced. For 30 years his name was a hallmark of artistic quality. His fabulous escapades, his marital difficulties, his excesses and prodigalities, made him known to millions. This greatest individualist of them all died in 1942 at the age of 60.

The story of his life has been written by Gene Fowler, an old and intimate friend who re-created the Barrymore career in a biography so filled with wit and zest that it joined the best seller lists immediately upon publication. Fowler is an ex-newspaper man who has written novels, plays, biographies, and popular history. He chose as the title of this book Horatio's farewell to Hamlet, "Good night, sweet prince"—words that also serve as Barrymore's epitaph. It was as Hamlet that John Barrymore achieved his greatest acclaim.

Be sure to read the first instalment of this great book in tomorrow's Daily Tribune.

I Meet John Barrymore

By GENE FOWLER

(Copyright, 1943, 1944, by Gene Fowler.
Published by arrangement with the Viking Press, Inc.)

I WAS A REPORTER at the time, and not entirely in the good graces of the city editor. I had come to the newspaper in 1918 under the sponsorship of Damon Runyon. One of my few admirers on the staff was John McMahon, the drama editor. McMahon thought highly of me because I chewed tobacco when writing poems.

To help free me from the kennels of the city editor's displeasure, he sometimes asked that I be "lent" to his department to write feature stories. One November day McMahon borrowed me, saying: "Arthur Hopkins has a play that is not catching on. 'Redemption.' Don't bother seeing it. It gives you the creeps. But Arthur is a prince. Get an interview with John Barrymore. He's in it, poor guy."

I visited Barrymore in his dressing room after the matinee performance. He was perspiring and swearing eloquently while molting a false beard. I never had seen him before, on or off stage.

"What in hell do you want?" he said without turning in his chair. My reportorial eye caught his in the mirror. We exchanged glares by means of the looking glass, after which he wheeled about, rather happily, I fancied, to ask, "Where were you last night?"

"At Lipton's saloon, then at the Murray Hill baths. Where were you?"

He rose, cinched his belt. "I was with the Baron."

He began to put on a coat that seemed in shape and size to be the property of some one larger-bodied and less solvent than himself. Before the somewhat seedy coat had enveloped him I saw with an (Continued on page five.)

O KAYE!

LOOKING AT HOLLYWOOD WITH HEDDA HOPPER

(Copyright: 1944: The Chicago Tribune.)

Hollywood.

A FEW WEEKS ago, after catching Danny Kaye in "Up in Arms" at a sneak preview, I wrote that he was a sensational comedian—"a whole blitzkrieg, with so much talent that it scared you."

Well, now the picture's opened and the critics are raving about the terrific job done by Danny Kaye. They've fallen in line and admit that the rest of the screen comedians had better look out.

Danny Kaye is about as funny a man as you'll ever see. He may even be a great comedian, and great comedians—the true talents such as Harold Lloyd, Will Rogers, and Bob Hope—only come along once in a blue moon.

It's too early to tell whether Kaye's that good. He's only done one picture, but it's a personal socko for the kid from Brooklyn. If his next pictures match up to this, then Danny is destined to be one of the big ten stars in the business.

The insiders here—producers, executives, directors, and actors—got their first glimpse of Kaye in action in "Up in Arms" on March 3 at the Pantages theater. This was a double-barreled event, because it was a charity first night, with all proceeds going to the Hollywood guild canteen operated by Ann Lehr, sometimes called "the Angel of Hollywood." Ann Lehr and her associates feed and house 5,000 service men a week, with all funds derived strictly from contributions and charitable affairs such as the "Up in Arms" premiere.

Featuring the same original type comedy that has made him top man on Broadway for the last five years, Danny Kaye brings a new brand of humor to motion pictures. There's never been anybody quite like him, just as there has never been anybody quite like Ed Wynn or Eddie Cantor. Kaye's is the first completely new comedy style that has been developed in years.

The man is a zany, make no mistake about that. He's mad and crazy and incredibly funny in his brilliant routines that are a combination of satirical character studies, catchy songs, dances, double-talk, and screwball antics.

Kaye is hilarious, but, unlike Hope or Bing Crosby, nobody can tell you anything funny that he's said. He's a natural clown, not a gagman. He isn't fast on the trigger with a snappy come-back. His technique is based on the magnificent expressions that he can produce on that dead-pan face of his, or the use of his long, thin, expressive hands, and on a practically perfect sense of timing. You may not laugh at what Kaye says, but you will laugh at his reactions.

DANNY KAYE

At left: In a casual moment on the set Danny talks with the girl who's had most to do with his success, his wife, Sylvia Fine.

At right: He poses with Dinah Shore in a scene from "Up in Arms."

Success is no Cinderella story for Danny Kaye. He's earned every bit of fame and fortune that is his now or will be his in the future.

Many people will soon start to take credit for discovering Danny Kaye, but don't you believe them. Nobody discovered Kaye, altho he pounded Broadway for nearly 12 years trying for his big chance. Every producer in New York had his chance at Kaye at one time or another, but none of them thought enough of his talent to gamble as much as $40 a week. And there were times during those 12 years when you could have had Kaye for $40.

For four of those 12 years Danny was a summer fixture on the famous "Borscht circuit," the summer resorts in the Catskills. It was a regular merry-go-round routine. He worked in the summer and earned enough money to pay for cigarets and maybe a new suit every other season. In the winter he hied back to New York and hit the offices of the booking agents and producers. In the spring he was broke again and lining up a job for the summer in the Catskills.

The fourth summer Danny met a dance team, Dave Harvey and Kathleen Young, who asked him to join their act for the winter. Danny became the comedy element of the act and thought he was doing pretty well until the trio hit Detroit. A. B. Marcus, a vaudeville producer, caught the act and offered Dave and Kathleen a contract to tour the orient. A business man and no sentimentalist, Marcus went straight to the point. "That Kaye fellow," he said emphatically, "I don't want him." But Dave and Kathleen were loyal, insisted that Danny remain with the act, and finally Marcus relented. He took all three—at the same price he had offered the two dancers.

So Kaye played nearly every town from Detroit to San Francisco, and by the time the unit reached the coast he was the star of the show. The troupe left San Francisco in February, 1934, on a two year tour of China, Japan, and all way points.

It was this tour that put the final polishing touches on Danny. Because some of his gags didn't get over to the audiences, altho most of them understood English, Danny developed the double-talk routines and pantomime spots for which he is now famous. He couldn't make them laugh at his jokes, so he made them laugh at him.

When Danny returned to the United States he thought he was on his way, but he soon learned that he was exactly where he had been when he started the tour. He couldn't get a job for several months. Finally Nick Long Jr., a dancer, signed him as a stooge, and Danny went to London. He came back on practically the next boat, because, to be frank, the English didn't go for him either.

Then he met Sylvia Fine, and that was the key that finally opened the door.

Danny and Sylvia didn't hit it off very well at first. Just one of those things. But Sylvia did see that Danny was a potentially great funny man. She watched him whip thru his routine at a rehearsal and telephoned a friend, Max Liebman, a director. "Max," she said, "there's a boy over here who's really got it. I think he's the comedian you're looking for."

Max came over—and thus was born the firm of Kaye, Fine, and Liebman. Kaye is the actor, Sylvia writes most of the material, and Liebman handles the business end.

Success didn't come overnight. There were a few interludes, a couple of mediocre New York revues. In between the interludes and revues Danny and Sylvia got married. And then, bango—Danny became a sensation in the show world. He opened one night at La Martinique, the swank New York supper club, and the next day he was the hit of Broadway.

Danny Kaye, Sylvia, and Max had arrived.

The rest is history. You know the story. Moss Hart wrote "Lady in the Dark" and offered Danny a solo spot. Then came "Let's Face It," the biggest smash of the year, and Sam Goldwyn, who knows a good thing when he sees it, tagged Danny for five years and set his writers to work on "Up in Arms."

You'll hear a lot of Danny Kaye in the next few months. You'll probably hear he's a show-off, an eccentric.

But don't we all do silly things? I've got my hats, and you may not believe it, but lots of folks think they're silly.

Anyhow, Danny's entitled to his foibles. He's earned the right to do what he wants. You never get to know Danny until you watch his wife playing his accompaniment, while she's watching him and timing his jokes to her heartbeats. That's the real Danny Kaye mirrored in her eyes, and thru that adoration you get a perfect performance which combines talent, timing, and twinkling toes.

"THE COUNT OF LUXEMBOURG"

"The Count of Luxembourg" will be presented on the Chicago Theater of the Air Saturday, March 11, on W-G-N, WGNB, and the Mutual network from 8 to 9 p. m. (C.W.T.), starring Marion Claire and Thomas L. Thomas.

By ALBERT GOLDBERG

FRANZ LEHAR, like a few other composers who wrote successful light opera—Victor Herbert, Leo Fall, Rudolf Friml—went thru the arduous mill of a serious musical education before turning his attention to the lighter—and more rewarding—phase of his art. He was born in the little Hungarian village of Komarom, April 30, 1870, the son of a military bandmaster who early recognized the boy's talent and subjected him to as severe a regimen of music study as his own somewhat limited capabilities could provide. When young Franz was 12 the father saw that he could no longer hold his pupil's interest and sent him to the conservatory at Prague. There he remained for six years, and it was upon the advice of no less an authority than the great Czech composer, Antonin Dvorak, that Franz Lehar determined to become a composer.

Franz Lehar

Upon graduation he was engaged as a member of the first violin section of the orchestra in the theater of the combined cities of Barmen-Elberfeld, and soon his talent had won him the position of concertmaster. But, tho advancing in his profession, this was not what young Franz wanted, for his duties left him no time for composition. Thereupon he resigned this position to join his father's band, that of the 50th infantry in Vienna, as assistant leader. This eventually led to the post of military musical director in the town of Losoncz, where he found time to write a number of songs and composed his first opera, a serious work entitled "Der Kürassier," in 1894. Another serious opera, "Kukuska," followed two years later. It seems to have taken his appointment to the conductorship of the famous Theater-an-der-Wien in Vienna, in 1902, to show him clearly the direction in which his greatest talent pointed. His first operetta, "Wiener Frauen," was produced there that fall, and its success induced him to settle permanently in Vienna and to devote himself exclusively to light opera—a resolution, however, that he later broke by writing two symphonic poems, several overtures, a Hungarian Fantasy for violin and orchestra, and hundreds of marches. "The Merry Widow," in 1905, established him as one of the foremost operetta composers of all time, and while he never succeeded in repeating that triumph, such works as "Frasquita," "Gypsy Love," and "The Count of Luxembourg" delighted a world-wide public and enabled him to retain a premier position in his field.

"The Count of Luxembourg" was first produced in Vienna in 1909, achieved a run of 380 performances at Daly's theater, London, and was staged in New York by Klaw & Erlanger at the New Amsterdam theater, Sept. 16, 1912. The cast featured a beautiful young singer, Ann Swinburne, who was catapulted into a brief but brilliant career; a now forgotten tenor, George L. Moore, and a well remembered comic, Frank Moulan.

The outstanding moment in "The Count of Luxembourg" was the scene in which the principals waltz down a flight of stairs. Other musical numbers that still are of musical potency include "Day Dreams"; a duet, "Love Breaks Every Bond"; the chorus "Carnival!", the quintet "A Check on the Bank of England," and the finale, "Little Maid."

The action is laid in Paris. An old rounder, the grand duke of something or other, wishes to marry the singer Angele Didier, but, not wishing to bind himself to a commoner, hits upon the device of having the impecunious Count Rene of Luxembourg marry her, so that she may properly have a title, and then divorce her for the consideration of £20,000. Angele and the count go thru the ceremony, but when the grand duke brings up the matter of divorce the lady decides that she prefers to remain the countess of Luxembourg.

VOICE OF THE MOVIE FAN

Letters published in this department should be written on one side of the paper. If you wish a personal reply please inclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Dear Mae: We are a group of enthusiastic movie fans, especially after seeing "Guadalcanal Diary." We would like to know who played the part of Anderson, the good looking blond young marine. Could you please print some information and also a picture of him in your swell column? Carnations to you, Mae, and keep up the swell work. Sincerely,

THE SHORT CIRCUIT CLUB OF CHICAGO.

Dear "Group": Thanks for the carnations and encouragement! Richard Jaeckel played young Anderson. He was just a kid working around the lot who didn't want to be a movie star. But his performance in "Guadalcanal Diary" has planted him right in the limelight and I reckon he'll have a hard time eluding producers in future. Watch the column for his picture.

Dear Miss Tinée: I have just seen "So Proudly We Hail," with Claudette Colbert and Paulette Goddard, and to say I enjoyed it would be putting it mildly. I really think both of them were wonderful in this picture; don't you agree? Would it be too much to ask for the name of the actor who played Lt. John Summers? I am also interested in finding out the name of the actor who's name was Kansas in the picture. I thought this picture was very informative, and I think a lot more pictures of this type should be made, to show the world what a wonderful job the American nurses are doing. We enjoy your column, and would you tell me in what section your column is in in the daily paper? Thanks a lot.

DOROTHY ROBER.

P. S.—Didn't you think Veronica Lake was very heroic?

Dear Dorothy: I'm ever so glad you like the column. It appears—when it DOES appear—in the daily paper usually snuggled up somewhere in the feature section. John Summers was played by George Reeves and Kansas by Sonny Tufts. Yes, I certainly do think Veronica was heroic. But weren't they all!

SPEAK UP!

By MAUREEN DALY

(Author of "Seventeenth Summer")

LET'S GET OUT of that rut and into the groove! Too many guys and gals are missing fun because they've put the finger on their own personalities and have classed themselves as black widows, sad specimens, and gruesome individuals with no dating possibilities. They think they are too shy to make friends. Just because they don't have a free and easy line of chatter, a stock of gal appeal like Frank Sinatra, and a datebook filled up solid from Monday to Sunday, they think they are gone goslings, strictly in the Sad Sam department.

And it's both Jacks and Jills who make the same complaint. Here's a letter from a girl who's got those goon gal blues 'cause no smooth operators are looking her way for dates and she doesn't know what to do about it. Her story goes this way:

"Altho I've heard a lot of advice on bashfulness, it never seems to apply exactly to my case. I'm a junior in high school, and I know I am quite pretty, tho there are many girls who are prettier. I know I am not dumb, because I get very good grades in school. I am always and forever saying to myself that the next time I get into class with a group of boys I'll talk to them like an old friend and forget that I'm bashful.

"But next day my resolution just doesn't hold. In one of my classes there happen to be 30 boys and five girls, and yet as soon as I get inside the classroom door I shut up like a clam and can't talk to any one—boy or girl! And when boys do talk to me I always give them an abrupt answer or the cold shoulder, because it makes me so self-conscious. I don't want to be a flirt, but I do wish I could develop enough poise to make friends, because I do want to be considered fun and be well liked by boys."

And from the other corner of the ring we have John Doe Jr., who is all ready to throw in the towel because he, too, "can't make friends." He's singing the same song in the same pitch:

"Why is every one always talking about old maids and wallflowers — how about the boys who don't date just because girls don't want to go out with them? I can name at least 15 girls in my class that I'd like to take out, but they don't give me a tumble. I'm average looking and get along well with fellows, but when it comes to girls I can't think of a thing to talk about. And maybe it's because they just don't like my type, but they don't try to help me out! Often I'd like to ask a girl for a date but don't know just how to approach her—what should a fellow do? I don't want to be a lone wolf all my life!"

Here are two characters in the same boat—a Joe who isn't asking too much (he doesn't want to be known as the Boy Wonder or the Casanova Kid), just wants to be on friendly terms with a gal or two who would like to go to a movie on Friday night or split a coke with him, and a honey chile who is looking for a few Jacksons who would like to do likewise. But first both will have to forget this "bashful" con they have been handing themselves, and it isn't too difficult if you think it over.

Of course if any one tells you that a fellow can become a great personality by combing his hair with olive oil or rolling up his trousers at the cuff, or that a girl can become queen of the May by changing the shade of her lipstick or trying a new and fetching cologne—just tell them to tell you another while that one's still warm.

But for both fellows and girls good grooming does go a long way toward breaking down an inferiority complex and building up that old ego. Did you ever hesitate to speak to some one, become self-conscious, because you feel suddenly that they might think you "unattractive" and not smooth enough? Maybe you thought your nose was shiny, your hands needed soap and water, or you wanted to give your hair a once-over-lightly with the brush and comb. You weren't sure just how you looked, but you didn't feel like Lana Turner anyway.

If you'd stopped to worry about such details before you got into a crowd of people you wouldn't have to worry about them afterward. It may mean getting up an hour earlier in the morning or spending an extra half hour on grooming before you go to bed, but the effort is always worth it. It doesn't matter how many sacks and snoods you have tucked away in your closet just so the outfit you are wearing is neat and clean. That's step No. 1 on the hep parade.

And No. 2 is this difficulty about finding the right thing to say. Making your conversation honestly friendly is the main thing—don't worry about whether you sound clever or supersharp, for no one expects an Ilka Chase in saddle shoes. One pleasant remark deserves another, and if you make the first attempt at being friendly you've done your share — for the beginning.

Making your conversation honestly friendly is the main thing.

One conversation rarely makes a lasting friendship—but don't rush it. Take your time. Just remember that conversation is a fifty-fifty proposition, so why not put in your half first just to get the ball rolling?

Step No. 3 in overcoming this "I don't belong" feeling is to mix with other fellows and girls as much as possible. The social "Friday night party and the drug store crowd" approach is not always the best. Try working with the gang first. Get to know them outside class by joining the dramatic club, getting a job on the school newspaper, volunteering for a dance committee—anything that will get you working side by side with the fellows and girls you want as friends. And then really work hard! And put this down in red in your book—don't expect every one to think you are wonderful. Just as special people appeal to you, so will you appeal to just special people.

And now the king-sized item to remember: You're not the only one who is shy! Every one is bashful on some occasion or with some people. F'rinstance, how do you know that the boy whose locker is next to yours wouldn't like to ask you for a date—if your "shyness" didn't make you give him the cool brush-off every time he looks your way? And you, Joe—what makes you so sure that the neat queen whose desk is just behind yours in study hall wouldn't go out this Friday night—if you asked her?

Speak up, brother! After all, how long can a gal go on dreaming?

MEET JULIE BISHOP

WHAT'S in a name? For Jacqueline Wells it meant a new and much more successful career. She had been typed as a sweet heroine in minor pictures, and was sick of it. Going to Wisconsin, she joined the Peninsula Players of Door county under the name Julie Bishop. When she returned to Hollywood she kept the name and started calling on studios just as if she were there for the first time. She was recognized, of course, but her determination to start over won her the attention she deserved, and since her star has been rising. You may have seen her in "Northern Pursuit," and she's also in "Rhapsody in Blue."

Julie was born on Aug. 30, 1917, in Denver, and went to Hollywood with her family when she was 5. Little theater work got her a start in the movies.

CREPES SUZETTE

By MARY MEADE

MOST HOMEMAKERS wouldn't even attempt to make a Suzette sauce like that of Chicago's Henri Charpentier, who first made crepes Suzette for Edward VII. when Edward was prince of Wales.

Yet most homemakers would like to know about a good sauce to serve on little rolled pancakes, I think. I have one which is made with port wine, flavored with lemon and mace. It may be used not only with crepes but with such desserts as cottage pudding or blanc mange. O, and its wonderful over baked custard!

The little dessert pancakes are made from a thin, eggy batter flavored with port. You can start with a pancake mix if you wish. Roll the little cakes while they are hot, sprinkle with confectioners' sugar, and keep them warm in the oven until you have enough ready to serve. If you have the proper equipment for it, bake the cakes fresh at the table when the dinner course has been cleared away.

CREPES SUZETTE, PORT WINE SAUCE

CAKES:
- 1¾ cups sifted flour
- ⅓ cup confectioners' sugar
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- 1 cup milk
- 3 eggs, beaten
- ½ cup port wine
- ¼ cup margarine, melted
- 1 teaspoon grated lemon rind

SAUCE:
- ½ cup sugar
- 2 teaspoons cornstarch
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- ¼ teaspoon mace
- ½ cup cold water
- 1 tablespoon lemon juice
- ½ teaspoon grated lemon rind
- 1 cup port wine

For the pancakes mix and sift dry ingredients, stir in milk and beaten eggs. Add ¼ cup of the wine, the margarine, and the lemon rind. Beat until smooth. Grease pan lightly bake cakes until lightly browned, sprinkle with confectioners' sugar and remaining wine. Roll and keep hot until ready to serve.

To make the sauce mix sugar, cornstarch, and mace. Add cold water, lemon juice and rind. Cook until thickened and clear, stirring constantly. Add wine and cook one minute longer. Serve hot over hot rolled cakes.

If you like crepes Suzette you'll enjoy making these wine-flavored pancakes and their ruby red sauce.

French apple pie is another luscious dessert which originated with French chefs. Buy tart apples for it.

FRENCH APPLE PIE

- 8-10 tart apples, peeled and sliced
- ¾ cup water
- 1 cup sugar
- ½ cup raisins
- 1 teaspoon cinnamon
- 1 teaspoon nutmeg
- 1 tablespoon margarine

TOPPING:
- ½ cup margarine
- ¾ teaspoon nutmeg
- ½ cup flour
- ⅓ teaspoon cinnamon
- Pastry

Line pie pan with pastry. Cook apples, water, sugar, and raisins for 15 minutes. Add spices and 1 tablespoon margarine. Place in pie shell. Blend ½ cup margarine, the nutmeg, flour, and cinnamon with fingertips or pastry blender, sprinkle over top of pie, and bake at 450 degrees for 15 minutes. Reduce heat and finish baking at 350 degrees, about 45 minutes.

$5 PRIZE RECIPE

BEEF ROLLUPS

(Serves six)

- 2 pounds beef round, thinly sliced
- 6 slices bacon
- 1 large onion, finely chopped
- 3 tablespoons bacon drippings
- Flour, salt, pepper

Cut beef into squares about 5 inches across. Top each with half a slice of bacon and sprinkle with onion. Roll up and tie. Dredge with seasoned flour and brown on all sides in bacon drippings. A NEW FEATURE!
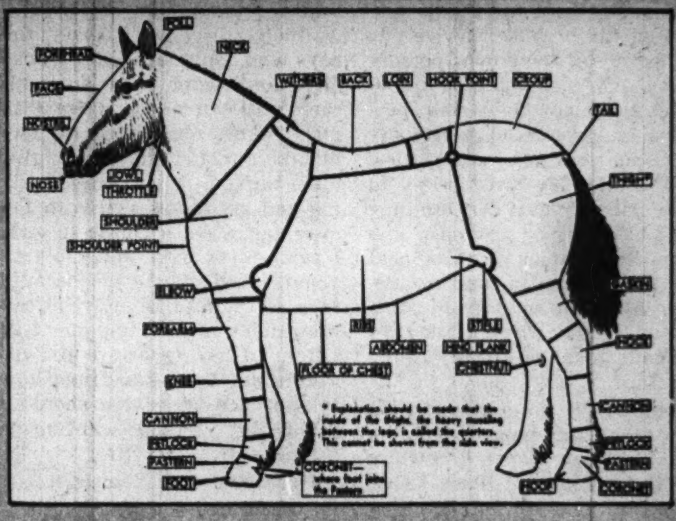
Below is the introduction to a new weekly feature that will appear in the Graphic Section. Save it for future reference.

Know Your Horses



* Explanation should be made that the inside of the thighs, the heavy muscling between the legs, is called the quarters. This cannot be shown from the side view.

IN THE drawing above the principal features of the external anatomy of a horse are indicated. This drawing is presented for the purpose of introducing a new feature, "Know Your Horses," which will begin in this section of The Tribune next Sunday.

The feature will embrace pictures and descriptive texts covering all the well known breeds of domestic animals of the genus Equus, beginning with the Arab and including ponies, draft horses, the ass, and the mule. There will be 18 different pictures; one appearing each Sunday. The pictures are to be reproduced from photographs that show the characteristics of the various breeds. These photographs have been selected with the assistance of Wayne Dinsmore, secretary of the Horse and Mule Association of America and a recognized authority on horses and mules.

Despite the development of the automobile as a means of transportation and the tractor as a source of mobile power for the farms, thousands of people still employ and are devoted to the horse, which originally was domesticated by man some time back in the distant bronze age. Horse races today are perhaps more popular than ever before. Horse shows thruout the country annually attract thousands. Polo, a game played on horseback, is not only popular among cavalrymen but other sportsmen as well. Nothing, it is believed, will ever take the place of the horse.

The confirmed horseman puts his animals in first place in his thoughts. Collectively he comprises a group that is separate and apart from other men. He even has a language of his own. A study of the drawing above will acquaint the reader with what horsemen are talking about when they speak of poll, throttle, withers, cannon, fetlock, pastern, hook point, gaskin, hock, and coronet. Horsemen do not even measure the height of their horses (at the shoulder) in feet and inches, but rather in hands. A hand is supposed to be the width of an average palm. It is the equivalent of 4 inches.

THERE CAN BE ANOTHER YOU!

By ANTOINETTE DONNELLY

(Copyright: 1944: By News Syndicate Co., Inc.)

YOU'VE HEARD the admonition many times: Pull your head up out of your shoulders! But, in addition to drawing up the head and making it stand on its own columnar support, hark to a bit of advice from an expert, much of whose time is given to resuscitating beauty that otherwise might have been lost in a welter of neck line errors, coiffure misfortunes, and makeup mistakes. And no small part of that transformation centers around the neck and coiffure. Furthermore, you yourself can be the transforming genius.

Look at photograph No. 1. It may be exaggerated a little. You see girls and women who crowd themselves into fairly shapeless exhibits such as the young woman here as she entered our magician's studio. Look at the hair line spreading out both sides, widening the already round face. The jabot is round, the spider pin is round, the earrings are round hoops, completing the circular movement. Add to this the veil and you achieve width and squattiness without rhyme or beauty reasoning.

Now look at the same young woman in the second illustration. The new spring model has an arched roundness, but the hair has been brought back, the coiffure given a bit of height—not much, but enough to lend an added inch or two to facial symmetry, or "spacing," as the maestro calls it. The eyebrows have been cleared away from the nose. The mouth has been made wider horizontally but lessened vertically. There is hair fullness, feminine, lovely. Note the neck line. It's a V, to give more "space" to the face.

2 Different costume, hair style, makeup add to facial symmetry.

3 Here hair style, costume have frill without crowded effect.

Take the third photograph, in which you see a casual hair-do—pretty, effective, and feminine. Here you have a becoming neck line which is brought into a V, again with intent to "space" the face. The result, you have charming frill and furbelow without any crowded, bunchy look.

4 Glamor treatment that gives effect of more slender face.

5 Facial balance achieved by use of elongated chignon effect.

Or take photograph No. 4, the same model in a glamor role, with her hair in a rolled pompadour, with a bit of wispy bang over the left temple to soften the line. Her face looks slenderer than in the other shots. And, with our authority, we think it silly to abandon the high hair-do for the flat-top when the former proves more becoming. If the face is broad, quite round, the neck short, the shoulders full, the height of the pompadour style is infinitely smarter.

One does not have to be an extremist in pompadour styling. It can be soft in outline. It need hever be a grossly towering thing. For the older woman at least, whose neck and jaw line has lost its girlish firmness and profile purity of line, that brushing up of the hair serves as a facial lift.

In illustration 5 you have a modified flat-top which harmonizes neatly with the elongated chignon effect on the nape of the neck and produces a better facial balance.

In the illustrations here you see the same identical girl who developed under the maestro's magic from a self-named Little Miss Nobody into a girl with an assured modeling future. Also you see how varied are the possibilities lent by coiffure, neck line, and makeup skill. So if you aren't too pleased with your own current styling, why not experiment for another you?

I Meet John Barrymore

eye of prize fight camp and baseball clubhouse experience that he was athletic, had an extraordinary sense of balance, and moved on the balls of his feet like Benny Leonard. He was slim, well proportioned, and had a slight "hang" to his shoulders, as have most good punchers of middle weight. His forearms were those of a stroke oar.

"Who is the Baron?" I asked, as a button fell from Mr. Barrymore's coat. I moved to pick it up from the floor, but he restrained me.

"That button," he said, "has been hanging for a year, like a moose's lavalliere. The Baron is my only true friend."

The star of "Redemption" now put on a fedora, a vintage number in every respect. It might have been forest green once. But as he adjusted the crown, giving it certain deft tugs and pats, it suddenly took on a quality of magnificence.

We went outside the theater. It was twilight now, and the last of the matineegoers were turning to look at the eminent actor. In this decent era autograph seekers had not yet begun to pounce like gadflies upon their celebrities. Barrymore caught the attention of the Broadway pedestrians but did not take much notice of them. Vanity was not among his vices.

We at last arrived at an old boarding house. Barrymore entered it with some zest, happily sniffing the stale air of a tunnel-like hallway.

A rotund lady materialized from the catacombs, peered at us thru silver-rimmed spectacles, then embraced and was embraced by Mr. Barrymore, who called her "Marie, my blossom!"

Over Marie's shoulder, and from amid a hayloft of gray hair, he testified: "She's one of my father's old flames. Bequeathed her to me."

Marie tittered uneasily and pushed him away. "He's always making these jokes. You see, I was Richard Mansfield's wardrobe mistress."

"Please," said Barrymore, "omit the word 'wardrobe.'"

Marie shook a fat finger at Mr. Barrymore. A glum mood abruptly possessed her. "I'll have to ask the Baron to leave," she intoned. "Him and his dog."

"What!" roared Mr. Barrymore. "Oust a philosopher? A savant? A seventh son of a seventh son? Where is your sense of values?"

Marie, firm in her resolve, replied, "Him and his awful dog!"

Mr. Barrymore took her partly in his arms. "Marie, drain that ice water from your veins. Be warm again. I ask you to trust the Baron for one more week. I may say, with all truth, that I am now in the chips. You shall be paid."

Marie paused, relenting a little. Mr. Barrymore went on: "Marie, I appeal to you to permit the Baron, one of the greatest alchemists since Trismegistus, to continue his experiments." He turned to me. "The Baron is seeking the philosopher's stone."

"The Baron," said Marie, "is making gin."

Mr. Barrymore pushed Marie aside, then guided me along the hallway. Without knocking he opened a door to reveal in the room beyond a small bald fellow with protuberant black eyes and jackstraw habiliments. He was leaning over a gas plate balanced upon the lid of an elderly and well labeled trunk. A spicy mist arose from a dented tin utensil.

"Baron!" said Jack, moving to hug the good wizard.

"I'm cooking some chili," the Baron said in a furry voice. "I am making it extra hot because you . . ."

The Baron's words foundered in the clinch. As he turned politely to me I saw a man of perhaps 70 years. His hands were thin, long-fingered, curiously young. He held a tarnished spoon in one of them. With the other he flicked a tear from his eye. He seemed easily roused to tears, either from sentiment or too much grog.

"You are a friend of Mr. Barrymore?" he asked of me lugubriously.

The actor interposed: "Everybody's friend, Baron. Mr. William Randolph Hearst's in particular. Advises him on all political moves. Forms the entire policy of the Hearst publications from coast to coast."

Our host shattered me with the gentle, child-spoken inquiry, "Do the Hearst papers have a policy?"

"I am only a reporter, Baron," I replied.

Now the Baron's dog rose from a dark corner and slowly arrived at the actor's feet. The Baron began to weep anew. "Jim hasn't stirred all week from his gunny sack. Look! He has walked all the way across the room to greet Mr. Barrymore."

Jim was an old animal, the first and last pug dog I ever encountered in the east. His gingerbread body sagged in the middle. His tail was looped like a stale cruller over his hind parts. And one of his eyes was closed in a perpetual wink.

This dog, flatulent and stiff with years, seemed suddenly in paradise. The star of "Redemption" was on the bare floor, his face near Jim's muzzle, and Jim's tongue was out like a fireman's shirttail, licking Barrymore's chin.

"Jim's a little old," the Baron said. "Like myself, I suppose. One day we are up and frisking about. Then suddenly we awaken one morning and we are stiff and old and things have passed us by."

John Barrymore in "Justice," several years before he first met Gene Fowler.

Barrymore deposited Jim on what once may have been a divan and asked the chef, "What wonders have you performed today in your bathroom?"

Our host's eyes were moist onyx knobs as he promised, "I have some bang-up gin ready for dilution."

He set the stew on a backless kitchen chair near the divan, then turned, picked up a jug, and led us to a bathroom of the President Garfield era. The actor insisted on staying outside while the Baron diluted the alcohol and flavored it with juniper essence. Not wishing to endanger a scientific effort, I also remained at the threshold, watching the celebrated alchemist at his labors.

"I don't think you'll find many pug dogs left in the whole world," Barrymore said to me. "Do you remember the pug dog at all?"

"I had one," I replied.

He now looked at me with genuine interest. His bantering manner fell like a bullfighter's cape. With almost naive tone he asked: "You really owned one? Tell me about him."

"There's not much to tell," I said. "I was living with my grandmother . . ."

"You were?" he asked with such emphasis that I believed him to be pulling my leg. I hesitated a moment. "Is there anything remarkable about having lived with one's grandmother?"

"Yes," he said quietly. "Yes, there is." There was no mistaking his sincerity. "You see, the only bringing up I ever had was by my grandmother, Mrs. Drew. So great, so sweet she was, inside the armor of her great dignity. We called her Mum Mum."

Until now we had not shaken hands, nor had Barrymore even asked my name. He put out his hand and said, "Hello!"

The Baron, carrying a filled jug and chuckling, emerged from the bathroom. His tears had evaporated. There was an aura of ecclesiastical peace upon him. We followed him back to his quarters.

After sampling his experimental nectar we discovered that Jim had eaten the whole of the chili!

Barrymore was greatly amused. He helped himself to another portion of synthetic gin —from a china cup with no handle, and a crack in it.

"Food," said he, "is all right in its place, and its place correctly is in the belly of our friend Jim."

Now nature and Jim came to sudden grips. He roused, opened his good eye, growled apprehensively, then lay back like the Lion of Lucerne.

But not for long. The next time around, both for our drinks and for Jim's gastric eccentricity, the aged thief leaped like an acrobat of the Keith-Albee circuit, roared, and came to the floor.

The attacks now recurred with greater violence, like the more spirited parts of a Russian concerto. Jim began to snap with futile amazement, chase his tail, plunge like a lassoed elk, and bare his gums, where only three teeth remained.

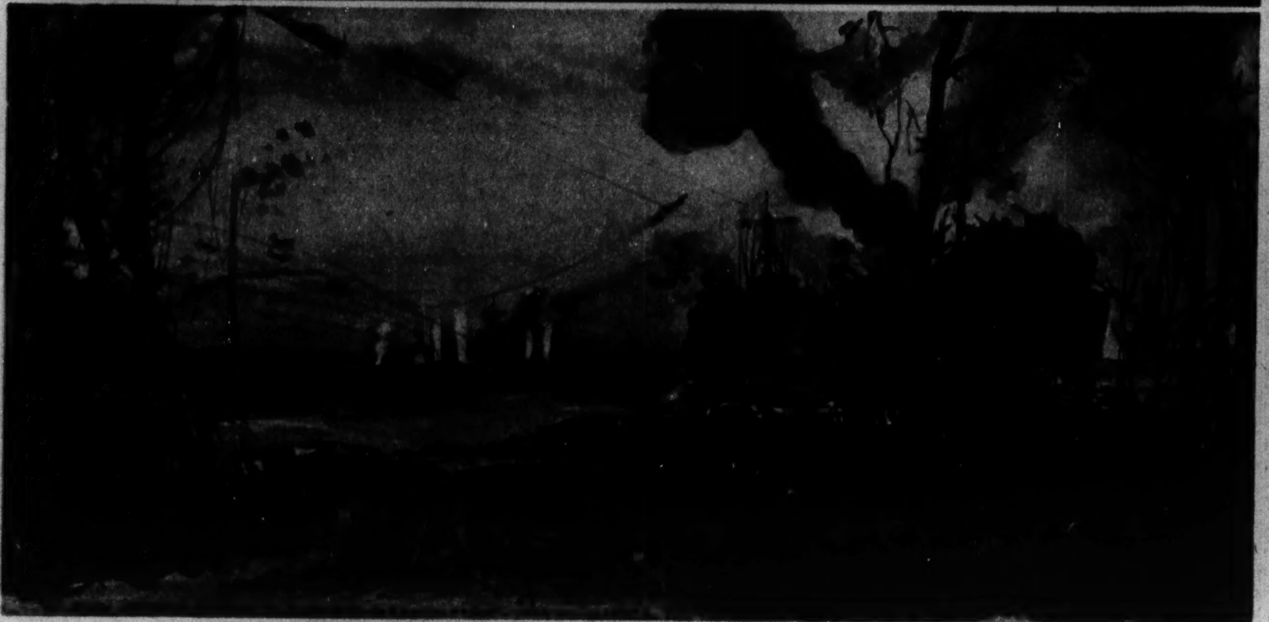
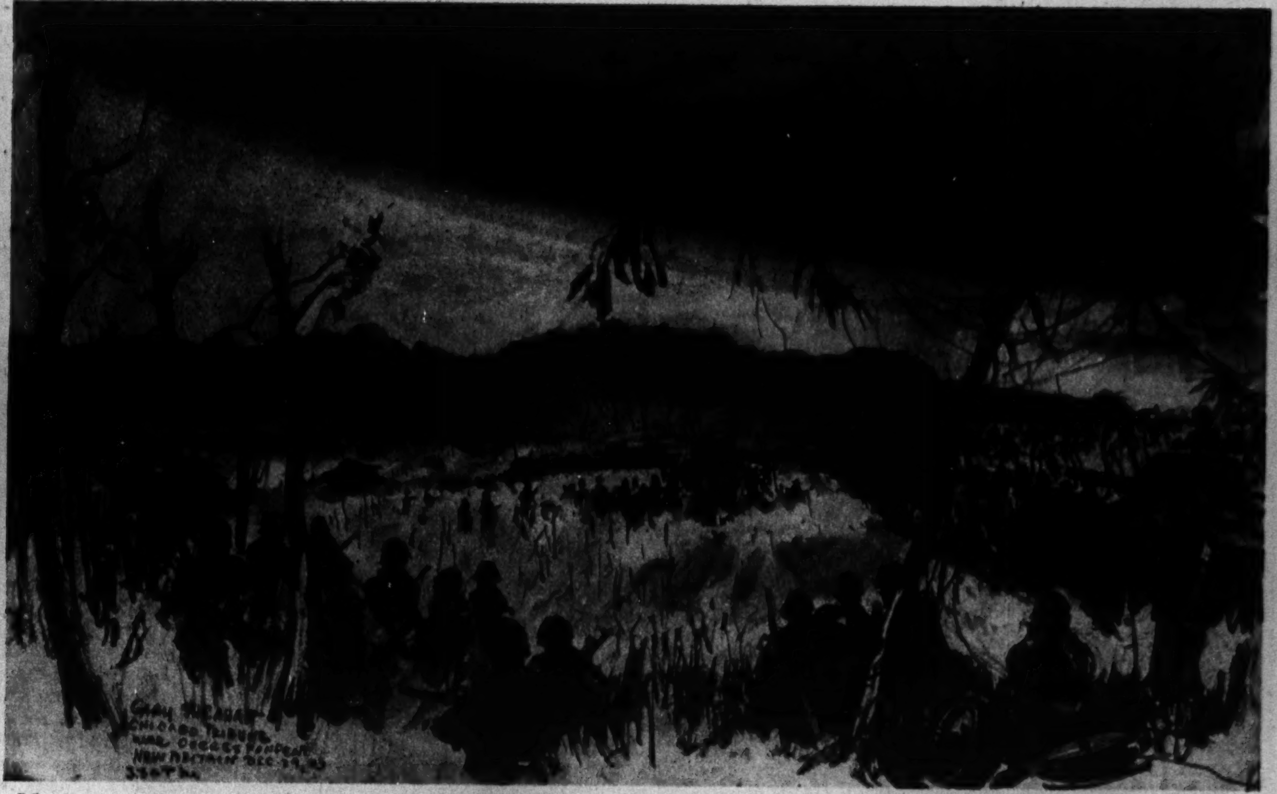
Tribune Artist Sees Pacific War

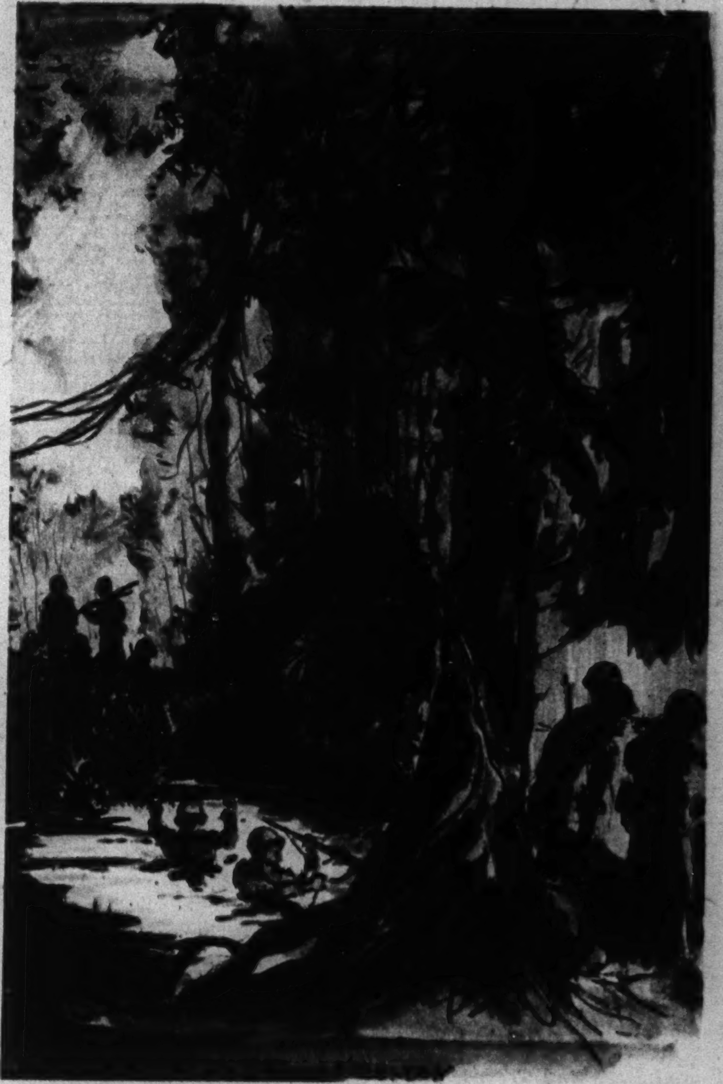
The three sketches on this page were made at the scene by the Tribune artist war correspondent Gary Sheahan in New Britain. They depict phases of action during the attack on Cape Gloucester.



Japanese dive bombers and fighter-strafers attack marine landing craft near Cape Gloucester. Ship in background shot down two enemy planes. Marines ashore take cover and fire at planes with rifles and submachine guns. Pillars of smoke are from fallen enemy planes.



Marine medium tanks, landed from vessels such as shown in picture at left, spearhead attack on Cape Gloucester airfield. Signal corps operators in right foreground keep in constant touch with forward elements. Ocean is to the right, behind medium tank.



Marine machine gunners wade shoulder deep thru jungle morass to take up positions before airfield. They are moving in from one flank to join forces with main body of troops on coastal road.

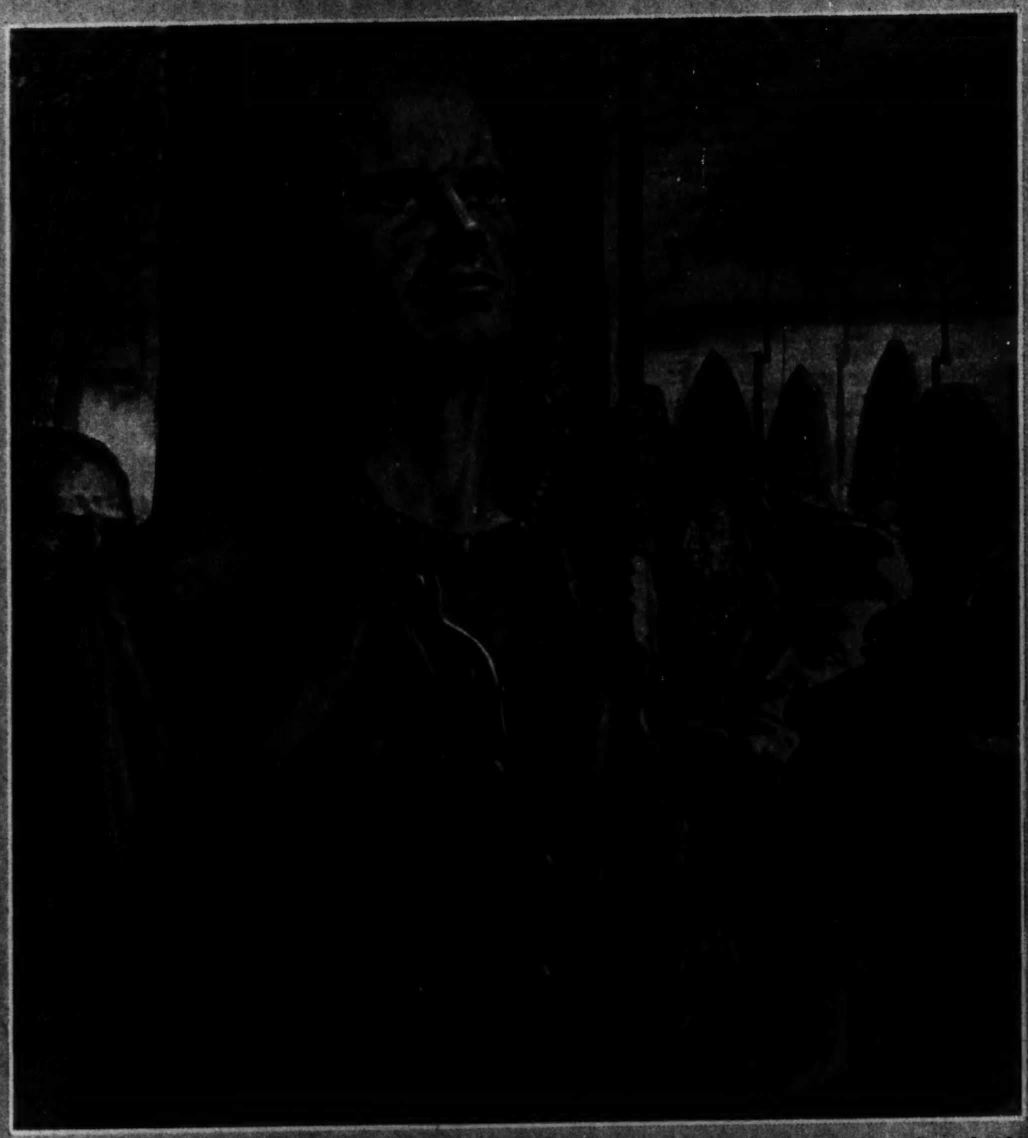
ROMANTIC FIGURES of AMERICAN HISTORY



The dramatic illustration above, by Clara Fargo Thomas and Alexander Varnak, is another of the series appearing currently in this section with biographical sketches. Watch for this series every Sunday.

JUST BEFORE he was put to death as a spy by the British in New York City on Sept. 22, 1776, Capt. Nathan Hale said: "I only regret that I have but one life to lose for my country."

Down thru the generations these words have inspired patriotism among Americans wherever read or spoken.

Hale, a member of General Washington's continental army in possession of New York, had volunteered to find his way to the rear of the British army's lines on Long Island to pick up information useful to the Americans. He departed from New York some time in the second week of September (1776), perhaps on Sept. 12, and three or four days later was landed from a small boat on the shore of Huntington bay, Long Island.

On the night of Sept. 21 he was captured by the enemy and taken to Gen. William Howe's headquarters in the Beekman mansion on Manhattan Island, at what now is the intersection of 51st st. and 1st av. The British in the meantime, it should be pointed out, had occupied New York City.

Bravely admitting that he was a spy, Hale was condemned to death, and the next day he was hanged at an artillery park at what now is 66th st. and 3d av. It was Capt. John Montressor, a British officer, who under a flag of truce brought to the American lines Hale's immortal last words.

Hale was born on a farm near Coventry, Conn., June 6, 1755. He entered Yale as a student in the autumn of 1769 and was graduated in the autumn of 1773. After that he taught school at East Haddam and New London, both in Connecticut. At the conclusion of his school term in the spring of 1775 he entered military service, and in July of that year his name as a lieutenant appeared on the rolls of the 7th Connecticut regiment.

In September, 1775, his regiment marched to the support of Washington's army, which then was besieging Boston, Hale in the meantime having been elevated to captain. In January, 1776, the 7th Connecticut regiment became the 19th foot regiment of the continental army.

After the evacuation of Boston by the British Washington moved his army to New York, expecting the enemy to move against that city next. Hale's regiment was among the first to march to New York.

With the American army in possession of Manhattan Island, General Howe on June 28 (1776) landed an army on Staten Island. Washington after this moved part of his force to Long Island, and there on Aug. 27 the battle of Long Island was fought. Unsuccessful in this action, Washington withdrew his men from Long Island and on Sept. 7, at a council of war, decided in favor of defending Manhattan Island.

It was for this reason he desired information as to the plans of the enemy and sought a volunteer to go into the British lines for the purpose.

At first Hale was reluctant to become a spy, the role being repugnant to him. But when he weighed the matter further he decided that duty to his country stood above all else. The dangerous mission, as already related, brought him death and glory.

Graphic Little Theater Presents ROBERT TAYLOR, SUSAN PETERS in "Song of Russia"

1 John Meredith (Robert Taylor), noted symphony conductor, and his manager, Hank Higgins (Robert Benchley), arrive in Russia for a tour featuring the music of Tschaikowsky.

2 In the crowd is Nadya Stepanova (Susan Peters), young pianist, who wishes to get Meredith to visit the "Tschaikowsky country" around her home village near Smolensk. After a rehearsal in Moscow, Meredith hears Nadya play the famous piano concerto. He is won by her artistry and her beauty.

3 She urges him to attend the annual Tschaikowsky festival, but before he agrees she realizes they are in love. She flees, because she feels she cannot let herself fall in love. When Meredith finds her at her village he is amazed to learn she is well versed in the use of military weapons, as the peasants do not trust Germany.

4 However, he convinces her that love will overcome all obstacles, and they are married in the village church.

5 They go to Sevastopol for his concert. There they learn that Germany has invaded Russia. Knowing Nadya must return to her people, Meredith puts her on a train, promises to come to her village when his tour is finished. But to do so he must break thru German lines. He finds her, with the other villagers, burning all crops.

6 They realize they can do more for the cause of freedom by returning to America. Here they enjoy success together.

Cut fish into serving pieces and dip in flour which has been mixed with salt and paprika. Dip fish in egg, then in crumbs. Fry in hot Spry in skillet, over low heat, until golden brown on both sides. Serve with wedges of lemon. Serves 6.

Wartime French Fried Potatoes—Wash and pare 6 raw potatoes (about 1 quart, cubed); cut in ½-inch cubes. Melt ½ cup Spry in heavy 9-inch skillet over full heat. Add potatoes. Fry quickly, turning often with wide spatula until crisp and golden brown, about 20 minutes or until done. Sprinkle with 1½ teaspoons salt and serve immediately. Serves 4.

Potato Shreddies—Grate 4 peeled raw potatoes; drain. Add 1 teaspoon salt and ¼ teaspoon pepper, mixing lightly with fork. Measure ⅓ to ½ cup Spry. Melt part of Spry in heavy skillet over full heat. Drop small portions of potato mixture into skillet and spread each portion out thin. Fry over moderate heat until nicely browned on each side. Replenish skillet with Spry as potato mixture is added. Serves 4–6. Variation: Add 2 tablespoons grated onion to potato mixture.

Cottage Fried Potatoes—Wash and pare 4 raw potatoes. Slice ⅛-inch thick. Melt ¼ cup Spry in heavy skillet over full heat. Add potatoes, ½ teaspoon salt, dash of pepper. Cover and fry 5 minutes. Reduce heat, then uncover, and continue frying about 15 minutes or until tender, crisp and golden-brown, stirring occasionally. Serves 4.

YOUTH ON THE CAMPUS

By ELEANOR NANGLE

The Illinois Student Union building at night.

IF MEMORY serves, there were some mutters of criticism back in 1942 when the University of Illinois opened its extraordinarily handsome Union building. A few of the omnipresent viewers with alarm said that the university had never had a union and that the young folks had gotten along all right, that $1,500,000 was a lot of money to spend for such a building, and that bowling alleys and a stately ballroom and beautifully decorated browsing and dining rooms constituted downright indulgence for young people who should be made to realize that life is real and life is earnest.

We wish the mutterers could see how invaluable the Illini Union is now and what immense practical as well as recreational service it renders to civilian students and service men. For quite a long time now the Union has been "home away from home" for thousands upon thousands of uniformed men from all sections of the country who find themselves on the Urbana campus for periods of training. The university is a classification center for the A. S. T. P. for this service command. It has a huge army specialized training unit of its own, also a large V-12 unit. And there are in addition two other naval training schools on the campus, one for diesel and one for signal. The campus swarms with uniforms.

Tho there are, of course, fewer civilian students than formerly, there is more traffic in the Union than its most psychic planners ever dreamed of, and its facilities, under what seems inspired direction, are being put to war time use that the people of the state should applaud.

The Illini Union has not curtailed its services to the student body, among whom it now counts all army and navy men on campus. It has increased them, as a matter of fact, or cleverly changed their character to meet the special war time exigencies. All food service is cafeteria style, and there are girls rather than boys checking wraps in the cloakroom, but aside from these minor changes the Union marches on, neat as the proverbial pin and busier than the proverbial beehive.

The explanation of the neatness and the undimmed beauty of the furnishings can only be that the Union users—and they number thousands of civilians, seamen, and soldiers—venerate the place for its beauty as well as its facilities.

Until a mess was arranged for them recently in the skating rink, across from the armory, some 4,000 soldiers trooped in and out of the Union every day three times a day to eat in the basement cafeteria. They left no destructive mark on the building, tho they used it and continue to use it for recreation. An example of the Union's effort to make service men happy there was the institution of a morning record hour especially for the breakfasting soldiers, who loved it.

During that period and since the enormous contingent of V-12 boys used and continue to use the splendid ballroom on the second floor as their mess. These boys, too, when they are free, use the building for recreation, much of it specially planned for their tastes and their limited periods of free time.

On Saturday night the ballroom is released from its role of chow hall to become the setting for couple dances. What was once the banquet room on the third floor is also a dance spot on Saturday nights, and one night a week dancing lessons are given here to civilian or service men students who want them. On Sunday afternoons there are dances for service men and their girls—civilian students barred. This last innovation was introduced with the blessings of the local church authorities, who on being consulted gave their approval, since the free time of service men is so limited and their need of wholesome recreation so acute.

All over the building, at all hours from 7 a. m. until midnight, there is activity, planned or spontaneous. The new piano in the Pine lounge—bought with last year's profits—may be played at any hour by any one with the desire to touch the keys. The Federal room is now a cardroom, always crowded with those whose schedules give them leisure. With such varied classroom schedules as exist at a university like Illinois, with its diversified programs for the army, the navy, and the civilians, there must—and there is—all possible flexibility in the Union's program of service for those who use its facilities.

Perhaps it should be explained that the taxpayers do not pay for the Union's operation. A small student fee maintains it and pays the salaries of those concerned with its workings. Any profit accumulated from special events for which a charge is made goes back into the Union, as witness the grand piano purchased this year.

In the face of the war time difficulties that many university and college unions have found almost insurmountable, the Illini Union is more than filling the function for which it was originally planned. These days it is doing a remarkable job of being all things to all men and women on the campus.

I Meet John Barrymore

"What a performance!" said Barrymore. "Perhaps I should have chili an hour before curtain time."

Marie appeared in the doorway to call out, "Now what?"

Barrymore seized her. "Go to the nearest drug store. Get some lime water. Whites of eggs . . ." His voice trailed off as he propelled the confused landlady down the hall.

Jim kept up his prancings and bull bellowings until Barrymore reappeared with a mixture in a bowl. He administered the potion to the dog, and whatever it was, the remedy seemed to quiet him within 15 minutes. During that time Barrymore held the spent and panting animal in his arms as if it were an ailing child.

Suddenly Barrymore remembered that he was due at the theater.

On our way back I remembered I had been sent by McMahon to get an interview. Barrymore was most evasive, said he hadn't the slightest idea what the play was about, and on parting asked me to swear not to waste my time in seeing "Redemption."

"Save your groats for more pleasant stimulants than our drama," he counseled. "Or," he added in parting, "even if you are given a free pass to the playhouse where I gibber with the accents of a pushcart peddler and cavort within the parentheses of Mr. Tolstoy's minor deliriums, I recommend suicide as the lesser of two evils."

• START "GOOD NIGHT, SWEET PRINCE" TOMORROW IN THE DAILY TRIBUNE. WATCH FOR NEXT SUNDAY'S PICTURE STORY OF JOHN BARRYMORE IN THE GRAPHIC SECTION.

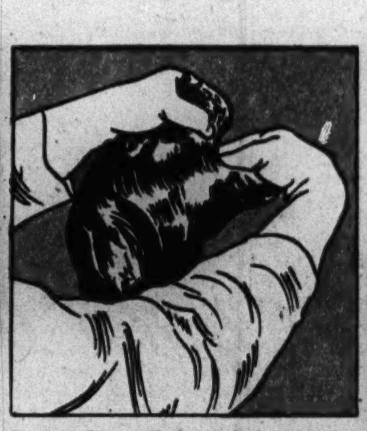
MOSTLY ABOUT DOGS

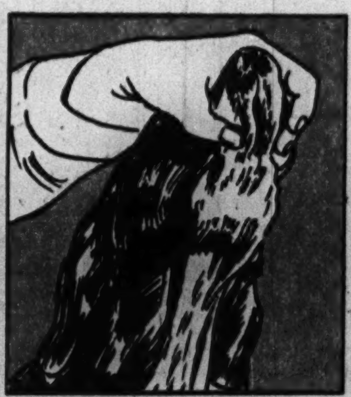
By BOB BECKER

ONE OF THE most important topics of discussion among dog owners today is how and when a family pet should be fed. Whenever we talk with dog fanciers this subject is bound to come up, and from different owners you get different theories on the value of this or that item in the dog's diet.

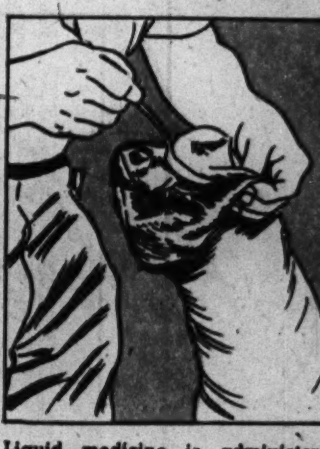
In recent years one of the most interesting papers on this topic that we have read not once but many times is that written by Dr. Clive M. McCay, professor of animal nutrition of Cornell university. Dr. McCay's findings are up to date because his deductions on what the dog needs for a diet are discussed in relation to the modern prepared foods which most owners must turn to in dog feeding today.



Dogs will swallow medicine in the form of capsules or tablets with less resistance if placed in the mouth in a certain way. First, the pet should be in a sitting position. Second, the dog's mouth is held open by the left hand, applying pressure on the upper jaw and lips. Then place the tablet on the back of the dog's tongue.



Second step in giving a dog medicine is to close his mouth and hold his head up until he swallows.



Liquid medicine is administered more easily if one hand is used to form a sort of funnel of the animal's cheek, as shown in the illustration.

Following are excerpts from this paper, which should intrigue every owner of a dog:

The dog in the wild state, says the Cornell scientist, could doubtless do a good job of balancing his diet. A dog can be maintained in just as good condition upon a modern diet of dry feeds. Such a diet provides calcium and phosphorus in the form of bone meal. The proteins in the muscles of a wild animal (which a wild dog would kill and eat) are replaced by the protein of meat scraps, milk products, and soybeans in a dry food.

Dogs can digest and absorb starches and sugars just as well as man. Just as minerals are added to modern dry dog feeds, so they were added to some of the early breads to provide bone-building materials for dogs.

For more than a hundred years nutrition students have fed various fats to dogs to determine if the dog can utilize them. All of these studies have shown that a dog makes good use of fat so long as it does not comprise more than a third of the diet by weight.

So far as the nutrition of the dog is concerned, it is usually best, says Dr. McCay, to rely on one of the prepared feed mixtures, altho the dog itself may show a preference for table scraps. "The situation is very analogous to the child who, left to himself, would usually select a diet of candy, pie, and cake rather than milk and vegetables."

We have found that today not many dog owners can resist the family pet when it is introduced to a meal of prepared food, shows a disinclination to eat it readily, and then rolls its eyes in an appeal to the owner for a slice of roast beef or a piece of lamb which is for human consumption and should not in these days of rationing be given to dogs. It's the old story of the dog trying to get its way and eat what it prefers rather than what may be good for it.

Another interesting point about the diet of the dog as discussed in the McCay study is the need of the dog for vitamins. The author points out that the dog played a leading part in the discovery of vitamins, notably vitamin B1. The vitamins known to be essential for the dog are A, B1, G, nicotinic acid, B6, D, and K. To insure against deficiencies most dry dog feeds contain such products as dried liver, wheat germ meal, and dried yeast. Here again is where balanced prepared food scores as compared with a haphazard table scrap diet.

Armed Forces Discover Amazing Benefits of Chap Stick in Care of Lips

Flyers find this Special Preparation guards lips against roughness, weather-soreness

MILLIONS AT HOME NOW ENJOY SAME LIP RELIEF!

Cavu! To a flyer this means "ceiling and visibility unlimited." Sub-stratosphere fighting and bombing. 30 to 60 below zero temperatures. Under conditions like these, our airmen rate Fleet's Chap Stick "high" for the way it helps prevent their lips from cracking or bleeding.

They wrote the good news home. As a result, millions of people who suffered lip soreness and discomfort made the same wonderful discovery as our flyers: that Chap Stick effectively guards against lip roughness, scaliness and weather-soreness. This is why:—

Chap Stick is made especially for the protection and care of the lips. Contains a combination of medical ingredients which acts 3 ways to quickly—1. Smooth roughness. 2. Soothe feverish soreness. 3. Promote healing. That is why lips feel and look better so fast this way.

Why lips need protection! Lips are vulnerable to weather. Have no means of self-protection as cross section diagram clearly shows. (1) Inner mouth membrane extends outward as a mobile fold to form (2) the free margin of the lip. Delicate outer skin (3) lacks sebaceous glands to lubricate and protect lips. Glands start here (4) below lip membrane.

Don't suffer even minor lip discomforts unnecessarily. Use Chap Stick before exposure to sun, wind, weather. It's invisible. Has been so successful in bringing prompt relief for over 50 years that it's now the largest-selling lip protective in the world. Get Fleet's Chap Stick today. Only 25¢ at drug counters. Look for the name Fleet's. If it isn't Fleet's—it isn't genuine Chap Stick. Chap Stick Co., Lynchburg, Va.

Freezing winds and driving snow will hold no terror for your lips if they're protected with Chap Stick.

Doctors Prove 2 out of 3 Women can have More Beautiful Skin in 14 Days!

14-DAY PALMOLIVE PLAN TESTED ON 1285 WOMEN WITH ALL TYPES OF SKIN

READ THIS TRUE STORY of what the Proved 14-Day Palmolive Plan did for Mrs. John Lyons of Los Angeles, Cal.

"My complexion had lost its soft, smooth look. So I said 'yes' quick when I was invited to try the new 14-Day Palmolive Plan—with 1284 other women all over the U. S. A.! My group reported to a Los Angeles skin doctor. Some of us had dry skins; some oily; some 'average.' After a careful examination, we were given the Palmolive Plan to use at home for 14 days.

"Here's the proved Palmolive Plan: Wash your face 3 times a day with Palmolive Soap. Then—each time—massage your clean face with that lovely, soft Palmolive beauty-lather . . . just like a cream. Do this for a full 60 seconds. This massage extracts the full beautifying effect from Palmolive lather for your skin. Then rinse and dry. That's all!

"After 14 days, I went back to my doctor. He confirmed what my mirror told me. My skin was smoother, finer, less oily! Later I learned many skin improvements had been observed by all the 36 examining doctors. Actually 2 out of 3 of all the 1285 women got see-able, feel-able results. So the 14-Day Palmolive Plan is now my beauty plan for life!"

but Adolf, we aren't making that heating pad now!

ARTHUR SZYK N.Y. 43.

Believe us, we're sorry. We know how much you must need the comfort of a heating pad these disturbing nights.

And the Casco Electric Heating Pad we used to make was so cosy, so colorful, so convenient! Like all Casco products, it had a number of highly unusual features. It had a unique thermostatic control that enabled the temperature to be fixed at any one of 30 desired heats. It had a friendly little "Nite-Lite" for visible temperature adjustments in the dark. And it came in a wide range of enchanting colors that were almost as warm and cheery as the heat it radiated.

But you know what its story is, Adolf — here yesterday, gone today, back tomorrow. In the meantime we're busying ourselves with other prescriptions to help you out — and we do mean out!

For your cold chills down the spine, we definitely recommend our flaming incendiary bullets. Ask the Luftwaffe about this product the next time one of your cities is missing.

We also guarantee to get at the seat of your trouble with our specially tempered, armor-piercing bullet cores. We even invented a way of converting idle and obsolete machines to bullet-core making so you'd be sure to get too much of this product too soon!

Of course we're looking forward to the day when we can supply Casco-made electric heating pads and auto dashboard cigarette lighters and fans and auto spotlights again. But we've got one other very special postwar plan, Adolf.

We want to make one last overseas shipment at our own expense. We want to send a set of our finest, hardest, deadliest bullet components to the tribunal that brings you and your pals to justice! Unless a rope manufacturer gets there first! Casco Products Corporation, Bridgeport, Connecticut.

A TEENIE WEENIE HERO

THE Teenie Weenie Sailor besides being a wonderful swimmer and a fine canoe builder is also a rather good cook. He spends a good deal of his time hanging around the Teenie Weenie kitchen watching the Teenie Weenie Cook prepare the Teenie Weenie meals. One afternoon he stepped into the kitchen just as the Cook was taking a couple of boiled peas from the metal top of a soda mint bottle which he used for a cooking pot.

"O BOY!" exclaimed the Sailor. "Baked peas. I want to watch you so I'll know how to cook them."

"You have to soak the peas over night first," said the Cook. "Then you boil them until they are thoroly cooked. Next you cut them in two, being careful not to break the skin. Then you scoop out the pulp, beat it thoroly and add one half grain of pepper, one grain of salt and a pinch of chopped, dried mushrooms. After this is well mixed you put it back in the pea skins, add a fourth drop of black walnut oil to each half and bake in a hot oven."

"How long do you bake it?" asked the Sailor.

His question was never answered for at that moment the Chinaman burst into the kitchen yelling at the top of his voice.

"Dlunce all time in cleek!" shouted the Chinaman. "He on clothesplin floatin' down stleam."

Now Teenie Weenies move rapidly and grabbing a long coil of thread which lay on the kitchen porch the Sailor ran for the creek as fast as he could go followed by the Cook and the Chinaman. When they reached the bank of the stream they saw the Dunce clinging to a big wooden clothespin which was floating along in the swift running waters toward a ten inch falls not far ahead.

In spite of the dangerously swift water the Sailor caught one end of the thread and plunged into the creek. He swam to the clothespin, grabbed the Dunce by the sweater and yelled to the Cook, who held the other end of the thread, to pull them ashore. With the help of the thread the two Teenie Weenies managed to reach the bank and safety.

"I was tryin' to get that clothespin out of the creek for fire wood," explained the shivering Dunce, "when I fell in and was carried down by the current."

"Well, it's mighty lucky the Sailor happened to be around," said the Cook, "or you'd have gone over the falls and you wouldn't have had any baked peas for supper."

"B-B-Baked p-p-peas!" chattered the Dunce. "J-J-Jinks, I w-w-would have hated to have missed that."

PYREX BRAND OVEN WARE for better and faster baking CORNING GLASS WORKS Corning, N.Y., U.S.A.

UNCLE SAM wants stronger nephews and nieces and leaner garbage cans. Here's how you can help! Ever notice how much food gets wasted when you cook in an ordinary baking dish?

You lose food when you transfer it from baking dish to serving dish. You lose more when leftovers go into a refrigerator dish. You lose some more when it's warmed over and served again. You probably lose at least a full helping! Now see how you save with Pyrex Ware. You bake, serve, and store in the same crystal clear dish. You even reheat leftovers in it and use it again for serving. You haven't made a single dish-to-dish transfer. One dish does the whole job.

You've saved precious food. And you've saved time, dishwashing, soap and hot water besides!

JUST CALL ME SHINY
Shiny
STAR SALESMAN for SHINOLA "PROTECTION"
SHINOLA BLACK
SHINOLA
KEEP 'EM SHINING WITH SHINOLA

Like the OIL in my feathers, the oily waxes in SHINOLA help provide "protection" for your shoes!

● Water, dust, and grime are all harmful to leather, because they clog the pores . . . causing the leather to become stiff and dry.

Shiny, the duck, knows from his own personal experience how oils protect. That's why he recommends Shinola. Shinola's scientific combination of oily waxes is a life-prolonging "treatment" for leather. It helps repel water, dust, and grime . . . helps hold in and replenish the leather's natural oils . . . helps maintain the natural flexibility longer.

Now more than ever it's important to conserve leather . . . to get the most out of your shoe coupons. Shinola Shoe Polishes will help you do this. Easy to apply . . . economical to buy, Shinola buffs to a quick, brilliant shine. Remember: a shine is the sign of a healthy shoe—so keep 'em shining with Shinola.

Wartime places heavy demands upon our supplies, so if your dealer is out of a particular shade, please be patient.

SCIENCE TELLS WHY:

HE FLOATS
HE SINKS

The natural oils in his feathers throw off water . . . and he floats. When these oils are removed, his feathers absorb water . . . and he sinks.

WHOOPEE, DO WE LOVE ROYAL GELATIN!

See for yourself why these women prefer ROYAL Strawberry* Gelatin almost 2 to 1

"Other ROYAL Gelatin Flavors and ROYAL Puddings so delicious, too!" says MARY WOODS of the Royal Kitchens

Royal Strawberry Snow Pudding

Try it with any other Royal Gelatin flavor, too

1 package Royal Strawberry Flavor Gelatin
1 cup boiling water 1 cup cold water
¼ teaspoon salt

Dissolve tangy-rich Royal Strawberry Flavor Gelatin in boiling water. Add cold water and salt; chill until mixture begins to thicken. Whip until frothy and thick. Pile into mold or sherbet glasses, chill until firm. Extra delicious served with sauce made from Royal Vanilla Pudding prepared with 3 cups milk. 8 servings.

"HERE'S what happened! 363 women tried Royal Strawberry Flavor Gelatin and another well-known brand right in their own kitchens. The desserts were in plain, unmarked packages. No one knew which was which. But they picked Royal! It was the winner by almost 2 to 1. They liked Royal's flavor better—its rich, fruity aroma—its consistency, not too stiff or too soft.

"Try Royal Strawberry Flavor Gelatin soon. If you can't get strawberry, take any Royal flavor. You'll love them all. Royal is flavor-sealed, richer, tangier. Royal Puddings are tops, too. Have them often. And be sure to try this recipe using pudding and gelatin!"

REMEMBER—More women use Royal Puddings than any other kind!

Even Glasses Sparkle Like Jewels!
dreft

dreft washes dishes clean without wiping!

Dishes and glasses dry sparkling clean without wiping -No streaks! No cloudiness!

No soap—even the finest soap flakes—can get dishes as gleaming clean as quickly and easily as Dreft.

Even glasses rinse so sparkling clear they drain dry without streaks or cloudiness. So shining clean they have that polished-for-company look—without even wiping.

You see, Dreft is not just a soap. Dreft is a new kind of suds—the first suds in the world to wash your dishes sparkling clean without wiping . . . streakless . . . cloudless!

Dreft is so different it holds 7 U. S. patents. So different it makes 5 times more suds than even finest soap flakes in hardest water. And Dreft won't redden your hands.

★ ★ ★ WHY THERE IS A SHORTAGE OF DREFT ★ ★ ★

● Please don't blame your dealer for the shortage of Dreft. Here is the reason it is so scarce. Dreft is an important scientific development—different from any soap, made from different material. And this material—the thing which makes Dreft better for dishes and safer for colors—is the very thing needed just now by our Uncle Sam to fill important war needs. Since we cannot foretell how long this shortage will last, we ask Dreft's millions of friends, old and new, to keep on the lookout for the bright green Dreft package. It will return to your dealer's shelves the minute present emergency demands are over.

★ NO SOAP YOU EVER USED CAN GIVE DISHES THAT SHINING POLISHED LOOK THE WAY DREFT DOES

RADICALS ENTER CONGRESS BATTLES

HOPEFULS PUSH DRIVES TO SIT IN LEGISLATURE

Spirited Contests Are Expected.

BY LEE SHASSERE.

Candidates for seats in the Illinois house of representatives who are bidding for nomination at the April 11 primary have shifted their campaigns into high gear.

In approximately a dozen Cook county and adjoining districts, victory at the primary will be tantamount to election because senatorial committee action is expected to result in the nominations of both parties totaling only three and three representatives will be elected from each district next November.

However, spirited contests loom in districts where each party committee has placed two up for nomination. All Cook county Democratic senatorial committees, it is understood, plan to authorize two nominations in each district.

Two will be nominated by each party in all districts on Chicago's north side save the first where the Republicans will name only one. The asterisk [*] indicates incumbents.

Hankel is chairman of the day. A dessert luncheon and brief business meeting, with Mrs. Carl Pauly, president, in charge, will precede the program. There will be election of officers. A meeting of the board will be held at 11 a. m.

Welles Park War Garden Meeting Set for Friday

Arthur Jackson, junior horticulturist of the park district, will speak at the opening war garden meeting of the Welles Park Woman's club, at 2:15 p. m. Friday at the Welles park fieldhouse. Chairman of the meeting will be Mrs. Arthur T. Johnson, 2215 Winona av.

Members from 40 Schools Admire Homemade Articles at PTA Exhibit

At River park fieldhouse, 5100 N. Francisco av., the North Side Council of Parent-Teacher Associations, representing 40 schools, held its first homemakers' exhibit recently. Typical of the displays from each school was that of McPherson. Mrs. Carl Shiplock, 5219 N. Damen av., a member of Trumbull PTA, admires a pair of slippers in the McPherson exhibit. True to the spirit of the occasion, she is wearing a dress and hat she made herself. In the background, left to right, are Mrs. E. K. Willcox, 4887 Ravenswood av., and Mrs. W. J. Hoeger, 4809 N. Hoyne av.

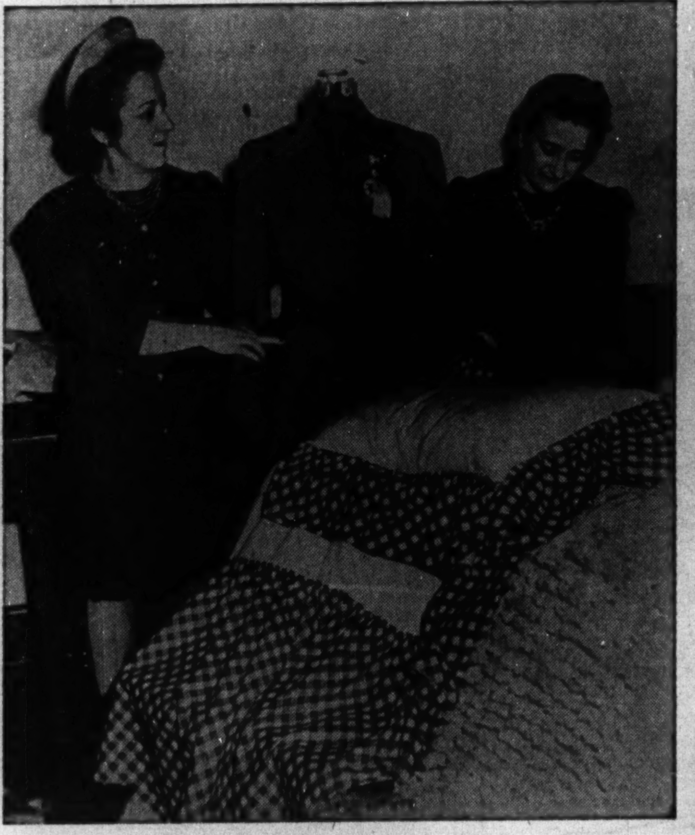
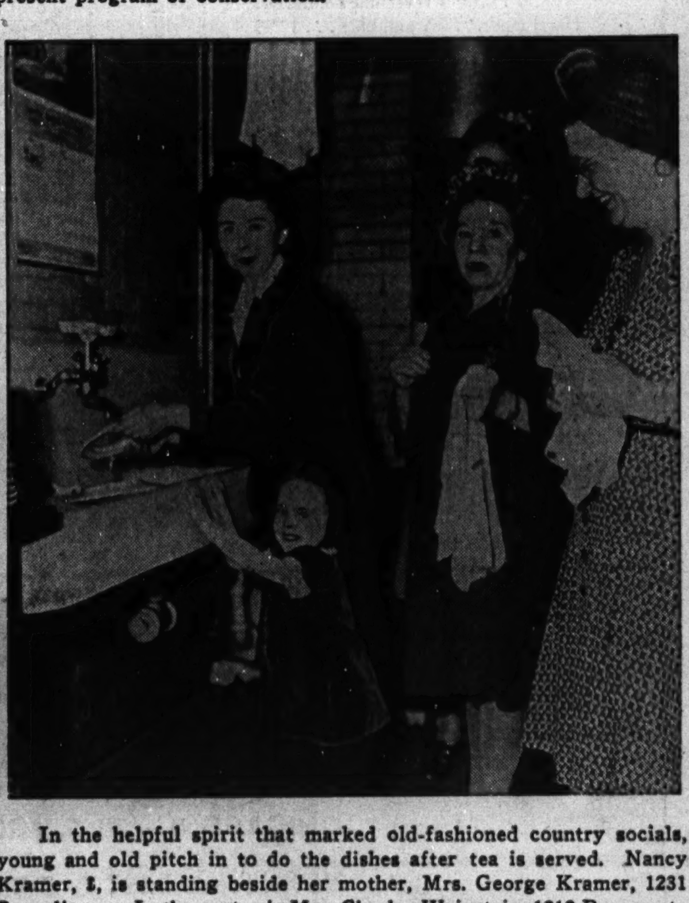
While the show is going on, the exhibitors have an interlude for coffee and tea and talk. Mrs. H. O. Keys, 2155 Sedgwick st., president of the North Side council, serves coffee in rustic fashion to Mrs. H. E. Ingram, 1527 Fargo av., council treasurer. Mrs. Keys made the skirt she is wearing, and Mrs. Ingram her hat.



Ribbons were awarded to the outstanding article in the display of each school. A dress made by Mrs. K. W. Sanders, 5027 N. Francisco av., won the ribbon in the Budlong school exhibit. Mrs. W. M. Dean, left, 2553 Winnemac av., president of the Budlong PTA, inspects the workmanship of the dress, while Mrs. A. I. Malkin, 2728 Winnemac av., homemaking chairman of the group, looks at a checked bedspread in the display.

Not only mothers contributed their work to the homemakers' show. Mrs. W. S. Doble, 5537½ Winthrop av., homemaking chairman of the Swift PTA, holds up a rug made by Betty Verhulst, 12, of 5800 Kenmore av. Many of the articles which older exhibitors brought to the show were remade hats and suits, conforming to the present program of conservation.

Mrs. Silas Woxland, 1824 Orleans st., homemaking chairman of the La Salle PTA, made a dress especially for the exhibit. Another project which she had in the show was a table cloth with names of many of the local PTA members embroidered on it. It is used at their meetings.



In the helpful spirit that marked old-fashioned country socials, young and old pitch in to do the dishes after tea is served. Nancy Kramer, 8, is standing beside her mother, Mrs. George Kramer, 1231 Cornelia av. In the center is Mrs. Charles Weinstein, 1212 Roscoe st., and to the right, Mrs. Elof Nordstrom, 3228 Sheffield av. The women are members of the Hawthorne PTA.

STATE SENATORS TO BE ELECTED IN SIX DISTRICTS

This is the year when Illinois' even numbered senatorial districts nominate and elect state senator candidates. In Cook county the districts are the 2d, 4th, and 6th. The 8th and 14th districts include Boone, McHenry, Lake, Kane, and Kendall counties. In Chicago's odd numbered 31st district, an election will be held to fill the vacancy created by the death of Sen. Milton D. Smith.

Edward P. Saltiel, 3318 Lake Shore dr., present 31st district state representative, is making the Republican bid for the vacancy and has no opposition in the April 11 primary. The Democratic candidate, Albert L. Schwartz, 539 Roscoe st., is also unopposed. The 31st includes ward 48 and parts of wards 42, 43, 44, 46, and 49.

In the 6th district, which includes Evanston and parts of Chicago wards 43, 44, 45, 46, 47, 49, and 50, Louis Rixmann, 6360 Paulina st., is the lone Democratic entry in the primary. On the Republican ticket, William G. Knox, 1615 Chase av., the incumbent, and Harry Walter Klinke, 4414 Ashland av., seek the nomination.

In the 8th district [Boone, McHenry, and Lake counties] the Democratic candidate, Charles F. Hayes, 101 Garfield rd., Harvard, is unopposed. Republican candidates are Ray Paddock, Round Lake, the incumbent, and Albert E. Nordstrom, Waukegan.

CIO Fights Dewey and Church.

BY WILLIAM SHINNICK.

Important congressional primary campaigns which will be a prelude to fireworks in the general election in November got under way during the last week, with indications that the fading Democratic regime is to have active help from well organized radical groups in several districts.

It has been reported that Congressman Charles S. Dewey, Republican, of the 9th district, will be one of the targets of the so-called professional and business men's committee for political action, which is already organizing in the northwest side's huge 7th district. Dewey is unopposed in the primary on April 11.

Resa on Democratic Slate.

Regarded as leading in the race for the Democratic nomination in the 9th is Alexander J. Resa, 3640 Lake Shore drive, an assistant corporation counsel.

Resa, who is 56 years old and a bachelor, was born on the south side. His education was obtained in the city schools, St. Joseph's college in Missouri and the John Marshall Law school.

He was admitted to the bar in 1911. Since 1918 he has been a member of the faculty of John Marshall. He joined the corporation counsel's office as head of the appeals division in 1937. Since 1940 he has been in charge of the public improvements division and is handling the city's litigation growing out of the subway building.

Opposing Resa are Monte Randall, 161 E. Ontario st., and Frederick F. March, 230 E. Superior st., neither well known politically. Resa will have organization support. Some Democratic leaders were reported willing to bet that, with the radicals' support, he will beat Dewey, who won in 1940 and 1942 by comparatively small margins.

Woman Runs Against Church.

In the 10th district, which includes much of the north side and all of Lake county, Republican Congressman Ralph E. Church of Evanston is opposed by Florence Hopan Griesel, a nationalist, of 3454 Lincoln av. One of her convictions is that there should be more women office holders; another that women must take the responsibility for keeping America independent of foreign influences while the men are fighting abroad.

Unopposed for the Democratic nomination in the 10th is Curtis Daniel MacDougall, professor of journalism at Northwestern university since 1933. He formerly edited the Evanston News-Index. He is a member of the Council for Democratic Action and his name appears as sponsor on the literature of the professional and business men's "political action" group.

Numerous members of this group describe themselves as CIO representatives. The organization tenets include complete subservience to Roosevelt policies in regard to foreign relations, subsidies, price fixing, and collaboration with Russia on the lines of the Teheran conference "declaration."

Predict Victory by Church.

Church had a majority of more than 62,000 in 1942 and the Republicans have no fear of his defeat. He is regarded as almost certain of nomination.

In four other Chicago districts—the 1st, 2d, 3d and 7th—hot fights are certain in the fall. There are primary contests in each of these.

In the 1st district, which includes the loop, the Democratic nomination will go without a fight to William L. Dawson, incumbent and congress' only Negro member. On the Republican side, William E. King has the organization support and is opposed by Earl B. Dickerson.

In the 2d, Congressman William A. Rowan will receive the Democratic indorsement without a fight. Thomas J. Downs is the Republican organization choice and is opposed by four other candidates.

No Opposition to Busbey.

Rep. Fred E. Busbey, Republican, has no primary opposition in the 3d. In the Democratic ranks Edward A. Kelly, who lost to Busbey two years ago, is expected to be the nominee.

The most vigorous fight of all apparently will be in the 7th, which has over 900,000 residents and went Democratic by only 1,975 in 1942. William W. Link is the Democratic machine choice, but is opposed by Stanley T. Gross. Leading candidates for the G. O. P. nomination are Charles H. Garland, mayor of Des Plaines, who is supported by the regular organization, and Dr. Alfred P. Haake of Park Ridge. The 7th takes in most of the city's northwest side and nine country townships.

A. J. Kirschten Will Head Catholic Choral Society

Adalbert J. Kirschten, 5861 Virginia av., recently was chosen president of the Catholic Casino, a choral society with headquarters at 811 Oakdale av. Theodore K. Handing, 1462 Balmoral av., former president, is chairman of the society's board of directors. A certificate of recognition for meritorious service during his presidency was given to Mr. Handing by members.

WARD BATTLES, LIKE FLOWERS, HAVE ODOR, TOO

Black, Serritella Fight for 'World's Richest.'

BY EDWARD SCHREIBER.

Fights blossomed like flowers in the spring last week when a rush of new candidacies completed the ward committeeman lineups for the April 11 primary election. The periodical feature of such contests may make the simile apt but it does not mean that these seven north side political battles will be fragrant.

In the "world's richest" 1st ward, including the downtown sector and some territory north and south, the real duel will be between Committeeman Daniel A. Serritella and Bernard S. [Bun] Black. Serritella, ousted from his state senate seat in the 1942 primary, has often been charged with bipartisan deals.

Black Has Backing.

Black is state lodging house inspector and a leader of the Business Men's committee which has combatted vote frauds since 1940. He has been given all state patronage as of a few weeks ago and states that he is set to prevent any effective Democratic help from reaching Serritella.

Other contestants are William F. Gailing, like Black a resident of the La Salle hotel, and Claudius A. Reid, 2128 State st., a last minute entry. All four are Republicans. Fred M. Morelli is unopposed to succeed the aged Michael [Hinky Dink] Kenna as Democratic ward ruler.

Acting Committeeman Paul C. Ross, 20 E. Delaware pl., in the "roaring 42d" ward on the near north side is being fought by Charles E. Peace, who was G. O. P. ward leader from 1920 to 1940. Ross was elected some months ago by the precinct captains when Samuel L. Workman resigned. This is one of the lively contests, with Ross' supporters charging that Peace is backed by the Democrats as a continuance of past bipartisan dealing.

Bauler, Kane to Mix.

The only Democratic scrap in sight in the north section is between Matthias [Paddy] Bauler, 43d ward fixture, and James J. Kane, owner of a large storage warehouse. Kane has long been associated with State's Atty. Courtney but in view of the latter's candidacy for governor it is not expected that he welcomes this intra-party ruckus. Kane ran for alderman in 1939.

In the 44th ward Richard J. Donnellan, 2215 Dayton st., an inventor and successful manufacturer, will defend his G. O. P. crown against W. H. Steed, 2757 Pine Grove av., and Albert E. Loescher, 2028 N. Sheffield av. Loescher was alderman for four terms until 1933 when he suddenly quit the race for reelection.

Veteran Faces Fight.

A hot fight is foreseen in the 47th ward between Frank R. Leonard, 2647 Wilson av., veteran ward committeeman who has become round shouldered carrying water for the party elephant, and Ald. Frank O. Hilburn, 4120 N. Paulina st., elected last year to his second term in the city council. Leonard will have regular organization support, while Hilburn is rallying the independents.

Another veteran Republican committeeman, State Rep. George A. Williston, former alderman of the 49th ward, is being opposed by Arthur A. Bogaerts, 6738 Glenwood av.

In the 50th, Committeeman Jens M. Jensen again is having a tussle to keep his place. Independent organizations are claimed by both John L. Coffield Sr., 6256 N. Artesian av., and Henry C. Doehne, 5853 N. Artesian av., who has tried before to unseat Jensen.

Unopposed for Election.

Unopposed candidates in other north side wards are:

Republicans—43d, James B. Waller; 45th, Charles J. Fleck; 46th, Max Landesman; 48th, Edgar A. Jonas.

Democrats—1st, Fred M. Morelli; 42d, William J. Connors; 44th, Raymond W. Moore; 45th, Charles H. Weber; 46th, Joseph L. Gill; 47th, Joseph H. Donohue; 48th, Frank Lyman; 49th, Frank Keenan; 50th, Louis Rixmann.

Candidates have until Tuesday to withdraw.

Two North Siders Given Commissions at U. of C.

Two north siders received commissions in the army air forces at the recent commencement exercises of the Institute of Meteorology at the University of Chicago. They were Richard D. Ware, 6151 Winthrop av., and William G. Wells, 851 Grace st.

Jacob C. Kromer, 4756 N. Maplewood av., was elected commander of the new chapter. Other officers chosen at the first meeting include Fred J. Geisler, 5231 Winthrop av., senior vice commander; Wesley O. Norman, 1463 Berwyn av., finance officer, and Albert A. Ercanbrack, 1067 Argyle st., judge advocate.

A second meeting will be held soon to elect other officers for the chapter. Frank Schneller, 3000 Sheridan rd., is national vice commander of the order.

JOHN SNOWDEN WINS TOP BOY SCOUT AWARD

Advancements in rating have been achieved by several north side Boy Scouts recently. The highest award, that of the bronze palm, went to John Snowden, an eagle Scout, of 2518 Wilson av.

The rank of life Scout was given to Bob Zelikow, 1465 Winnemac av.; Edward Wilpert, 5707 Kenmore av.; Seymour Rubin, 636 Cornelia av.; Stanley Tigerman, 6166 Winthrop av., and James Nogle, 4123 N. Oakley av.

New star Scouts are Frank Apel, 4443 N. Rockwell st.; Robert M. Pincus, 5115 Kenmore av., and Thaddeus Superson, 2458 Carmen av.

PTA MEMBERS EXHIBIT CRAFT SKILLS AT SHOW

North Siders Make Own Quilts, Hats, Dresses.

It could have been part of a bustling, old fashioned country fair, this exhibit of handmade quilts and rugs, tea caddies, jellies and canned beans, flowered hats and children's dresses. More than 200 women were pushing and chatting and making the rounds of the crowded tables.

Instead of a country fair, however, it was a show of articles made during the last few months by members of the 40 PTAs in the North Side council of Parent-Teacher associations.

In coöperation with the present program of conservation, the council was holding its first homemakers' exhibit at the River park fieldhouse, 5100 N. Francisco av.

Seek Handicraft Skills.

"We were supposed to have a recipe exchange too," Mrs. C. R. Swinehart, 5950 Kenmore av., a member of the council committee, said. "I don't know what happened to it. Everybody was more anxious to contribute something she'd made, I guess."

"Women are taking up handicraft skills they have neglected for a number of years," said Mrs. John Templeman, 5935 N. Drake av., council chairman of education for home and family life. "As you can see, they've been making many of the things that are scarce now because of the shortage of labor and materials.

Remodel Clothes.

"And they're trying to do with what they have, too," she went on. "There are lots of remade hats and suits and dresses here."

Mrs. Templeman was assisted in arranging the exhibit by the homemaking chairmen of the local associations and by North Side council officers.

This WEEK in the GARDEN

Monday, March 6

Some kinds of perennials can be sown now for early planting. These include such well known kinds as dianthus, alyssum, aquilegia, arabis, iberis, and forget-me-not. Salvia farinacea, a lovely blue species that is useful when cut for mixed bouquets, may also be sown.

When sowing delphinium seed at this season, soak in hot water until the seed swells, then sow. It is best to sow fresh seed in the fall in a cold frame to obtain a high germination, leaving in the frame until spring and then planting out.

With the advance of warm weather and the urge to begin garden operation, do not be hasty and remove the mulch from perennials and roses. Heavy material should be partially removed.

Tuesday, March 7

Rockery plants may be heaved from the ground; these should be replaced firmly and a little fresh soil applied between the plants. Dead leaves also can be removed. As soon as perennials show activity, all rough materials between the plants should be carefully raked off and the finer portions carefully spaded under.

An application of fertilizer should be made before spading to stimulate growth. Simply take a handful and scatter on the ground around each plant. Roll when the ground is not too wet. Rolling levels the depressions if they are not too great.

Wednesday, March 8

Spray lilacs and other shrubs that are infested with scales. A contact spray is essential, for each insect must be hit to kill it. Spray materials can be obtained ready prepared at supply houses.

Thursday, March 9

Spade under the finer portions of the mulch that is around shrubs, using care not to break the roots of the plants. If the hedge has become unsightly or parts have died from any cause, cut all the plants in the hedge to within a few inches of the ground. This is especially true when privet hedges are grown, for they respond quickly after trimming and the result is astonishing.

Friday, March 10

If the amaryllis bulbs show activity, repot them, leaving the old roots on, and bring to a window where the light conditions are good. Water sparingly until growth advances. If seeds are sown thinly, much thinning will be unnecessary. This applies to sowing in boxes indoors and out of doors in the frame or garden.

Saturday, March 11

Give the asparagus bed an application of a complete fertilizer. Examine all perennials, bulbs, or other plants and if any have heaved tamp the soil firmly around them. When hardy chrysanthemums start into growth, divide the clump and replant in well fertilized soil.

Native games will be played and there will be booths for embroideries, novelties, and Swiss pastries.

Women Sell Bonds.

Many of the members of the Swiss ladies' chorus have been active in selling war bonds and stamps thru the woman's division of the war finance committee. HOT PRIMARIES LOOM FOR CONGRESS

HOPEFULS PUSH DRIVES TO SIT IN LEGISLATURE

Spirited Contests Are Expected.

BY LEE SHASSERE.

Candidates for seats in the Illinois house of representatives who are bidding for nomination at the April 11 primary have shifted their campaigns into high gear.

In approximately a dozen Cook county and adjoining districts, victory at the primary will be tantamount to election because senatorial committee action is expected to result in the nominations of both parties totaling only three and three representatives will be elected from each district next November.

However, spirited contests loom in districts where each party committee has placed two up for nomination. All Cook county Democratic senatorial committees, it is understood, plan to authorize two nominations in each district.

Follows Kelly Plan.

This action marks the first time the Democrats have ever moved to nominate two in each Cook county precinct. Whether it reflects confidence as to the outcome of the November election or assumes a "whistling in the dark" attitude because of growing Republican power is a matter of speculation. The order is reported to have come from Mayor Kelly.

Some political observers who predict a big primary vote base their forecasts on a belief in an aroused electorate because of strenuous times.

Following are candidates for the Illinois house from the south section. The asterisk [*] indicates incumbents. The single dagger [†] indicates a forecast of Republican senatorial committee action. The Democrats will nominate two in each district.

FIRST DISTRICT.

[Parts of wards 1, 2, and 11.]

GEORGE KONKOL WINS TOP RATING AT NAVY PRE-FLIGHT SCHOOL

George Konkol.

Naval Aviation Cadet George Konkol, son of Mrs. Clara Konkol, 8843 Exchange av., has achieved the highest over-all average ever made at the navy pre-flight school at Athens, Ga., under the present ground school system.

Each cadet is graded on an average of military, athletic, and academic work for the three months' intensive physical conditioning and ground school training and Konkol scored 3.79, or 95 per cent. The previous record was 3.75.

Konkol graduated from Bowen High school and attended the Illinois Institute of Technology before entering the V-5 program. A member of the regimental champion wrestling team and a battalion subcommander, he has been assigned to the naval air station, Memphis, Tenn.

Seek 500 Child Care Aids to Help at City's 60 War Nurseries

While their mothers work in nearby war plants, Francis Stoll, 4; Allan Dwan, 2, and Arthur Scherer, 3½, struggle manfully to sölve their own building and transportation problems in the Sullivan war nursery, 8255 Brandon av. Five hundred more child care aids are now being enlisted to help care for the children in the city's 60 child care centers.

Tiny Ronda Wexler, 5, and Robert Stoll, 4, leave the main playroom with Mrs. Harriet Terry, 7442 South Shore dr., one of the two volunteers at the centers. The additional volunteers sought to man the centers will receive training in a new course scheduled to start at the University of Chicago tomorrow.

The pre-school youngsters listen intently while Rose Wheeler, one of the three trained teachers on the center's staff, reads to them. Volunteers enrolling in the new course at the University of Chicago will have the opportunity to learn songs, stories, and rhythms which nursery age children find entertaining.

Three year old Mary Elizabeth Taylor puts her dolly to bed in a corner of the Sullivan nursery. The volunteers in the course will be given 30 hours of lectures and observation of pre-school children in day care centers such as this one.

Mrs. Sidonia Bell, another of the teachers, gives Franklin Peebles, 3, a few help hints in play table construction while Francis Stoll and Barbara Whitebloom look on. To make an appointment for an interview, prospective volunteers should call Wab. 0528 or go to the volunteer office, 53 W. Jackson blvd.

The boys take advantage of a good natured young lady and Allan Dwan and Franklin Peeble let Sharon Swann, 4, push them around in a doll crib temporarily converted into a cart in the Sullivan playroom.

CITY COLLEGES' REGISTRATIONUP; WILSON LARGEST

Registration for the second semester at Chicago City Junior colleges shows a net increase over the enrollment for the preceding semester, despite increasing demands of the services and industry. The Wilson branch continues to be the largest school. Total enrollment for the City colleges is approximately 3,000 students.

Most of the junior college students are active in some form of war work in addition to their scholastic activities. About 2,000 former students are now in service, many of them overseas. Each branch school maintains its own honor roll and has some form of service bureau thru which students and faculty write letters and send gifts to the school's service men and women.

The Junior colleges were established in 1943 by the board of education. Each branch is tuition free and fully accredited.

Boy from Gary Glad He Heard Call of Seas

BY ROBERT CROMIE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

[Copyright: 1944: By The Chicago Tribune.]

SOMEWHERE IN THE ATLANTIC, Feb. 15 [By Air Mail].—It's a long way from the steel mills of Gary, Ind., to the sea. But Nicholas Smar has no trouble explaining how he found his way.

"Once the wanderlust is in you," he says simply, "you might as well give up."

Smar, now sailing his first command, the Liberty ship George T. Angell, on her maiden voyage, is only 32 years old. But he has already been everywhere, seen everything, including the tragic sight of seven allied ships, one his own, pounded into the calm waters of the Bay of Bengal by the roaring guns of three Jap warships.

Starts as Lake Sailor.

Nicholas Smar was born in Gary, where his parents, the Michael Smars, a brother Michael, and a sister, Mrs. Anna Strong, still live. He decided to spend a summer as a sailor on the Great Lakes in 1929 to build up his weight for high school football. But he returned to school for one semester only before hurrying back to his new love.

He worked on the lakes until 1932 and then grew restless again. He hitchhiked to New York. Things were tough there. He hitchhiked to Gloucester, Mass., but the fishing fleet did not need men. So, he went to Portland, Me., and shipped as an ordinary seaman on a freighter running between the Americas. Since then he has worked on many lines and climbed from a seaman to captain.

He was third mate on the American Export lines' freighter Exmoor, which sailed without guns two days after Pearl Harbor, taking lend-lease foodstuffs and tanks to Suez—tanks which later helped to smash the famed Afrika Korps.

Convoy Meets Jap Cruisers.

The Exmoor made two trips to Suez, unscathed thru 11 air raids, and then headed for Calcutta, India, where she was loaded with jute, tea, and shellac. She joined five British and one Chinese ship and headed out to sea. But 14 hours after dropping the pilot, the commodore of the tiny convoy signaled: "Jap cruisers sighted." This was early in the morning of April 6, 1942.

The whole convoy swung toward the shore 15 miles away, and Smar, on the bridge, ordered the engineer to make plenty of smoke in an effort at concealment. A low flying Jap plane circled the commodore's ship, gave a few bursts from his machine gun, and then the Japs opened fire.

"The commodore's ship, a big British and India passenger liner, was the first to go," Smar said. "She burst into flames and capsized. The vice commodore's was the next. We were the second last ship to get it.

Solace in Black Handbag.

"We got nine hits. The first struck the hatch and blew the covers sky high. The foremast collapsed and the ship started going slowly down at the head. Then the No. 3 hold was hit, another shell hit the galley, another the engine room, and the next hit the smokestack and carried away both starboard lifeboats. I was in charge of one port lifeboat which got away successfully. We were 26 men in our boat and picked up the chief engineer. He was paddling unconcernedly around, hanging on to some oars. And he had a little handbag. After a while we came to appreciate that handbag. In it he had a bottle of rum."

Smar's next berth after his return to the United States was as second mate on a Liberty ship shuttling between England and North Africa. He participated in allied landings near Oran, and after a second trip to Oran he stopped at Glasgow, where he met Miss Audrey Niven, 21, who will become Mrs. Nicholas Smar within the next two weeks. Smar thinks fate had a hand in his romance. He had seen Miss Niven briefly in January, again in September, and had corresponded with her. But he had no time for long visits.

Then late in 1943, a day out of England bound for Africa, his ship—and his alone—was ordered to put back to Glasgow and unload. This gave him a fine chance for a little courting, he proposed and was accepted.

Sees His Ship Built.

Smar's present ship—the George T. Angell—was named in honor of the founder of the Massachusetts chapter of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. It was built under the watchful eye of Capt. Smar who saw the keel laid and saw the Angell launched 56 days later at the Todd shipyards in Portland, Me.

Smar's only hobby is the piano accordion which he can't play. He bought it from the chief engineer for $90.

He is thoroly articulate, this quiet, young captain, except when you ask him how a man whose ancestors were farmers for generations back ever wound up at sea.

"It's something you can't get away from," he began bravely enough. "I never thought of the sea when I was in school, but I liked it the first day aboard a ship. It just gets ahold of you. There's something in it. Every time I hear a whistle blow—every time I hear a fog horn—," he paused helplessly. "Well, I know I'll never work in that steel mill in Gary."

But it's probably no fault at all of Gary's. In 14 years at sea Smar has met only one other man from Gary.

21 CANDIDATES SEEKING POSTS IN 5 DISTRICTS

Incumbents Face No April Opposition.

BY WILLIAM SHINNICK.

Warm primary fights for congressional nominations in five south side districts were forecast last week after the field of candidates was shaken down by late withdrawals.

In the Republican and Democratic parties combined 21 aspirants are seeking the 10 nominations in the districts—the 1st, 2d, 3d, 4th, and 6th. Five of the 21, however—the incumbent congressmen—are without primary opposition, leaving 16 "outs" battling for five places on the ballots.

See Two Shifts to G. O. P.

Much of the interest being displayed by party leaders and voters centers about the 1st and 2d districts, which elected Democrats as representatives in 1942 by close margins. It is the belief of experts in the G. O. P. camp that a vigorous effort is almost sure to shift these districts to Republican. They are even more confident that Rep. Fred E. Busbey [R.] of the 3d will keep his place, won under difficult conditions two years ago.

Chicago and the immediate suburban area have 11 districts, of which seven now have Democratic congressmen. Besides the 3d, the Republicans hold the 9th, 10th, and 11th, the last two by safe margins. It is regarded as probable that the huge 7th district on the northwest side, the largest in the United States by population, as well as the 1st and 2d, will roll back into the Republican column next fall; it has over 450,000 voters and a Democrat, Leonard W. Schuetz, was elected by a plurality of only 1,975 in 1942. Schuetz died recently.

Six Back Tax Veto.

In general the Chicago Democrats in congress have been subservient to the New Deal. Every one of the six still living voted to uphold President Roosevelt's recent veto of the tax bill. Only 89 of their colleagues were with them and 299 against.

The other four districts usually have swollen majorities for Democratic incumbents and only a landslide would put them into the Republican ranks. These districts are the 4th, 5th, 6th, and 8th.

Information on the south side districts follow:

FIRST DISTRICT

The incumbent, William L. Dawson, is the only Negro in congress and the seat is certain to be retained by a member of his race. In the 1942 election Dawson defeated William E. King, Republican, by 2,743 votes.

There is a strong prospect that the same men will be opponents in next fall's contest. King, who has the Republican organization backing, is opposed only by Earl B. Dickerson, former alderman and ex-head of the Urban league. In 1942 Dickerson was a candidate for congress with a Democratic label, but was snowed under by Dawson in the primary.

King, Louisiana born, was educated at Howard university and John Marshall law school. He was assistant corporation counsel and assistant state's attorney before 1925, and served 12 years as a state legislator. He is 2d ward Republican committeeman and since 1941 has been a member of the Illinois Industrial commission.

The 1st district takes in the loop and a wedge of territory south to 43d st.; its population is one-fourth that of the 2d district.

SECOND DISTRICT

This district comprises all the area south of 43d st. and east of State st. within the city limits and has 612,000 residents. The incumbent representative is William A. Rowan.

Five Republicans are seeking the nomination here. Thomas J. Downs, attorney, 40 years old, has the backing of the regular G. O. P. organization. He was president of the Young Republican organization in 1936 and 1937. In 1942 Downs was the nominee for congress and lost to Rowan by only 3,500 votes. His platform includes winning the war first, putting patriotism above patronage and shelving nonwar activities until peace comes. He is a nephew of the late L. A. Downs, president of the Illinois Central railroad.

Atty. William T. Pridmore of 8104 Jeffery av., is making his race as an opponent of any world super-government and an advocate of "restoring the Republic." He is opposed to annoyance of business, big and little, by burocrats' questionnaires and to drafting civilians for any purpose; also to having the United States considered as a "British colony."

His friends describe Pridmore as an able and conscientious citizen who is in the race because of his belief that the country can be saved only by a change in the political complexion of congress.

Edgar C. Brown, journalist and director of the National Negro council, another candidate, is strongly anti-New Deal, and against the fourth term. Some Republican leaders question his party loyalty.

CLOSE PRIMARY FIGHTS SEEN IN CONGRESS RACE

Five South Side Districts Have 21 Candidates.

Frank O'Leath, 1624 E. 56th st., is running as a proponent of better treatment for service men. He is an insurance broker. Fred Burt, 1115 E. 47th st., is the fifth candidate.

THIRD DISTRICT

This big district on the south side, traditionally Republican up to 1930, returned to its old allegiance two years ago, when it elected Fred E. Busbey congressman. Busbey, who fought valiantly against the federal "bobtail ballot" for soldiers, has no primary opposition.

Edward A. Kelly, congressman defeated by Busbey, is in the Democratic race in the hope of turning the tables this time. He has the Kelly machine support. He is in the real estate and insurance business. Kelly is 52 years old and lives at 8223 S. Aberdeen st.

Opposing him are Paul B. Saltimieras, operator of radio station WGES and a leader among Chicago Lithuanians, and James A. Hivick of 5531 S. Kilbourn av. Charles P. Kal, attorney, announced that he had retired from the race in favor of Saltimieras.

FOURTH DISTRICT

In the 4th district Martin Gorski has no opposition for Democratic nomination.

Leo J. Kozicki, printing firm head and real estate dealer, claims the support of nearly all the organized G. O. P. strength. He has been active in ward politics and in Boy Scout work. Kozicki favors an overhauling of the machinery for helping soldiers returned to civil life.

Henry James Shelton, 4434 S. Sawyer av., asserts he has the support of 12th ward Republican groups. He was a defeated candidate for alderman in the last city election. He says he is 100 per cent against the New Deal and against Wendell Willkie for President. He and his wife are promoting the MacArthur for President movement.

A third candidate for congress in the 4th is James A. McGrath, 3612 Union av.

SIXTH DISTRICT

Former Sheriff Thomas J. O'Brien, incumbent congressman, is without opposition in the Democratic primary.

Seeking the Republican nomination are Marvin M. Kurth, Stickney township committeeman, and Charles J. Anderson Jr., of 1816 Monroe st. Kurth has the O. K. of all the township and ward committeemen. He is an investigator for the Illinois department of revenue. In recent years the 6th has been heavily Democratic.

11TH DISTRICT

In the 11th district, which comprises Du Page, Will, Kane, and McHenry counties, the Republican incumbent, Chauncey W. Reed, is opposed for the nomination by Samuel P. Reese of Glen Ellyn. Reed, now serving his fifth term, is in no apparent danger of defeat. The district is one of the most consistently Republican in the country. Otto Joseph Hruby Jr., of Hinsdale, has no opponent in the Democratic primary.

Mercy Mothers.

The Mercy Mothers' auxiliary will hold a meeting and social hour at 2 p. m. Wednesday in the school, 8100 Prairie av.

CITY'S THIEVES SUCCEED WHERE BEDOUIN'S FAILED

Steal Historical Rod from Galilean.

Stephen A. Haboush.

Stephen A. Haboush, 5454 South Shore dr., pointed to a deep scar above his left eye. "I was tending my flock on a western shore of the sea of Galilee. One of my sheep strayed and as I approached it a wolf came between us," Haboush narrated. "It was with the rod which shepherds use that I killed the wolf."

The rod, 28 inches long and made of a black oak sapling, was given to him 44 years ago when he took over his father's flock. At the end of the rod are 28 spikes, each indicating an animal or serpent killed when it attacked him or one of his flock. This rod which saved his life so many times was recently stolen from his auto.

"I can't imagine why any one would want to steal it," he said. "It is valueless to any one else, but priceless to me."

Used for Signaling.

In describing the shepherd's stick he said the metal band about it is for signaling surrounding shepherds in time of danger. When raiders approach the flock the shepherd will raise his rod high above his head. The sun flashes on the metal like a beacon and summons other shepherds. "The shepherd's rod," he said, "is the origin of the king's sceptre and the orchestra leader's baton."

Regardless of a man's position, whether he is the town's leading merchant, lawyer, or peasant, he has a flock and some member of his family tends the sheep, Haboush said.

Westerners cannot understand why the eastern shepherd tends his sheep so lovingly. Every sheep has a name and when a lamb is born the shepherd carries it around with him and sleeps beside it to protect it from the cool air of the Arabian nights. The shepherd walks ahead of his flock, thrashing at the ground to see that no snakes will strike at his sheep. Two or three sheepdogs act as rear guard for the flock. The dogs, which are a cross between a collie and a Saint Bernard, are trained to kill wolves and other wild animals.

Also Use Staffs.

There is a distinction between a staff and a rod. The staff is 5 feet long, the rod 28 inches but heavier.

Both are used for protection, for under the rule of the Turks they were not allowed to carry guns. "We take such good care of our sheep because we want to have the finest wool, which is eventually sold to make oriental rugs and other materials of beauty."

Mr. Haboush has been lecturing thruout this country since 1920, accompanied by his wife. An Englishwoman, she has familiarized herself with Arabian customs, dress, speech, and even cooks the native foods. They have about 10 authentic costumes each. These native gowns are made of finest silks woven in Damascus, with intricate embroidery work. His favorite robe is of royal blue and has 14 carat gold spun into the silk. As the chief of the Haboush Arab tribe of 500 families he wears the royal blue.

In his lectures he displays movies of the Holy Land, where dress, speech, and manner remained unchanged for 3,000 years until 1920, when the valuable mineral deposits of the Dead sea were discovered and modern civilization followed.

S. SIDE PRIVATE SCHOOL PUPILS AID WAR LOAN

Buy $22,000 in Bonds in 4th Drive.

A marine hero and a jeep caused considerable excitement recently at the Faulkner school for girls, 4746 Dorchester av.

This private school, which has an enrollment of 200 girls from 3 to 18 years old, has sold $45,000 worth of war bonds and stamps since last Sept. 30. This amount includes $22,000 worth of bonds sold since the 4th war loan drive started.

The day the marine, Sgt. Edward Long, appeared, weighed down with medals and tales of his adventures in the South Pacific, the sale of bonds rose higher than on any other day.

Rides to School in Jeep.

Mrs. Ralph James, 4849 Greenwood av., chairman of stamps and bonds, of the Faulkner PTA, had a jeep call for her at her home. Pvt. Bob Leyes of the marines said "I'm here to drive you to the school." Her daughter, Winifred, a 4th grade pupil, was very proud to see her mother arrive at the school in such a military manner.

From the 3 year olds to the more sophisticated seniors of the high school classes, all scrambled about the jeep. "Did we buy this one?" one of the 1st graders asked. "Well, if we didn't we bought five others like it," an 8th grader answered.

Jeeps Named for School.

That's correct, according to Mrs. James, who says the funds collected by the school purchased five or six jeeps, each of which will bear the name of the school on its side. The children gave up movies, saved their birthday money, and sacrificed candy in order to make this showing in the war bond drive.

Mrs. Clarence C. Neff, 5008 Blackstone av., is the assistant chairman of stamps and bonds, and Mrs. Harold Levy, 1019 E. 48th st., is president of the PTA.

Nancy M. Pence, a senior, is in charge of the war committee at the school, which is run by Elizabeth Faulkner and her sister, Georgene Faulkner, known as the "story lady." The school was started 35 years ago.

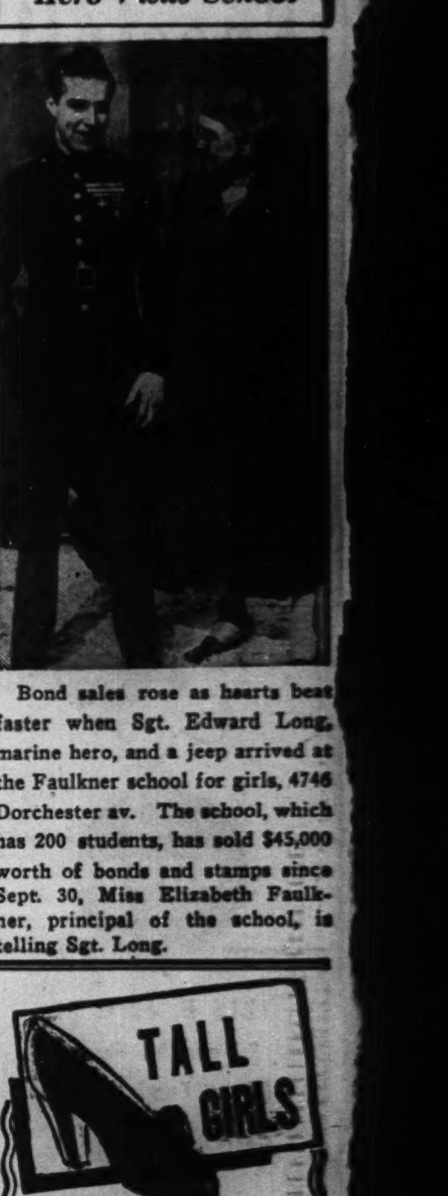
TOSCANINI BACK; ALL-BEETHOVEN HOUR IS SLATED

Arturo Toscanini will take over the podium of the NBC Symphony orchestra for six concerts at 4 p. m. today over WMAQ. An all-Beethoven program has been scheduled. The Symphony No. 6 in F Major [Pastoral] will be featured today. "The Creatures of Prometheus" also is slated.

Ralph Bellamy Is Guest on Green Valley, U. S. A.

The problem faced by a father in a war time American community serves as the theme for W-G-N and Mutual's Green Valley, U. S. A., from 4 to 4:30 p. m. today. Ralph Bellamy will play the role of a father, too old for this war, too young for the last one, who must give advice to his 17 year old son who wants to joint the navy. Santos Ortega plays the role of a lawyer.

Hero Visits School



Bond sales rose as hearts beat faster when Sgt. Edward Long, marine hero, and a jeep arrived at the Faulkner school for girls, 4746 Dorchester av. The school, which has 200 students, has sold $45,000 worth of bonds and stamps since Sept. 30, Miss Elizabeth Faulkner, principal of the school, is telling Sgt. Long.

After visiting England, France, Spain, and Poland in their search for utopia, Walenty and Marya Gacki said they decided America was the closest to it and with their two sons, Leonard and Romuald, they moved into their home at 5545 Laflin st., 16 years ago. They relently celebrated their 35th wedding anniversary.

This Week in the Garden

Monday, March 6

Some kinds of perennials can be sown now for early planting. These include such well known kinds as dianthus, alyssum, aquilegia, arabis, iberis, and forget-me-not. Salvia farinacea, a lovely blue species that is useful when cut for mixed bouquets, may also be sown.

When sowing delphinium seed at this season, soak in hot water until the seed swells, then sow. It is best to sow fresh seed in the fall in a cold frame to obtain a high germination, leaving in the frame until spring and then planting out.

With the advance of warm weather and the urge to begin garden operation, do not be hasty and remove the mulch from perennials and roses. Heavy material should be partially removed.

Tuesday, March 7

Rockery plants may be heaved from the ground; these should be replaced firmly and a little fresh soil applied between the plants. Dead leaves also can be removed. As soon as perennials show activity, all rough materials between the plants should be carefully raked off and the finer portions carefully spaded under.

An application of fertilizer should be made before spading to stimulate growth. Simply take a handful and scatter on the ground around each plant. Roll when the ground is not too wet. Rolling levels the depressions if they are not too great.

Bare spots should be reseeded before rolling. Gardeners making a new lawn should see to it that the ground is well prepared with copious amounts of fertilizer before sowing any seed.

Wednesday, March 8

Spray lilacs and other shrubs that are infested with scales. A contact spray is essential, for each insect must be hit to kill it. Spray materials can be obtained ready prepared at supply houses.

One of the finest fruits to grow on the home garden is the strawberry. They delight in a well drained, deep, well enriched soil containing plenty of humus. Consult the nurseryman regarding the best varieties to grow, but order early to be sure to obtain the plants for early planting.

Transplant any annuals that were sown earlier. Give all the light possible and as soon as they have made some growth pinch out the center to produce a stocky habit with an increased number of flower stems.

Thursday, March 9

Spade under the finer portions of the mulch that is around shrubs, using care not to break the roots of the plants. If the hedge has become unsightly or parts have died from any cause, cut all the plants in the hedge to within a few inches of the ground. This is especially true when privet hedges are grown, for they respond quickly after trimming and the result is astonishing.

An application of plant food should be made and the soil on both sides carefully spaded under. Old, gnarled shrubs often can be returned to good condition by a severe cutting back, always pruning for good form or shape excepting when in groups of several plants, when the group is considered as a whole. Clean bird houses and place them in position.

Friday, March 10

If the amaryllis bulbs show activity, repot them, leaving the old roots on, and bring to a window where the light conditions are good. Water sparingly until growth advances. If seeds are sown thinly, much thinning will be unnecessary. This applies to sowing in boxes indoors and out of doors in the frame or garden.

Place a few twigs of the box elder, red maple, oak, hickory, wildcrab, hazel, shadbush, goldenbell, cornelian cherry, horse chestnut, or other shrub that may be available, for they are all interesting when buds and flowers develop.

Saturday, March 11

Give the asparagus bed an application of a complete fertilizer. Examine all perennials, bulbs, or other plants and if any have heaved tamp the soil firmly around them. When hardy chrysanthemums start into growth, divide the clump and replant in well fertilized soil.

The gardener, if he has the space, can grow fine chrysanthemums by buying young stock and lining it out in rows. They are gross feeders and applications of plant food should be made at about three week intervals. Mulch during hot weather and disbud to obtain larger flowers.

BATTLES SEEN IN CONGRESS RACES

HOPEFULS PUSH DRIVES TO SIT IN LEGISLATURE

Spirited Contests Are Expected.

BY LEE SHASSERE.

Candidates for seats in the Illinois house of representatives who are bidding for nomination at the April 11 primary have shifted their campaigns into high gear.

In approximately a dozen Cook county and adjoining districts, victory at the primary will be tantamount to election because senatorial committee action is expected to result in the nominations of both parties totaling only three and three representatives will be elected from each district next November.

However, spirited contests loom in districts where each party committee has placed two up for nomination. All Cook county Democratic senatorial committees, it is understood, plan to authorize two nominations in each district.

Follows Kelly Plan.

This action marks the first time the Democrats have ever moved to nominate two in each Cook county precinct. Whether it reflects confidence as to the outcome of the November election or assumes a "whistling in the dark" attitude because of growing Republican power is a matter of speculation. The order is reported to have come from Mayor Kelly.

Some political observers who predict a big primary vote base their forecasts on a belief in an aroused electorate because of strenuous times.

Following are candidates for the Illinois house from the west section. The asterisk [*] indicates incumbents. The single dagger [†] indicates a forecast of Republican senatorial committee action. The Democrats will nominate two in each district, except when otherwise noted.

Parents and Children, Too, Approve of Cicero War Nursery in Former Church

Tea parties have a place on the day's program at the Cicero war emergency nursery attended by boys and girls of pre-school age whose parents are busy in war work. Miss Gretchen Brix is the trained supervisor in charge of this group enjoying what is known as the doll center.

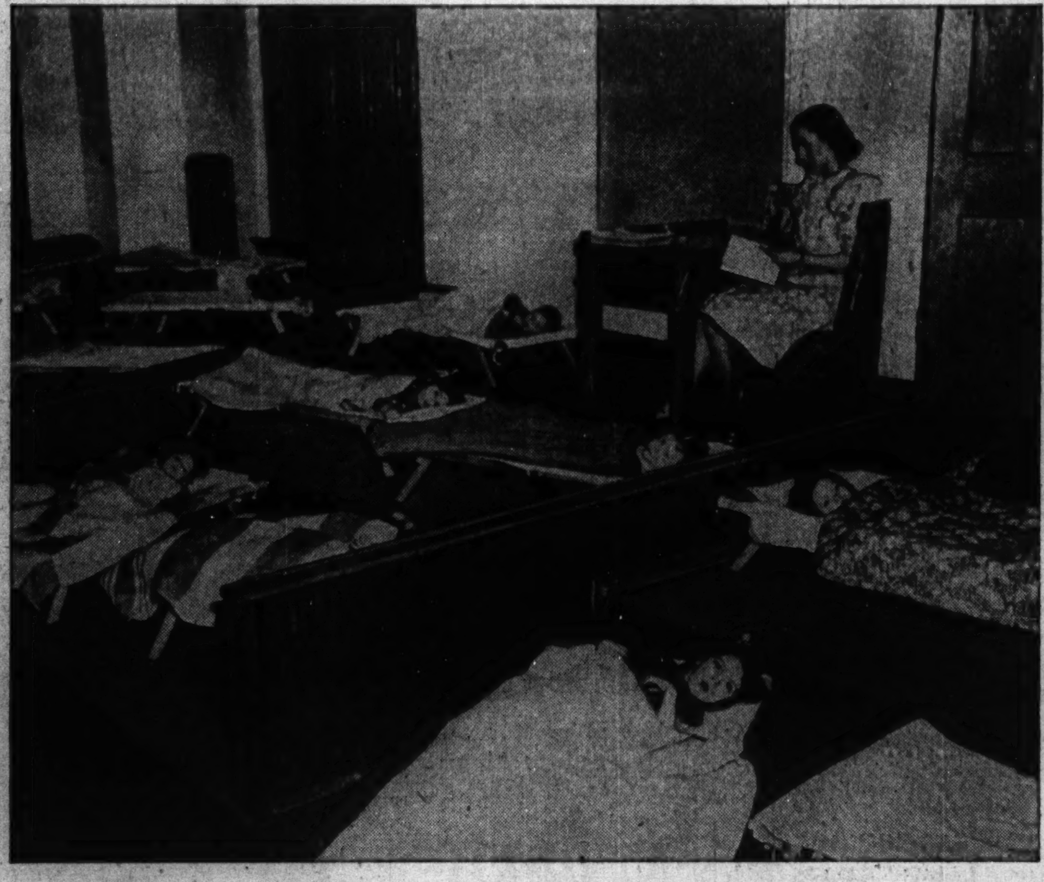
For youngsters wishing to exercise their muscles, there is the jungle gym in the basement. The apparatus was made in the work shops of Burnham school. (Story on page 3.)

Imagination mixed with a set of blocks has, in this instance, produced a barn and a fence. The nursery play rooms were formerly Sunday school rooms of the Cicero Bible church.

Shiela Brown, 4, seriously takes care of her doll. "I call my doll Carol," she explained, "because it's a pretty name."



The rest period is stressed, for some of the 2 year olds have arisen at an early hour. In charge of the cots in the old church balcony is Miss Jane Schwertfeger.

40 HAWTHORNE FAMILIES MOVE TO NEW HOMES

Will Man Company's Branch Plants.

Some 40 families residing in Chicago's west and northwestern communities have been affected by the transfer of Western Electric executives, engineers, and supervisors to new war time responsibilities at branch plants.

Announcement at the main Hawthorne works of the transfers has been the occasion for many farewells in the neighborhoods. Many of those making the move expect to sell or lease their homes as families depart for their new locations.

The branch plants to which two groups of employes have been transferred have been established in Lincoln, Neb., and in Eau Claire, Wis.

In Clarendon Hills Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Carlson both are being transferred to new jobs at the Eau Claire plant, where Mr. Carlson will be assigned to the operating branch, and Mrs. Carlson to women's employment.

Western Springs residents who will go to Eau Claire include H. N. Forgan, production division head, and S. O. Tuhus, accounting.

From La Grange, F. B. Smith, who will go to Eau Claire as an operating division chief, and F. L. Lander as buyer.

G. O. P. GIRDING FOR WIN IN BIG 7TH DISTRICT

Able Candidates in Primary Contest.

BY WILLIAM SHINNICK.

Congressional primary fights on a scale appropriate to its size are developing in the 7th Illinois district. With a population over 900,000 and a voting strength approximating a half million, the 7th is the largest congressional district in the United States.

Many factors contribute to the importance political experts attach to the results in this district. First, it is debatable ground; in 1942 it went Democratic by only 1,975 votes, a switch of only 1,000 ballots would have given a G. O. P. victory. Leonard W. Schultz, Democratic elected by the narrow margin, died.

Second, candidates of exceptional experience and character have stepped into the Republican primary and an able lawyer is battling a Democratic organization choice; it is almost certain that the great issues of the day will be debated by the candidates in the April primary as well as in the election.

CIO to Enter Battle.

Third, there are reliable reports that the CIO political action group is making a determined effort in behalf of the Chicago Democratic machine's standard bearer and have already pushed one of his opponents out of the race. The group may be making a full test of its power here.

The boundaries of the 7th in Chicago extend as far south as Washington blvd., as far east as Damen av. [Western av. is the east limit of a part of the area], as far north as Devon av. The district also takes in nine country townships on the west and northwest sides.

It has a cosmopolitan population, another reason for the importance of this year's balloting. Racial, industrial, suburban, and rural factors are to be reckoned with.

The Republicans have promised to concentrate their efforts in the 7th, the 1st, and 2d districts on the south side—all held now by narrow Democratic majorities—and in the south side 3d and the north side 9th, Republican by small majorities in 1942.

Four Safe for Democrats.

Of the rest of the 11 districts in Chicago and the immediate suburban area, four are regarded as safe for the Democrats with anything less than a G. O. P. landslide. They are the 4th, 5th, 6th, and 8th. The 10th and 11th are easily Republican.

Charles H. Garland, mayor of Des Plaines and an executive of the Columbia Broadcasting system, has received the indorsement of the ward and township committeemen for the Republican nomination in the 7th. He is a veteran of the first World war and has been active in Legion affairs. He is married and has one son in the army air forces and another in high school.

Garland was elected a Des Plaines alderman in 1937 and was made mayor in 1941. He is a former vice president of the Illinois Municipal league. A one time radio announcer, he has been with CBS for 19 years. He has pledged an all-out campaign in the fall if he receives the nomination. He said he would resign his radio position if elected. The organization which gave him approval regards him as a strong candidate with sound views on domestic and foreign questions.

Park Ridge Resident in Race.

Dr. Alfred P. Haake of Park Ridge, who is making the race, was born in Chicago. He is 58 years old, married, and has three sons and a son-in-law in service. For several years beginning in 1906 he was a license clerk in the city collector's office. He worked his way thru the University of Wisconsin, specializing in economics.

He was later head of the economics department at Rutgers college in New Jersey. After entering the advertising business for a short time he became assistant to the president of the Simmons company, bed makers. In 1928 he became the first managing director of the National Association of Furniture Manufacturers. In 1938, on leave from this place, he conducted a campaign for the National Small Business Men's association, then as now seeking relief from governmental interference.

Haake, who describes himself as a believer in the Constitution and a "pronounced opponent of the New Deal," is a former president of the Executives club of Chicago. He has had much experience as a radio speaker.

George T. Foster, director of the Constitutional Americans, a nationalist group, and Justus Mozart, 5029 N. Tripp av., are also seeking the Republican nomination.

For the last 12 years William W. Link, the Democratic machine choice, has held appointive political offices. He was a forest preserve worker, then president of the board of local improvements [he is still a board member], then assistant superintendent of the Juvenile Detention home, next chief clerk of the Superior court clerk's office, and is now a member of the county civil service commission.

Two other Democrats have withdrawn. They are Ald. William J.

ELMHURST WAR RECORD STACKS UP WITH BEST

Gives Blood, Men, Money and Time.

BY ONEY FRED SWEET.

Forty-five hard working members of the Elmhurst Chamber of Commerce sold to each other and to other local business men a total of $322,633.25 worth of bonds in the recent fourth war loan bond drive in the suburb which went over the top with a bang. A total of $900,000 in bonds has been accounted for in Elmhurst as a result of the drive, with more to be added when the final accounting is made.

The bond sale achievement has caused M. R. Thorneycroft, secretary of the Elmhurst chamber, to delve into the files and check up on the kind of a war the city is waging other than on the financial front.

The honor roll shows a total of 1,588 names of men and women from Elmhurst now in service.

Many Blood Donors.

Under the direction of Mrs. F. J. Blum, Elmhurst's record for blood donations is said to be unequaled in the Chicago suburban area. An average of 17 donors go thru the bank every 20 minutes while it is open, and 74 per cent of the donors are repeaters. Blood donated in the city totals 3,565 pints.

Elmhurst has contributed 240 tons of metal and 22 tons of rubber, in the scrap drives. Forty-five tons of waste paper was collected in a single day. Each month there is collected from the county and shipped to Elmhurst an average of 20 tons of tin cans. Jack Sheldon, the Boy and Girl Scouts, the Campfier Girls, school children, and others have helped make the drives a success. City employees have assumed the task of collecting the scrap and hauling it to a central point.

Schools Help Out.

More than 1,200 men and women have been welded into an active and efficient civilian defense organization which functioned even before the attack on Pearl Harbor. Tests have demonstrated that the community is ready to take care of itself should a catastrophe strike.

Pupils of Immaculate Conception school sold $87,000 worth of war bonds and won the privilege of naming a United States army P-51 Mustang. Pupils of Hawthorne school sold a total of $93,800 worth of war bonds and also named a Mustang. York High school students sold $30,000 worth of stamps and bonds, and in connection with the recent drive, the York Girls' club in four days sold $14,000 worth of bonds.

Members of the Junior Victory army in Elmhurst each week sell war stamps from door to door. Since they were organized, the youngsters have sold more than $35,000 worth of stamps. The group first was headed by Mrs. B. P. Doran, who moved from Elmhurst several months ago and whose duties have been assumed by Mrs. C. Ray Wolfe.

A second report meeting will be held March 14. The campaign started last Tuesday and is expected to end shortly after the meeting March 14. This year's goal in the two communities is $142,740, an increase of 40 per cent over last year's total collections.

Divided in Four Areas.

The two villages have been divided into four areas for the door to door campaign. They are residence, business, schools and clubs, and division A. Approximately 2,500 villagers are working on the campaign.

The residence division is headed by Mason O. Tilden, chairman, and Edward H. Faltysek and Mrs. Carl L. Neumeister, vice chairmen. They have divided the residential blocks in Oak Park and River Forest into six areas under commanders J. M. Schaad, F. B. Crum, Charles A. Grier, H. S. Grassman, Albert R. Gloor, and S. Carl Walker. There are more than 1,500 workers in the residence division.

Schools and clubs are being solicited by a committee headed by Mrs. George E. Woods. Her co-workers are Mrs. John C. Phelps and Mrs. Martin O'Brien, vice chairmen; Mrs. E. H. Omara, and Mrs. O. W. Family Unites in Maintaining War Schedule

There are two stars in the family service flag in the Gershon home at 4114 Roosevelt road. The first star is for the head of the family, Corp. A. R. Gershon, father of six children, who enlisted in the army in September, 1942, when he was 42 years old.

The second star was added later when the oldest son, David, 22 years old, enlisted in the air corps. He recently won his navigator's wings and is now a second lieutenant.

In the absence of her husband, now overseas, Mrs. Gershon and the other five children are managing the third floor apartment which has been the Gershon home for the last 17 years and are holding part time jobs. All are looking forward to the time the war is over and the family is together again.

Five Children at Home.

The children at home are Evelyn, 21, who works for a package company; Lorraine, 19, who works for a wholesale grocery company; Alice, 17, a pupil at Jones Commercial High school who hopes to be a business machine operator and now has a part time job in a west side war plant; Glenn, 14, a pupil at Crane Technical High school, and Paul, 11, in 6B grade at Bryant elementary school.

Mrs. Gershon works from 8 o'clock in the morning to 3:30 o'clock in the afternoon six days a week in the mail opening department at the Sears Roebuck west side plant.

Patriotic in every way, the family saves 10 per cent of its combined income for war bonds.

Works Out Efficient Schedule.

Managing a home for five children and working six days a week is a job Mrs. Gershon has worked out efficiently.

"We try to carry on just like we did before the war and before my husband left," Mrs. Gershon explained. "The children share with the work and expenses. The evenings are devoted to hobbies, letter writing, and other family interests."

The first one to get home in the evening starts dinner. After dinner the children take turns washing the dishes. Mrs. Gershon does the family washing Sundays and each child does his own ironing thru the week.

Makes Afghan for Son.

Mrs. Gershon likes to spend her evenings close to the radio and crocheting. At present she is making an afghan for her son, Lt. David Gershon, and his bride, the former Miss Rena Schneider, 3965 Van Buren street, who were married in December.

The youngest son, Paul, shares his older brother's enthusiasm for aviation and makes model airplanes. Evelyn has the china closet filled with unique salt and pepper shakers, and Lorraine collects small cedar chests.

Corp. Gershon was home on a furlough in November. Since then he has been sent overseas.

"We know it will be a long time before he gets home again," Mrs. Gershon said, "but we will do all we can to keep things here the way he would like to do them himself and then when he does get home he will find everything just like he left it."

Mrs. Gershon is proud of her husband and son in the army. "My husband didn't have to go, but after Pearl Harbor he wanted to enlist. Altho I knew it was on his mind he didn't say much about it. He just came home one day and announced, 'I've enlisted'."

Dad and Son in War

Corp. A. R. Gershon, left, and his son, Lt. David Gershon, will have many experiences to compare after the war. Corp. Gershon is serving overseas and Lt. Gershon recently received his navigator's wings and commission. Mrs. Gershon and five other children reside at 4114 Roosevelt road.

NORTHWEST SIDE PILOT WINS AIR MEDAL IN ITALY

While a guard of honor stood at attention on a windswept field "somewhere in Italy," Lt. Robert F. Pudelwitts, 6049 Ardmore av., recently was decorated with the air medal by his commanding officer.

The medal was presented to Lt. Pudelwitts for his part in the raids that made possible the occupation of southern Italy. As pilot of a B-24 Liberator, he has seen action over Germany, Austria, Bulgaria, Greece, and Italy.

Once when his plane was seriously crippled over a target in Austria, he piloted it safely to a friendly field in southern Italy with only two of the four engines running. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Telesof Pudelwitts, live at the Ardmore av. address.

CICERO NURSERY TAKES CARE OF 44 BOYS, GIRLS

While their parents are in war work, 44 boys and girls of pre-school age are enrolled in the Cicero War Emergency nursery that is housed in the former Cicero Bible church building, 5200 W. 24th st., Cicero.

The building has been adapted to war time service by utilizing the balcony for rest periods and transforming the various Sunday school rooms into playrooms. Cots in the balcony are appreciated by the 2 year olds after they have had their fruit juice at 9 a. m., for some of them have arisen at an early hour. Breakfast of cereal and milk is given some of the children after their arrival and inspection by Miss Frances Adcock, the staff nurse.

Cicero has 189 industries, most of which are engaged in war work, and the center was opened last July to care not only for children of parents in war work but for children whose fathers on night jobs must get their sleep at home during the day. The program assures that the youngsters are given trained supervision over their health and recreation. All of the children have gained weight since they enrolled and are being taught social values.

School Board Is Sponsor.

The center is sponsored by the board of education of Cicero district 99, Hobart Bolerjack, principal of the Columbus school, is director of the extended school care program in the suburb which includes not only the children of war workers of nursery school age but children between the ages of 6 and 14.

Like other centers of its kind, the Cicero project was established for the war emergency with the aid of Lanham act funds plus contributions from the community, Cicero's auditable contribution totaled $12,000, which includes the free rent donated by the Cicero Bible church.

Health authorities, dietitians, and educators who specialize in child care have arranged the program. The professional staff at the center includes Miss Rubena Pankratz, head teacher; Miss Jane Schwertfeger, Miss Gretchen Brix, and Mrs. Frances Neiswender, teachers; Miss Frances Adcock, nurse; Mrs. Dorothy Dunn, cook; and Mrs. Nancy Stephens, housekeeper.

Follow Memorial Fund Menus.

McCormick Memorial fund menus are followed in preparing the meals. On the day the center was visited, the noon lunch consisted of macaroni and cheese, salad of carrots, apples and celery, buttered beets, bread and butter, milk and lemon pudding. Cookies and milk are served at 3:30 o'clock. The cook has a variety of seven kinds of cookies, animal cookies being the most popular. Parents pay 50 cents a day for each child enrolled.

The real rest period is between 1:15 and 3:15 p. m. Other hours are taken up with supervised indoor and outdoor play, music and stories and creative arts. Closing time is 6 o'clock.

Mrs. Josephine Masek and Mrs. Lillian Birmingham are the two volunteer aids at the Cicero center. Registrations for a special training course for these aids starting March 6 are being taken at the volunteer office, 53 W. Jackson blvd. Volunteers are asked to make appointments for an interview in advance by calling Wabash 0528.

Volunteers Needed.

Miss Mary E. Murphy, chairman of the child welfare committee, OCD, said that volunteers are especially needed to assist the professional staffs. It is pointed out that if volunteers do not respond, it will mean thas some children needing care cannot be accommodated. The training course will be given at the National College of Education, Evanston, and the University of Chicago. The course consists of 30 hours of lecture and observation of children in care centers, followed by 48 hours of practice teaching.

Volunteers are asked to pledge six hours of service weekly for a period of six months during the year which can be divided into two periods of three months each. Volunteers will be placed in centers as close to their homes as possible, and hours of service will be arranged to suit the individual.

Pianists Also Needed.

Volunteer child care aids assist with the routine care of small children. It is explained that women who can play the piano, assist with craft work, who have knowledge of nursing, sewing, cooking, athletics, and toy repairing will find they can use their abilities to advantage.

"We are not reaching all the children that should be enrolled," said Mrs. Bolerjack. "The present Cicero center could care for 60 boys and girls. Another center will be opened if demands require. We could now use two more volunteer aids."

On the occasion of a recent visit to the Cicero center, Dr. Frances Langford, child consultant for the federal works agency, sponsor of the nurseries, pronounced the Cicero center setup as ideal.

An enrollment of 35 is needed for the establishment of a training center for the west side and west suburban area. Miss Murphy said that at last reports 18 women had signed up.

ROPA, SABATH VIE FOR 21ST WARD DEMOCRATIC JOB

Five Will Battle for 29th Ward G.O.P. Post.

BY EDWARD SCHREIBER.

Eight contests for ward committeeman posts in west side wards developed last week with the outstanding battle in the 21st ward where Ald. Joseph F. Ropa will oppose the veteran congressman Adolph J. Sabath in a bitter Democratic struggle. The other contests are all Republican.

Ropa is attempting to oust Sabath from the ward post he has held for over 40 years. It is reported that he will charge that Sabath, altho he maintains a voting address at 1902 S. Ashland blvd., really lives at the Graemere hotel, which is outside the ward.

Aids Business Men.

Ropa, who is serving his first term in the city council, has from time to time opposed organization dictates in voting and consistently fought against additional taxes for small business men during 1944 budget hearings.

On the Republican side there is a five way fight in the 29th ward. The candidates are William H. Crawford, 434 S. Central Park av.; Louis J. Meyers, 3857 Jackson blvd.; Atty. Joseph R. Orrico, 3555 Jackson blvd.; James Carroll, 4045 Adams st., and Frank D. Buongirono, 4306 Lexington st.

Meyers, the incumbent, won in 1940 after a sharp four way fight in which Orrico was also a candidate.

In the 36th ward, Eden T. Brekke, 1010 N. Latrobe av., the incumbent, is opposed by Joseph F. Gubbins, 2042 N. La Vergne av.

Other G. O. P. Filings.

Svalenka, 2606 Luther st.

In the 27th ward the contestants are: William John Granata, 1640 Adams st., incumbent, and James L. Stewart, 2334 Monroe st.; 28th ward: Joseph A. Porcaro, 2531 West Superior st., and Raymond T. Saxon, 3150 West Franklin blvd.

Ward committeemen of both parties are elected on primary day, April 11.

Milton D. Smith.

Plenty of action is anticipated in the 14th [Kane and Kendall counties] for the seat relinquished by Sen. Arnold P. Benson of Batavia, who is a Republican candidate for the secretary of state nomination. Republican aspirants to the senate seat, who are seeking the nomination April 11, include the present 14th district state representative, John C. Friedland, Elgin; Merritt J. Leo J. Kozicki, printing firm head and real estate dealer, claims nearly all the organized G. O. P. strength. He has been active in ward politics and in Boy Scout work. Kozicki favors an overhauling of the machinery for helping soldiers returned to civil life.

Shelton Against Willkie.

Henry James Shelton, 4434 S. Sawyer av., asserts he has the support of 12th ward Republican groups. He was a defeated candidate for alderman in the last city election. He says he is 100 per cent against the New Deal and against Wendell Willkie for President. He and his wife are assisting the MacArthur for President movement.

A third candidate for congress in the 4th is James A. McGrath, 3612 S. Union av.

FIFTH DISTRICT

There are no primary contests in the tiny 5th district which lies between Roosevelt and Cermak rds. and has a population of only 112,000, less than one-eighth that of the 7th. Brown, operating department head, 4941 West End av.; A. A. Jacobs, operating department head, 5153 Oakdale av.; W. R. Unger, operating department, 6145 Barry av.; B. F. Still Needs Workers.

Assigned to Eau Claire are C. L. Harless, industrial relations division chief, 2228 N. La Porte av.; W. R. Samson, engineering department head, 4242 N. Mason av., and R. L. Lindsay, operating branch, 4540 Parker st.

According to company officials, the branch plants have been established in Lincoln and Eau Claire because of expansion of Western Electric's war production program, and because additional manufacturing facilities were needed without delay. The Lincoln shops comprise about 200,000 square feet of floor space in two industrial buildings, and the Eau Claire branch is a former ordnance plant.

The transfer of Western Electric war work to the Nebraska and Wisconsin locations will not affect production requirements in the company's Chicago plants, nor will it reduce a current need for thousands of new workers, company officials said.

OUTLINE DU PAGE COUNTY'S PLANS TO AID CRIPPLED

How today's crippled child belonging to the family of limited means may receive the skilled care of experts was the theme of an all day institute recently held at the Hinsdale sanitarium for teachers and public health nurses of Du Page county.

Sponsored by the Du Page County Public Health Nurses association, staff members of the division of services for crippled children of the University of Illinois conducted the program. Miss Hedwig Trauba, the division's supervisor of orthopedic nursing, outlined the procedure of referring the case of a crippled child for the services of the division.

Miss Trauba said out patient clinics scheduled to be held March 9, July 13, and Nov. 7 at the Hinsdale sanitarium will accept the referrals, or they may be made by mail directly with the division's district office, 211 W. Wacker dr., Chicago.

The division's program, it is explained, is equipped to supplement the work of physicians and local or other state agencies serving crippled children.

CIRCUS ACROBAT NOW PERFORMS ON RIVETING GUN

Flora Perez Again Is Up in the Air.

BY MARY HOLSINGER.

Accustomed for many seasons to thrilling circus crowds, Mrs. Flora Perez, 216 S. California av. today is a riveter in a war plant.

Mrs. Perez, her husband, Manuel, and son, Raymond, were billed as "The Three Daring Cubans," or "Anything for a Thrill." Her act called for a two minute spin, hanging by her teeth from a rope 100 feet above the ground. Her husband's specialty in the sawdust ring was jumping from a 22-foot ladder to a hand stand on a table below.

For 20 years the three worked together, often being featured in the center ring under the big top. During winters they played vaudeville whenever they could find a stage large enough for their trappings.

Son Enlists in Army.

The act broke up three years ago when the son, Raymond, enlisted in the army. Mrs. Perez and her husband then turned to war work. Less than 5 feet tall and weighing less than 100 pounds, Mrs. Perez had a difficult time convincing her plant superintendent she would make a good riveter. She succeeded, however, and now expects to be promoted to inspector. Mr. Perez is an inspector at Taylor Forge and Pipe Works, a war plant in Cicero. The son, Raymond, is staff sergeant at Camp Rucker, Ala.

Accustomed to suspending herself many feet above the ground in such a way that a small slip might lead to a fatal plunge, Mrs. Perez has little fear of the big machines on a riveter's job.

Will Quit After War.

Six days a week from 7:30 a. m. to 4 p. m. she works for the Belmont Radio corporation. "I like to think I have released a man for service," she said, "but I want to give his job back to him after the war. The boys are doing plenty for us and that is the least I could do."

Mrs. Perez wants "the doors to be open for my boy" after the war but he probably will go back to the life of the circus. Since enlisting, Sgt. Perez has married Zefta Repensky, featured bareback rider in the Loyal-Repensky act which appeared with the Ringling, Barnum and Bailey circus last summer in Chicago.

Mrs. Perez got her start in acrobatics at 17 when she became the bride of Manuel Perez, one of the performers in the Abreu family act which originated in Cuba. She took her place among her husband's cousins as a Spanish singer, introducing the act. Later she learned the more difficult tricks and when her son was 9 years old the Perez trio broke away from the rest of the family and organized their own act.

With Several Circuses.

In the last 20 years they have traveled with the Cole Brothers circus, Hagenback-Wallace, Walter L. Main, and many others, some specializing in indoor performances in large stadiums and coliseums.

In a business where life depends on correct balance, concentration, and no mistakes, Mrs. Perez feels fortunate that she survived her only slip, a 45-foot fall to the ground. The accident occurred in 1927 in a small town on Long Island when the Perez trio were traveling with the Walter L. Main circus.

Mrs. Perez was spinning wildly in the air when one of the attendants jerked too hard on the rope by which she was being pulled into the air. The leather brace snapped from her mouth and she fell to the ground, landing a foot from one of the circus tent's large iron stakes. She spent several months in the hospital suffering from a fractured skull and right wrist but as soon as the doctor pronounced her well she went back into the circus ring.

Had to Go Back.

"I had to or I would have lost my nerve," she explained.

Mrs. Perez is 47 and her husband 49. Altho they look back longingly on the circus days, they don't plan to go back. "It would be too much grief and hard work at our age to get into condition again," Mrs. Perez said. "Plans are now made for our son to join the Loyal-Repensky bareback act after the war and even for him it will be very difficult."

Even tho they won't be performers again, Mrs. Perez never will be able to resist the lure of the tanbark. She gets tickets to all the shows in town and still prefers to watch from the wings where she used to sneak after the Perez act to look on the other performers.

OAK PARK ALIENS PLAN REUNION AT BRANCH LIBRARY

Meet Tuesday to Tell Their Experiences.

Oak Park citizenship students will have a holiday from history and government studies Tuesday night when the two citizenship classes in the village hold a reunion in the south branch library. Approximately 50 alumni, already naturalized, will gather with aliens now working for their "American adoption" papers.

For the most part the reunion will be an informal gathering of citizens and aliens who have a common goal—to become Americanized, Mrs. Nathalie McEwan, the teacher, explained. A film on one of the national parks will be shown, she announced, but most of the evening will be given over to an exchange of experiences among these new Americans.

Classes Graduate 100.

Since citizenship classes were organized in Oak Park three years ago, approximately 100 have become naturalized. At present there are 24 foreign born in Mrs. McEwan's two classes which meet Tuesday nights at the south branch library and Wednesday nights at the Dole branch. The classes are sponsored by the Zonta club, a woman's business executive group, and the Oak Park library.

Sincere and eager, these aliens meet once a week with Mrs. McEwan in one of the two branch libraries to learn about their rights, the judicial, legislative, and executive branches of government, how to salute the flag, and patriotic songs.

"We teach only the simple processes of law," Mrs. McEwan explained, "but many go away knowing more about the things we have taken for granted than we do."

Use Pictures, Diagrams.

Pictures and diagrams often are used in the citizenship classes, since many at first can speak and understand only a little English.

"I once had a woman in my class," Mrs. McEwan told, "who couldn't speak English. We always greeted each other with a smile and that is as far as we ever got."

The English language sometimes presents big problems to the aliens who are struggling to learn about government, customs, and a language in which one word often can have several entirely different meanings.

One alien, well educated in his native country, was doing his best but was perplexed over the word "tie." For several weeks Mrs. McEwan had pointed out that the vice president voted only if there was a tie. Unable to comprehend, the alien finally asked his teacher why it was so important for the vice president of the United States to vote because some one wore a tie.

What Aliens Want to Know.

"We teach some American history too," Mrs. McEwan explained. "As one student put it: 'I want to know what my boy is talking about when he comes home from school and tells me about America. I want to know those stories too.'

"We want our students to know why some of our towns are named after certain famous men," Mrs. McEwan pointed out. "We want them to feel proud of names like Daniel P. Cook, the Illinois representative in congress who opposed making the state slave and for whom our own county is named."

Mrs. McEwan tells her students about holidays, and stories of America's great men and their birthdays.

"Somehow they feel they belong a little more when they know why bakeries feature cherry pies around Feb. 22. Some of our women even bake them for their families when they know the connection."

Not All Are Aliens.

Not all of her students, however, are recent aliens. Some have lived in America for many years and are well versed in America's customs and traditions. They somehow hadn't bothered to take out citizenship papers until an ulterior motive prompted them to action.

One of the students was a prominent clubwoman in a neighboring village who couldn't become president of her group until she was a citizen. There were citizenship classes in her own town but because she didn't want her neighbors and friends to know she wasn't a citizen, she drove to Oak Park once a week.

"She has since become a citizen and president of her club," Mrs. McEwan explained.

There are approximately 800 noncitizens in Oak Park, Mrs. McEwan said. She has had 24 nationalities represented in her classes, among them Persian, Syrian, Belgian, Guatemalan, Spanish, and Greek.

Some Well Educated.

Students range in age from 18 to 82. Some have been well educated and for a few the citizenship classes have been their first experience at formal education.

"One of the interesting accomplishments of a citizenship class is friendliness," the teacher explained. "People of various nationalities find they can work and play together. They find they even like each other. Some of the students like to shake hands with their neighbors before settling down to the business of the class.

"As a woman said one night: 'Why, those ladies are real nice.'

"And after all," Mrs. McEwan said, "that is America. All for one and one for all.

This Week in the Garden

Monday, March 6

Some kinds of perennials can be sown now for early planting. These include such well known kinds as dianthus, alyssum, aquilegia, arabis, iberis, and forget-me-not. Salvia farinacea, a lovely blue species that is useful when cut for mixed bouquets, may also be sown.

When sowing delphinium seed at this season, soak in hot water until the seed swells, then sow. It is best to sow fresh seed in the fall in a cold frame to obtain a high germination, leaving in the frame until spring and then planting out.

With the advance of warm weather and the urge to begin garden operation, do not be hasty and remove the mulch from perennials and roses. Heavy material should be partially removed.

Tuesday, March 7

Rockery plants may be heaved from the ground; these should be replaced firmly and a little fresh soil applied between the plants. Dead leaves also can be removed. As soon as perennials show activity, all rough materials between the plants should be carefully raked off and the finer portions carefully spaded under.

An application of fertilizer should be made before spading to stimulate growth. Simply take a handful and scatter on the ground around each plant. Roll when the ground is not too wet. Rolling levels the depressions if they are not too great.

Bare spots should be reseeded before rolling. Gardeners making a new lawn should see to it that the ground is well prepared with copious amounts of fertilizer before sowing any seed.

Wednesday, March 8

Spray lilacs and other shrubs that are infested with scales. A contact spray is essential, for each insect must be hit to kill it. Spray materials can be obtained ready prepared at supply houses.

One of the finest fruits to grow on the home garden is the strawberry. They delight in a well drained, deep, well enriched soil containing plenty of humus. Consult the nurseryman regarding the best varieties to grow, but order early to be sure to obtain the plants for early planting.

Transplant any annuals that were sown earlier. Give all the light possible and as soon as they have made some growth pinch out the center to produce a stocky habit with an increased number of flower stems.

Thursday, March 9

Spade under the finer portions of the mulch that is around shrubs, using care not to break the roots of the plants. If the hedge has become unsightly or parts have died from any cause, cut all the plants in the hedge to within a few inches of the ground. This is especially true when privet hedges are grown, for they respond quickly after trimming and the result is astonishing.

An application of plant food should be made and the soil on both sides carefully spaded under. Old, gnarled shrubs often can be returned to good condition by a severe cutting back, always pruning for good form or shape excepting when in groups of several plants, when the group is considered as a whole. Clean bird houses and place them in position.

Friday, March 10

If the amaryllis bulbs show activity, repot them, leaving the old roots on, and bring to a window where the light conditions are good. Water sparingly until growth advances. If seeds are sown thinly, much thinning will be unnecessary. This applies to sowing in boxes indoors and out of doors in the frame or garden.

Place a few twigs of the box elder, red maple, oak, hickory, wildcrab, hazel, shadbush, goldenbell, cornelian cherry, horse chestnut, or other shrub that may be available, for they are all interesting when buds and flowers develop.

Start the hotbed. Graft fruit trees just before the buds swell. Scions of the popular varieties can be obtained from nurseries.

Saturday, March 11

Give the asparagus bed an application of a complete fertilizer. Examine all perennials, bulbs, or other plants and if any have heaved tamp the soil firmly around them. When hardy chrysanthemums start into growth, divide the clump and replant in well fertilized soil.

The gardener, if he has the space, can grow fine chrysanthemums by buying young stock and lining it out in rows. They are gross feeders and applications of plant food should be made at about three week intervals. Mulch during hot weather and disbud to obtain larger flowers.

Do not neglect pinching at least twice or three times, depending on the kinds. These plants are easily lifted in the fall and potted for indoor use or in window boxes. Transplant all house plants that need it.

SEEK MAYWOOD ROOMS FOR ARMY HOSPITAL STAFF

Temporary, Permanent Quarters Needed.

In appealing to residents of Maywood and to near-by suburbs to make housing facilities available for army men, the Greater Maywood association is coöperating with Brig. Gen. P. J. Carroll who recently became commanding general of Vaughan General hospital under construction on grounds originally part of the Hines hospital reservation.

Barracks on the grounds that extend from Roosevelt road almost to Cermak road on first avenue are not yet completed, but enlisted army men who are hospital staff members soon will need living accommodations, it is explained. Later, many civilian hospital employes and army officers will need permanent quarters of either rooms, houses or apartments.

Calls on Citizens.

"Maywood should open its doors to the men and women who will aid men coming back wounded and ill in health from battle fronts," said Louis Nelson, president of the Greater Maywood association. "Many families of injured soldiers also will wish to be near the hospital."

Those in the rooming house zones having rooms or other living accommodations available, temporarily or permanently, for soldiers and civilians connected with the hospital, are asked to notify the First National bank of Maywood.

Vaughan General hospital has been named for Lt. Col. Victor C. Vaughan, army medical reserve corps. The project, begun last July, will hospitalize all types of military personnel, chiefly those evacuated from overseas areas and who were taken into the army as residents of the Chicago area.

54 Buildings in Center.

In contrast to the one large building at Hines, the new center consists of some 54 buildings of brick and reinforced concrete. Plans are being made for 1,525 beds and a personnel of approximately 1,350.

Brig. Gen. Carroll recently assumed command at the hospital after service in Australia. He and his family have taken up their residence in La Grange. With the arrival of Brig. Gen. Carroll, Col. Stuart G. Smith, who has been in command since Nov. 14, was appointed executive officer at the hospital.

BATTLES SEEN IN CONGRESS RACES

HOPEFULS PUSH DRIVES TO SIT IN LEGISLATURE

Spirited Contests Are Expected.

BY LEE SHASSERE.

Candidates for seats in the Illinois house of representatives who are bidding for nomination at the April 11 primary have shifted their campaigns into high gear.

In approximately a dozen Cook county and adjoining districts, victory at the primary will be tantamount to election because senatorial committee action is expected to result in the nominations of both parties totaling only three and three representatives will be elected from each district next November.

However, spirited contests loom in districts where each party committee has placed two up for nomination. All Cook county Democratic senatorial committees, it is understood, plan to authorize two nominations in each district.

Some political observers who predict a big primary vote base their forecasts on a belief in an aroused electorate because of strenuous times.

Following are candidates for the Illinois house from the northwest section. The asterisk [*] indicates incumbents. The single dagger [†] indicates a forecast of Republican senatorial committee action. The Democrats will nominate two in each district, except where otherwise noted.

Youngsters Find Day Time Home at Commons While Mothers Work

An engine made with building blocks may not run, but youngsters clambering on and off the "train" in the war nursery at the Chicago Commons have as much fun as they would with an honest to goodness streamliner. Forty children of mothers working in war industries are cared for in the nursery each day. Assisting two staff members are five OCD child care aids, graduates of the first training course offered by the office of civilian defense. For the last year the volunteer aids have each given at least one full day a week to the program.

Already assuming the duties of the "man of the family," 4 year old Nickie runs ahead to open the front door of the Chicago Commons for his mother, Mrs. Anne Battaglia and his baby brother, Philip. For the convenience of mothers who must get an early start to work, the war nursery opens at 7:30 a. m. A balanced program of rest and recreation under competent supervision is assured all children at the center.

A tots' rhythm band gives an impromptu recital in the nursery. Mrs. J. W. Heymun, a volunteer worker, directs the children at the piano. An enthusiastic group leader, she gives two full days a week to the center, and has a record of 1,000 hours of service during the last year. Women with musical or artistic ability, who have a knack of story telling or a knowledge of craft work can use their abilities to advantage as child care aids.

Refreshed after his afternoon nap, Johnnie, 3½, retires to one of the sunny corners of the playroom for his art work. Johnnie's father, who is in the army, gave his son tips on drilling when he was home on furlough a few weeks ago. Now a great deal of Johnnie's time is spent marching up and down the nursery with a wooden gun on his shoulders. Since the fathers of many of the children are in service, the mothers must work to augment the family income.

Three year old artists gather around a table in the playroom for an afternoon session with drawing paper and crayons. While most of the drawing is literally free hand, children derive much enjoyment from working with vivid splashes of color. Modeling clay also is available for amateur sculptors. All equipment in the nursery is furnished by the Chicago Commons Foundation or by friends of the institution.

G. O. P. GIRDING FOR WIN IN BIG 7TH DISTRICT

Able Candidates in Primary Contest.

BY WILLIAM SHINNICK.

Congressional primary fights on a scale appropriate to its size are developing in the 7th Illinois district. With a population over 900,000 and a voting strength approximating a half million, the 7th is the largest congressional district in the United States.

Many factors contribute to the importance political experts attach to the results in this district. First, it is debatable ground; in 1942 it went Democratic by only 1,975 votes, a switch of only 1,000 ballots would have given a G. O. P. victory. Leonard W. Schultz, Democratic elected by the narrow margin, died.

Second, candidates of exceptional experience and character have stepped into the Republican primary and an able lawyer is battling a Democratic organization choice; it is almost certain that the great issues of the day will be debated by the candidates in the April primary as well as in the election.

CIO to Enter Battle.

Third, there are reliable reports that the CIO political action group is making a determined effort in behalf of the Chicago Democratic machine's standard bearer and have already pushed one of his opponents out of the race. The group may be making a full test of its power here.

The boundaries of the 7th in Chicago extend as far south as Washington blvd., as far east as Damen av. [Western av. is the east limit of a part of the area], as far north as Devon av. The district also takes in nine country townships on the west and northwest sides.

It has a cosmopolitan population, another reason for the importance of this year's balloting. Racial, industrial, suburban, and rural factors are to be reckoned with.

The Republicans have promised to concentrate their efforts in the 7th, the 1st, and 2d districts on the south side—all held now by narrow Democratic majorities—and in the south side 3d and the north side 9th, Republican by small majorities in 1942.

Four Safe for Democrats.

Of the rest of the 11 districts in Chicago and the immediate suburban area, four are regarded as safe for the Democrats with anything less than a G. O. P. landslide. They are the 4th, 5th, 6th, and 8th. The 10th and 11th are easily Republican.

Charles H. Garland, mayor of Des Plaines and an executive of the Columbia Broadcasting system, has received the indorsement of the ward and township committeemen for the Republican nomination in the 7th. He is a veteran of the first World war and has been active in Legion affairs. He is married and has one son in the army air forces and another in high school.

Garland was elected a Des Plaines alderman in 1937 and was made mayor in 1941. He is a former vice president of the Illinois Municipal league. A one time radio announcer, he has been with CBS for 19 years. He has pledged an all-out campaign in the fall if he receives the nomination. He said he would resign his radio position if elected. The organization which gave him approval regards him as a strong candidate with sound views on domestic and foreign questions.

Park Ridge Resident in Race.

Dr. Alfred P. Haake of Park Ridge, who is making the race, was born in Chicago. He is 58 years old, married, and has three sons and a son-in-law in service. For several years beginning in 1906 he was a license clerk in the city collector's office. He worked his way thru the University of Wisconsin, specializing in economics.

He was later head of the economics department at Rutgers college in New Jersey. After entering the advertising business for a short time he became assistant to the president of the Simmons company, bed makers. In 1928 he became the first managing director of the National Association of Furniture Manufacturers. In 1938, on leave from this place, he conducted a campaign for the National Small Business Men's association, then as now seeking relief from governmental interference.

Haake, who describes himself as a believer in the Constitution and a "pronounced opponent of the New Deal," is a former president of the Executives club of Chicago. He has had much experience as a radio speaker.

George T. Foster, director of the Constitutional Americans, a nationalist group, and Justus Mozart, 5029 N. Tripp av., are also seeking the Republican nomination.

For the last 12 years William W. Link, the Democratic machine choice, has held appointive political offices. He was a forest preserve worker, then president of the board of local improvements [he is still a board member], then assistant superintendent of the Juvenile Detention home, next chief clerk of the Superior court clerk's office, and is now a member of the county civil service commission.

Two other Democrats have withdrawn. They are Ald. William J.

CO-ED ENGINEER GOVERNS WATTS OF ILLINI'S WILL

Jean Walden, '43 Grad, Does Man's Work.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

Jean Walden.

Jean Walden, radio engineer of the University of Illinois' 5,000 watter, WILL, is believed to be the first girl in charge of a transmitter of this size. A graduate of the university of last year, she has held the position for a year. Miss Walden held an amateur's license when in high school, concentrated on mathematics and physics in college. She is 22; her home is at Troy, Ill.

Off a live mike: Tho Jack Benny is switching sponsors next fall after a stretch of 10 years with the same company, he will continue to be heard at 6 p. m. NBC some years ago gave him a personal priority on this hour. . . . Dr. I. Q. is going back to his old sponsor, effective Monday, April 3. Program will move to 9:30 p. m. Mondays with Information Please switching to 8:30 p. m. . . . Frank Sinatra asked his bobby sock brigade to desist from squealing at him. They did, but there were so many protests from listeners who apparently got a vicarious satisfaction out of the yells that the screaming has been resumed.

Edna O'Dell, a favorite songstress of W-G-N listeners, is back on the station in Sew with Music, aired at 10 p. m. Saturdays. Harry Frohman pianist, and Richard Platt, organist, are heard with her. . . . Harry James, the trumpet king, and his orchestra, will depart from CBS late this month. John Nesbitt's Passing Parade will be the replacement. . . . A Liberty ship is soon to be named for the late Raymond Clapper, W-G-N-Mutual commentator who lost his life in the Marshalls invasion. . . . The American premier of Shostakovich's Eighth symphony will be broadcast by the New York Philharmonic Symphony orchestra over CBS on Sunday April 2. The chain acquired first broadcast rights for a reputed $10,000.

BROADCAST 'COUNT OF LUXEMBOURG' ON W-G-N SERIES NEXT

Franz Lehar's delightful tale of Paris, "The Count of Luxembourg," starring Marion Claire and Gilbert Russell, will be presented on The Chicago Theater of the Air next Saturday night in W-G-N's main audience studio. The performance will be broadcast on W-G-N, WGNB, and the Mutual network from 8 to 9 p. m.

Miss Claire, soprano prima donna of the series, will be featured as the pretty young singer whose affairs of heart are related in this operetta, Mr. Russell, tenor, will sing the title role, and Earle Wilkie, baritone, will be heard as the grand duke.

Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, is to speak.

Music will be presented by the W-G-N Symphony orchestra under the direction of Henry Weber and a chorus coached by Robert Trendler. Next Saturday the The Theater of the Air will return to Medinah temple.

Ralph Bellamy Is Guest on Green Valley, U. S. A.

The problem faced by a father in a war time American community serves as the theme for W-G-N and Mutual's Green Valley, U. S. A., from 4 to 4:30 p. m. today. Ralph Bellamy will play the role of a father, too old for this war, too young for the last one, who must give advice to his 17 year old son who wants to joint the navy. Santos Ortega plays the role of a lawyer.

Series Moves

Florence Bader takes tickets from Hugh Douglas, "Mr. First Nighter." The First Nighter series moves to 8:30 p. m. Wednesdays over W-G-N-Mutual.

ART SHOW ENDS TODAY; SIX N.W. MEN IN EXHIBIT

Art Institute Display Closes at 5 P.M.

Today is the last day to view the works of northwest side artists at the Art institute in the 48th annual exhibition by artists of Chicago and vicinity. Six residents of this area are among the 151 painters and sculptors whose work is represented in the midwinter exhibit closing at 5 o'clock this afternoon.

A scene familiar to many suburban residents has been chosen by Robert Sinnott of Barrington for his canvas, "The Crossing." A highway and railfoad intersection near Park Ridge is the locale for his painting of a freight train, its smoke blown back in a gray plume against the indigo sky of a winter twilight. Mr. Sinnott, who has been painting for the last 12 years, recently gave a one man show at the art center and has also been represented in exhibits at the O'Brien galleries, in the international water color exhibit, and in previous shows at the Art institute.

Shows Loop Scene.

Felix Kluczewski, 2457 N. Drake av., shows a typical section of Chicago in his "Loop Scene: 8:15 P. M." From the corner of Randolph and Dearborn he shows the panorama of the street with its cigar stores, theaters, and restaurants, their neon and electric signs brightly penciled against the murky blue of evening settling over the city.

"The Last Days of the War Lords," by Henry Simon, 1412 N. Claremont av., depicts the brutish faces of the dictators against a lurid sunset of orange and smoky ochre. Grasping their halberds and battle axes, they stare with a kind of inhuman fury at the forces holding them at bay. Mr. Simon, who studied at the Art institute, won honorable mention in a national mural competition a few years ago.

Exhibits Rural Scene.

The tranquility of rural Illinois is shown in "Country House," an oil by Theodore Fox of Roselle. Serenity is also the keynote of "Evening in Fall," by another Roselle painter, Joseph Vavak. Sharp contrast to the opulence of the autumn scene, however, is furnished by newspapers headlining "War!" which are scattered on a red brick terrace in the foreground.

From one of the traditional figures of the commedia dell'arte Ernest A. Larsen has taken his inspiration for "Harlequin's Death." On his canvas a hearse is drawn up against a background of magenta and fading mauve light, while a canopy in the upper section of the picture, spangled with stars and bursting fireworks, symbolizes the gayety of the harlequin's life. Mr. Larsen, who has been painting for about five years, has his studio at 1420 N. Kolin av.

Future of Germany to Be Reviewing Stand Topic

What to do with Germany after the war will be discussed on the Northwestern Reviewing stand over W-G-N-Mutual at 11 a. m. today. Speaker's will be include Prof. S. William Halperin, William S. Stokes, and Irving Pflaum.

NURSERY AIDS EASE CARES OF WAR WORKERS

Chicago Commons Seeks More Volunteers.

BY AGNES AHERN.

Women who have scheduled their own household duties so they can help care for the children of women war workers are helping speed the wheels of victory in many sections of the city. At Chicago Commons, 955 Grand av., five OCD child care aids assist staff members in the daily care of 40 children from 2½ to 5 years.

All but two of the children have mothers working in war industries, and the fathers of many are in service. The daily schedule of the nursery, which opens at 7:30 a. m., is as near an approximation to ideal home conditions as child care workers can provide. Free play with tricycles, wagons, doll houses, paints and crayons is the order of the day until the 11 o'clock lunch period.

Serve Lunch Daily.

Since home meals may not be well balanced, staff workers plan that about half of the child's daily food requirements are available at the noon meal. Altho never forced to eat, children are encouraged to take two or three servings, with at least two desserts and all the milk they want. A typical meal includes lamb patties, baked potatoes, beets with lemon butter, toast, and fruit. Menus are planned by the Infant Welfare society, and vary from day to day.

After lunch children take naps until 2:30. They are then given graham crackers and milk. If the weather permits they are taken for a walk, or are encouraged to spend the afternoon hours on the playground. Otherwise they spend the remainder of the day in the nursery, where hobby horses, building blocks, musical instruments, modeling clay, and other equipment provide an outlet for their energy.

Volunteer Aids Help.

Volunteer aids assisting with the program are Mrs. J. W. Heylmun, Mrs. Alice Smith, Miss Hattie Engelhardt, Mrs. Ruth Carmody, and Mrs. Catherine Ludlow. Graduates of the first training course offered by the OCD, they have each given at least one full day a week to the nursery during the last year. Miss Grace Carney and Mrs. Harold Keubler of the Chicago Commons staff are in general charge of the program.

As draft boards call more fathers into service, the Commons is preparing to increase nursery facilities. For the expanded program in this and other centers child care aids are needed urgently. Women who want to assist in the project may register for the OCD training program, which begins tomorrow at the National College of Education in Evanston and at the University of Chicago.

30 Hours of Instruction.

Instruction includes 30 hours of lecture and observation of children in day care centers, followed by 48 hours of practice teaching. Volunteers are asked to pledge six hours of service weekly for six months. After completing 50 hours of satisfactory service, aids may wear OCD insignia and uniforms.

Registrations for the training course may be made at the Volunteer office, 53 W. Jackson blvd. Appointments for interviews may be made by calling Wabash 0528.

B'NAI SHALOM SYNAGOG PLANS PURIM FESTIVAL

The Purim festival will be ushered in at B'nai Shalom synagog, 3245 Ainslie st., at special services at 6:30 o'clock Wednesday evening. The festival marks the triumph of Persian Jewry in the 5th century B. C. when it narrowly escaped extermination by Haman's plot, at the intervention of Mordecai and Queen Esther. At Wednesday evening's services the Book of Esther, called in Herbrew the Megillah or Scroll, will be intoned by Cantor Abraham Keller. Rabbi David Graubart will preach and have charge of the services.

Purim services will also be held at 7:30 o'clock Thursday morning, and a children's service will conclude the festival at 8:30 o'clock Friday evening.

An important feature of the festivities will be a program presented under the auspices of the B'nai Shalom Hebrew and Religious schools at 11 o'clock this morning. Samuel Weiss, principal, and Caryl Herron, dramatic director, are in charge of the program. There will be a film taken in modern Palestine.

Enrollment at Wright Junior College Up 100

Registration for the second semester at City Junior colleges show a net increase over the enrollment for the preceding semester. At Wright Junior college, northwest side branch, the increase is 100 students, with enrollment figures now standing at 752.

This WEEK in the GARDEN

Monday, March 6

Some kinds of perennials can be sown now for early planting. These include such well known kinds as dianthus, alyssum, aquilegia, arabis, iberis, and forget-me-not. Salvia farinacea, a lovely blue species that is useful when cut for mixed bouquets, may also be sown.

When sowing delphinium seed at this season, soak in hot water until the seed swells, then sow. It is best to sow fresh seed in the fall in a cold frame to obtain a high germination, leaving in the frame until spring and then planting out.

With the advance of warm weather and the urge to begin garden operation, do not be hasty and remove the mulch from perennials and roses. Heavy material should be partially removed.

Tuesday, March 7

Rockery plants may be heaved from the ground; these should be replaced firmly and a little fresh soil applied between the plants. Dead leaves also can be removed. As soon as perennials show activity, all rough materials between the plants should be carefully raked off and the finer portions carefully spaded under.

An application of fertilizer should be made before spading to stimulate growth. Simply take a handful and scatter on the ground around each plant. Roll when the ground is not too wet. Rolling levels the depressions if they are not too great.

Wednesday, March 8

Spray lilacs and other shrubs that are infested with scales. A contact spray is essential, for each insect must be hit to kill it. Spray materials can be obtained ready prepared at supply houses.

Thursday, March 9

Spade under the finer portions of the mulch that is around shrubs, using care not to break the roots of the plants. If the hedge has become unsightly or parts have died from any cause, cut all the plants in the hedge to within a few inches of the ground. This is especially true when privet hedges are grown, for they respond quickly after trimming and the result is astonishing.

Friday, March 10

If the amaryllis bulbs show activity, repot them, leaving the old roots on, and bring to a window where the light conditions are good. Water sparingly until growth advances. If seeds are sown thinly, much thinning will be unnecessary. This applies to sowing in boxes indoors and out of doors in the frame or garden.

Saturday, March 11

Give the asparagus bed an application of a complete fertilizer. Examine all perennials, bulbs, or other plants and if any have heaved tamp the soil firmly around them. When hardy chrysanthemums start into growth, divide the clump and replant in well fertilized soil.

HOT PRIMARIES LOOM FOR CONGRESS

HOPEFULS PUSH DRIVES TO SIT IN LEGISLATURE

Spirited Contests Are Expected.

BY LEE SHASSERE.

Candidates for seats in the Illinois house of representatives who are bidding for nomination at the April 11 primary have shifted their campaigns into high gear.

In approximately a dozen Cook county and adjoining districts, victory at the primary will be tantamount to election because senatorial committee action is expected to result in the nominations of both parties totaling only three and three representatives will be elected from each district next November.

However, spirited contests loom in districts where each party committee has placed two up for nomination. All Cook county Democratic senatorial committees, it is understood, plan to authorize two nominations in each district.

Some political observers who predict a big primary vote base their forecasts on a belief in an aroused electorate because of strenuous times.

Following are candidates for the Illinois house from the southwest section. The asterisk [*] indicates incumbents. The single dagger [†] indicates a forecast of Republican senatorial committee action. The Democrats will nominate two in each district except two.

THIRD DISTRICT.

[Parts of wards 1, 2, 4, and 11.]

Republicans †[two to be nominated]—*Charles J. Jenkins, 4127 Prairie av.; Dudley S. Martin, 3736 Indiana av.; Matthew D. Burgess, 4207 Michigan av.; A. Fitzholan Wallace, 3918 Cottage Grove av.

Democrats—*George Garry Noonan, 3020 Parnell av.; *Fred J. Smith, 3442 Wabash av.

FOURTH DISTRICT

[Wards 14 and parts of wards 2, 3, 11, 12, and 15.]

Republicans †[one to be nominated]—*Michael A. Ruddy, 1901 W. 51st st.; Albert Chojnacki, 4724 Winchester av.; Fred Hess, 2021 W. 53d st.

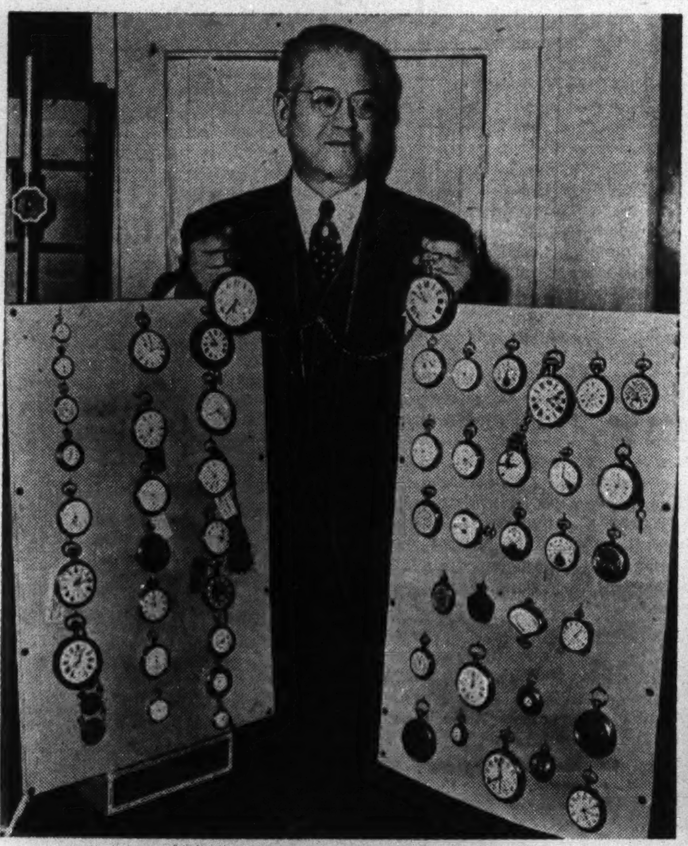
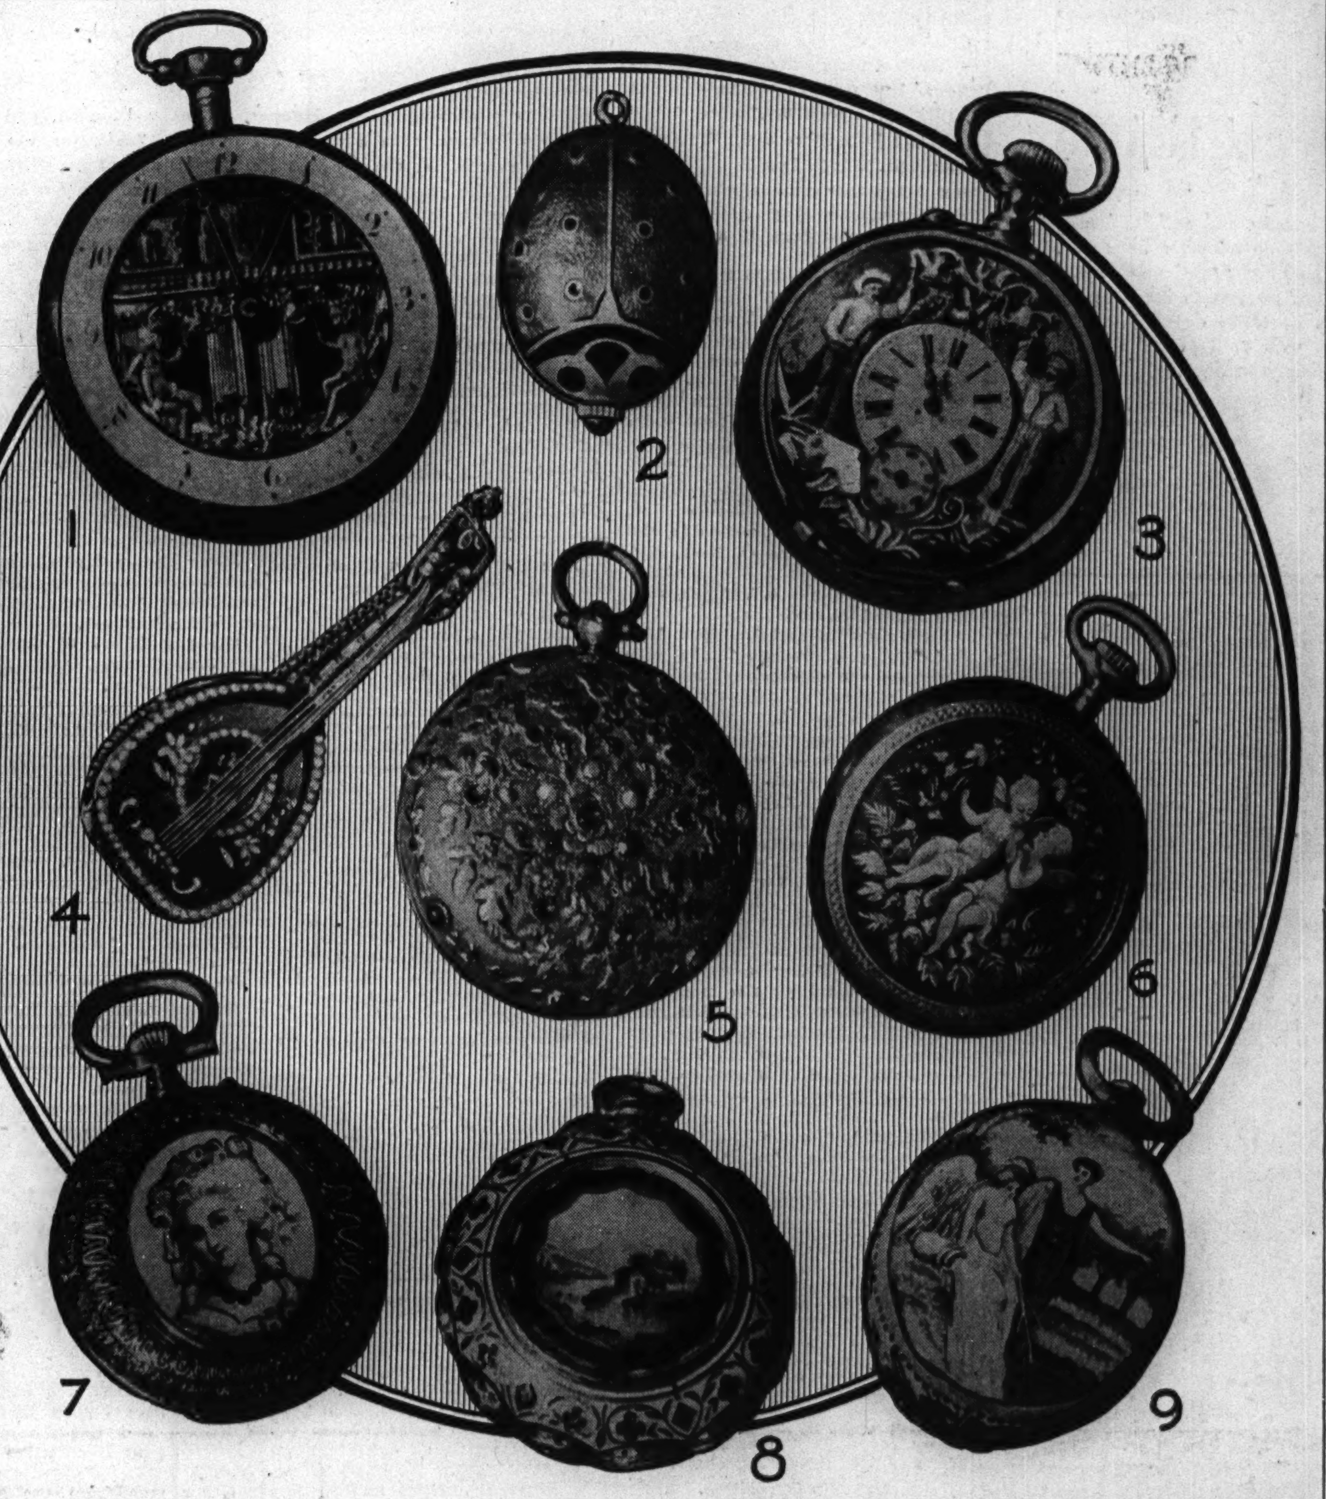
Watches That Told 17th Century Hours Appear in Chicago Heights Jeweler's Display



Only when Harry W. Yaseen holds up these two large antique watches does time hang heavy on his hands he quips, otherwise he is busy in his Chicago Heights jewelry store and in collecting watches. A jeweler for more than 40 years, he has assembled a distinguished group of 200 antique timepieces from 75 to 350 years old. At right may be seen a fan shaped watch, Mexican make, pentagon, square, and golf ball shaped watches.



Watches from famous old French, Swiss, and English watchmakers glitter in the Yaseen collection. Among the superb examples are: (1) Father Time repeater watch, which strikes the hours and quarter hours. This watch is 200 years old. (2) Beetle or scarab pendant watch—green, gold, black. (3) A farmer and yachtsman strike the hours and quarters. (4) Russian mandolin watch; tiny gold strings, pearls, small movement. (5) Jewel encrusted gold watch, 250 years old. (6) Genuine Limoges. (7) Marie Antoinette, who wears a diamond necklace. (8) Turkish numerals on watch with scalloped edges; colors are turquoise, jade, and gold. (9) Hand painted, English, porcelain watch of Battersea period.

BOKMA TRIPLETS AID INVASION OF ENIWETOK ISLE

Boys in Person, Lucille in Spirit Only.

Two-thirds of the Bokma triplets from the southwest side were with the 106th infantry during the American invasion of Eniwetok atoll in the Central Pacific.

They are John and Theodore Bokma, 28, sons of John and Ella Bokma, 135 W. 104th st. The third triplet was not present at the invasion because girls are not used in assault troop units. Her name is Lucille.

Both the boys are privates 1st class. They were separated for the first time in April, 1941, when John was inducted and sent for basic training to Camp Wheeler, Georgia. From July until the following January John trained at Camp Blanding, Florida, and then was sent to Christmas Island.

Meanwhile, Theodore was inducted Sept. 15, 1941, and after training at Camp Walters, Tex., and at camps in California, was sent to the Hawaiian Islands March 19, 1942. John arrived there the following October and the brothers were reunited after he secured a transfer to Theodore's company.

Among the southwest siders accompanying the regiment in its first battle at Eniwetok were:

Pvt. Bernard J. Carroll, 8337 Morgan st., husband of Helen and father of Rita Anne; Pvt. Milton A. Carlson, 6443 S. Artesian av., son of Alfred; Sgt. George W. Barney, 25, 11432 Eggleston av.; Edward Cannon, 5938 S. California av.; Pvt. Ramond Cunningham, 4852 S. May st.; Sgt. Joseph S. Polacek, 5241 S. Campbell av.; Pvt. John Kaslauskas, 3356 S. Halsted st.; Pvt. John Anthony Kaniewski, 1021 31st st.; Sgt. Steve Popovich, Lockport, and Pvt. Robert A. Holtz, Steger.

This lady's pendant or chatelaine watch, oldest in the collection, lies on ruby velvet, a perfect foil for its exquisite colors and workmanship. It is dated about 1600. The original rock crystal covers the watch's face. Suspended from links are the winding key, left, and owner's seal, right.

21 CANDIDATES SEEKING POSTS IN 5 DISTRICTS

Incumbents Face No April Opposition.

BY WILLIAM SHINNICK.

Warm primary fights for congressional nominations in five south side districts were forecast last week after the field of candidates was shaken down by late withdrawals.

In the Republican and Democratic parties combined 21 aspirants are seeking the 10 nominations in the districts—the 1st, 2d, 3d, 4th, and 6th. Five of the 21, however—the incumbent congressmen—are without primary opposition, leaving 16 "outs" battling for five places on the ballots.

See Two Shifts to G. O. P.

Much of the interest being displayed by party leaders and voters centers about the 1st and 2d districts, which elected Democrats as representatives in 1942 by close margins. It is the belief of experts in the G. O. P. camp that a vigorous effort is almost sure to shift these districts to Republican. They are even more confident that Rep. Fred E. Busbey [R.] of the 3d will keep his place, won under difficult conditions two years ago.

Chicago and the immediate suburban area have 11 districts, of which seven now have Democratic congressmen. Besides the 3d, the Republicans hold the 9th, 10th, and 11th, the last two by safe margins. It is regarded as probable that the huge 7th district on the northwest side, the largest in the United States by population, as well as the 1st and 2d, will roll back into the Republican column next fall; it has over 450,000 voters and a Democrat, Leonard W. Schuetz, was elected by a plurality of only 1,975 in 1942. Schuetz died recently.

Six Back Tax Veto.

In general the Chicago Democrats in congress have been subservient to the New Deal. Every one of the six still living voted to uphold President Roosevelt's recent veto of the tax bill. Only 89 of their colleagues were with them and 299 against.

The other four districts usually have swollen majorities for Democratic incumbents and only a landslide would put them into the Republican ranks. These districts are the 4th, 5th, 6th, and 8th.

Information on the south side districts follow:

FIRST DISTRICT

The incumbent, William L. Dawson, is the only Negro in congress and the seat is certain to be retained by a member of his race. In the 1942 election Dawson defeated William E. King, Republican, by 2,743 votes.

There is a strong prospect that the same men will be opponents in next fall's contest. King, who has the Republican organization backing, is opposed only by Earl B. Dickerson, former alderman and ex-head of the Urban league. In 1942 Dickerson was a candidate for congress with a Democratic label, but was snowed under by Dawson in the primary.

King, Louisiana born, was educated at Howard university and John Marshall law school. He was assistant corporation counsel and assistant state's attorney before 1925, and served 12 years as a state legislator. He is 2d ward Republican committeeman and since 1941 has been a member of the Illinois Industrial commission.

The 1st district takes in the loop and a wedge of territory south to 43d st.; its population is one-fourth that of the 2d district.

SECOND DISTRICT

This district comprises all the area south of 43d st. and east of State st. within the city limits and has 612,000 residents. The incumbent representative is William A. Rowan.

Five Republicans are seeking the nomination here. Thomas J. Downs, attorney, 40 years old, has the backing of the regular G. O. P. organization. He was president of the Young Republican organization in 1936 and 1937. In 1942 Downs was the nominee for congress and lost to Rowan by only 3,500 votes. His platform includes winning the war first, putting patriotism above patronage and shelving nonwar activities until peace comes. He is a nephew of the late L. A. Downs, president of the Illinois Central railroad.

Atty. William T. Pridmore of 8104 Jeffery av., is making his race as an opponent of any world supergovernment and an advocate of "restoring the Republic." He is opposed to annoyance of business, big and little, by burocrats' questionnaires and to drafting civilians for any purpose; also to having the United States considered as a "British colony."

His friends describe Pridmore as an able and conscientious citizen who is in the race because of his belief that the country can be saved only by a change in the political complexion of congress.

Edgar C. Brown, journalist and director of the National Negro council, another candidate, is strongly anti-New Deal, and against the

S. W. SIDE WARD BATTLES BLOOM; LACK FRAGRANCE

Committeeman Positions Are Prizes.

BY EDWARD SCHREIBER.

Fights blossomed like spring flowers last week in the final rush of entries completing lineups for ward committeemen in the southwest section. But not all of the contests will breathe floral fragrance.

In the 11th, State Rep. William S. Finucane, 2912 S. Loomis st., is having his ward committeeman title challenged by Leo Crotty, 3203 Green st. Finucane is a bowling alley proprietor.

Felix F. Kucharski, 4811 S. Honore st., is the defending champion in the 12th ward G. O. P. race. Running against him is Andrew Toman, 3822 S. Winchester av., a former nominee for the state senate. The Toman forces have his name bracketed with that of Gen. MacArthur, an entry in the Illinois preference primary for President, in four sheet posters.

See 13th Ward Battle.

A brisk scrap is expected in the 13th between George O. Lehr, 3245 64th pl., present G. O. P. committeeman, and William A. Cunnea, 6623 S. Fairfield av.

State Rep. Michael A. Ruddy, 1901 51st st., another Republican oldtimer on the city central committee, is opposed by Ernest Geissler, 6040 S. Francisco av.

There is a Democratic match in the 16th, with Terence F. Moran, 5641 S. Loomis blvd., former alderman and now a city boiler inspector, getting opposition from Honan Crowley, 1115 Garfield blvd., who has opened headquarters at 1546 W. 63d street. Crowley reportedly has help from State Rep. John F. Boyle, while Moran claims the regular party organization blessing.

H. G. Sailor Opposes Lindblad.

The 17th ward fight is in Republican ranks, with Committeeman Henry D. Lindblad, 6658 Harvard av., opposed by Homer G. Sailor, 417 W. 61st street, who is said to have considerable backing for the contest.

Both parties have a touch of civil war in the 18th ward. George M. Fisher, 7928 S. Bishop street, secretary of the Republican county central committee, has the advantage of solid regular support for a tiff with Edward J. Nieuburt, 7520 Halsted st. Fisher is a judge of the State Court of Claims.

Democratic committeeman John M. Lee, 7947 S. Ada st., has a three way fight with William E. Shaughnessy, 7715 S. Loomis blvd., and John J. Walsh, 1411 W. 80th st. As veteran ward leader, state senator, and chief deputy sheriff, Lee appears to hold the fort strongly.

Have No Opposition.

Unopposed candidates in the other southwest side wards are:

Republican—9th—John C. Fiddelke; 14th—James W. Breen; 16th—William H. Reid. Democrat—9th—Sheldon W. Govier; 11th—Hugh B. Connelly; 12th—Frank V. Zintak; 13th—Michael J. Flynn; 14th—James J. McDermott; 15th—Richard Froehlich; 17th—William T. Murphy; 19th—Thomas D. Nash.

Ward committeemen are elected on primary day, April 11. Tuesday will be the final day for withdrawal.

PLAN ARTCRAFT, GYM EXHIBIT IN S. W. SIDE PARK

The annual gymnasium demonstration in conjunction with the yearly craft and artcraft exhibit of Ogden park will be held at the fieldhouse, 65th st. and Racine av., beginning Wednesday and continuing thru Friday. The opening day's program will begin at 4 p. m., while the program for the final two days is scheduled to start at 8 p. m.

Included in the demonstration will be drills, dancing, pyramids, and tumbling. The instructors are Adolph Gentile and Genevieve Valveda. The craft exhibit will feature archery tackle, model airplanes, leathercraft, raffia work, rugs, and dolls, under direction of Robinson Johnson and Florence Cavanaugh.

A table tennis tournament will be held Tuesday for boys and girls of the community. Junior matches will be held at 4 p. m., intermediate at 7 p. m., and senior at 8 p. m. Medals will be awarded.

Parker PTA to View Film on Tuberculosis

"Mr. Bug Goes to Town," a film presented by the Tuberculosis institute, will be featured Wednesday at 1:15 p. m. at a meeting of the Parker elementary school PTA in the school assembly hall. The program has been arranged by Mrs. Clarence Jaquith, 6839 S. Normal av., health chairman of the club. Mrs. William A. Kelch will sing several solos accompanied by Mrs. George Nelson. A report will also be given on the juvenile delinquency conference held recently at the Stevens hotel.

Appear in Loring School Comedy

Virginia Dodge, Joyce Hooper, Dorothy Fineron, and Bonnie Kistner will appear in a three act comedy, "Ask for the Moon," Saturday evening at the Morgan Park High school auditorium, 1744 Pryor av. The party is presented by seniors of the Loring school.

fourth term. Some Republican leaders question his party loyalty.

Frank O'Leath, 1624 E. 56th st., is running as a proponent of better treatment for service men. He is an insurance broker. Fred Burt, 1115 E. 47th st., is the fifth candidate.

THIRD DISTRICT

This big district on the south side, traditionally Republican up to 1930, returned to its old allegiance two years ago, when it elected Fred E. Busbey congressman. Busbey, who fought valiantly against the federal "bobtail ballot" for soldiers, has no primary opposition.

Edward A. Kelly, congressman defeated by Busbey, is in the Democratic race in the hope of turning the tables this time. He has the Kelly machine support. He is in the real estate and insurance business. Kelly is 52 years old and lives at 8223 S. Aberdeen st.

Opposing him are Paul B. Saltimieras, operator of radio station WGES and a leader among Chicago Lithuanians, and James A. Hivick of 5531 S. Kilbourn av. Charles P. Kal, attorney, announced that he had retired from the race in favor of Saltimieras.

FOURTH DISTRICT

In the 4th district Martin Gorski has no opposition for Democratic nomination.

Leo J. Kozicki, printing firm head and real estate dealer, claims the support of nearly all the organized G. O. P. strength. He has been active in ward politics and in Boy Scout work. Kozicki favors an overhauling of the machinery for helping soldiers returned to civil life.

Henry James Shelton, 4434 S. Sawyer av., asserts he has the support of 12th ward Republican groups. He was a defeated candidate for alderman in the last city election. He says he is 100 per cent against the New Deal and against Wendell Willkie for President. He and his wife are promoting the MacArthur for President movement.

A third candidate for congress in the 4th is James A. McGrath, 3612 Union av.

SIXTH DISTRICT

Former Sheriff Thomas J. O'Brien, incumbent congressman, is without opposition in the Democratic primary.

Seeking the Republican nomination are Marvin M. Kurth, Stickney township committeeman, and Charles J. Anderson Jr., of 1816 Monroe st. Kurth has the O. K. of all the township and ward committeemen. He is an investigator for the Illinois department of revenue. In recent years the 6th has been heavily Democratic.

11TH DISTRICT

In the 11th district, which comprises Du Page, Will, Kane, and McHenry counties, the Republican incumbent, Chauncey W. Reed, is opposed for the nomination by Samuel P. Reese of Glen Ellyn. Reed, now serving his fifth term, is in no apparent danger of defeat. The district is one of the most consistently Republican in the country. Otto Joseph Hruby Jr., of Hinsdale, has no opponent in the Democratic primary.

Palos Heights Woman's club will hold its annual style show Tuesday evening at the community house, 12123 71st av. Mrs. Doris Weber Essig, 3d district music chairman, will play piano selections and will accompany Mrs. Edward Engert, violinist.

LORING SENIORS WILL PRESENT PLAY SATURDAY

"Ask for the Moon" is the title of a three act comedy which will be presented by senior students of the Loring school, 10650 Longwood dr., as their annual class play at 8:30 p. m. Saturday in the Morgan Park High school auditorium, 1744 Pryor av.

FIRE PREVENTION KEY TO SUCCESS OF HARVEY HYDE

Flossmoor Chief Works Thru Children.

Harvey Hyde.

Harvey Hyde fights fire with friendship and showmanship. Since he was appointed volunteer fire chief in Flossmoor 15 years ago he has carried out a constant program to instill the principles of fire prevention into the school children because he is convinced that "if you impress the children they will get coöperation from their parents."

To prove his point Mr. Hyde discloses that since he has been chief there has been no loss of life or loss of a home in Flossmoor because of fire. He gives much credit to his 14 loyal volunteer firemen and the coöperation of community officials, but believes that fire prevention campaigns cannot be overemphasized, "for the best fire department is the one that never goes out."

Answer 49 Calls in '43.

But the Flossmoor department went out 49 times in 1943, and altho most of the fires were of the rubbish heap variety Hyde is trying to cut down the number.

A thin, bespectacled, square jawed man of 59, he operates a gasoline station next to his home at Flossmoor rd and Douglas av. and drives the school bus. He says his work as fire chief is "civic duty."

In addition to directing all the fires to which he may be called night or day, supervising men and equipment, and keeping a complete fire report for the state fire marshal, Hyde studies the latest methods of fire fighting.

Develops Own Ideas.

That was how he became a fire fighter. As a young man he lived near the fire station at 6011 State st., Chicago, and after 12 years of informal association with the men of this station he developed his ideas of fire prevention which he brought to Flossmoor in 1927.

He went not to the people whose homes he was appointed to protect, but to their children. Fire drills were started in the Flossmoor school; prizes were given to youngsters who wrote the best essays on fire prevention; entertainers and motion pictures were brought to the school auditorium to demonstrate fire prevention.

This work was supplemented by home inspection blanks which the children filled out and returned to the fire department. Pamphlets and posters on fire prevention were constantly kept in view of the children and they were encouraged to visit the department.

Makes Prevention a Game.

Beyond all this is the vital fact which probably most accounts for Hyde's success—he likes children and they like him. He makes fire prevention a game. Thus youngsters keep a sharp eye out for frayed wires, carelessly placed cigarets and matches, and the many other home fire hazards.

Hyde's number 1 complaint is on behalf of young children who are endangered when their parents leave them home alone. He remembers too clearly two small bodies found in the ruins of a home in a nearby town. He and his men had gone to the assistance of their neighboring fire fighters when a pumper broke down.

The two children had been left alone at night. An oil lamp near an open window had set fire to curtains fluttering in the breeze.

Outlying Homes a Worry.

Another big worry to Hyde are outlying homes "which do not have running water and are a fire menace." These homes are not under the jurisdiction of Flossmoor but, nevertheless, Hyde is concerned about them, for he belongs to the Community Firemen's association and is pledged to go anywhere in the huge area bounded on the north by Chicago, on the south by Kankakee, on the east by the Indiana state line, and on the west by Harlem av.

Mrs. Lillian Hyde acts as her husband's assistant and is always home whenever he is away so that no call for help will ever go unanswered.

EXPECT LIVELY FIGHT IN STATE SENATE BALLOT

This is the year when Illinois' even numbered senatorial districts nominate and elect state senators. In Cook county the districts are the 2d, 4th, and 6th. The 8th and 14th districts include Boone, McHenry, Lake, Kane, and Kendall counties. In Chicago's odd numbered 31st district, an election will be held to fill the vacancy created by the death of Sen. Milton D. Smith.

Action is anticipated in the 14th [Kane and Kendall counties] for the seat relinquished by Sen. Arnold P. Benson of Batavia, who is a Republican candidate for the secretary of state nomination. Republican aspirants to the senate seat, who are seeking the nomination April 11, include the present 14th district state representative, John C. Friedland, Elgin; Merritt J. Little, Aurora, and Edward J. Farrell, Aurora. The Democratic candidate, James Walsh of St. Charles, is unopposed.

In the 4th district, which includes ward 14 and parts of wards 2, 3, 11, 12, 13, and 15, the Republican candidate, Robert W. Schulze, 2700 W. 55th st., has no opposition. Democratic candidates include Frank McDermott, 2230 W. Garfield blvd., incumbent; Edwin Frank Morkes, 5445 Ashland av.; John Sostak, 5430 Laflin st.; Frank D. Novak, 4628 Wood st., and Frank L. 65 YOUTHS JOIN NEW BAND UNIT IN BLUE ISLAND

Booming drums, crashing cymbals, and brilliant brass fanfares are resounding regularly from the American Legion club rooms, Vermont and Greenwood av., Blue Island, as the newly formed Blue Island community band rehearses.

Membership is open to all boys and girls of 12 or over. Sixty-five already have joined, but there are still places for 10 more. Rehearsals are held every Friday night from 7 to 9 p. m. All Blue Island youths who play a band instrument are urged to report to Capt. James Sylvester, director of the band, on Friday.

Kiwanis Donates Music.

The band project was originally taken up by members of the board of directors of the Kiwanis club of Blue Island. This organization is donating the necessary music. Members of the American Legion are donating rehearsal space and have contributed a bass drum.

Capt. Sylvester, who teaches in Chicago, was bandmaster of the Hull House band for 20 years and was the leader of the 124th Field Artillery band before it was activated for participation in World War II. During the first World war Capt. Sylvester was leader of the 149th Field Artillery band and was band commander of the Rainbow division.

He is optimistic regarding the Blue Island organization and believes that within a short time the youngsters will develop into a "first class concert outfit."

Asks Civic Coöperation.

According to Mayor John Hart, "the project is one of the most worthwhile ever presented locally."

Because war restrictions make band instruments hard to get, those desiring a place in the band must have their own instruments or have the use of someone else's.

William V. Garcher is chairman of the Kiwanis band committee. Other members of the group named by Edward F. Harms, president of the club, are Ralph H. Dempsey, Wesley A. Volp, Birt Frobish, and William J. Gerdes.

AN OLD FLOOR CAN LOOK LIKE IT'S NEW AGAIN

Several Treatments for Refinishing.

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

There are several practical and inexpensive treatments for an old softwood floor which is in need of refinishing. It can be given a good oiling and then waxed or varnished, or both. It can be given a couple of coats of good floor paint, followed by varnishing or waxing or both.

Or, condition of wood permitting, it can be given a floor and varnish stain; this material performs two operations at the same time. It will stain and varnish the floor.

Cracks in a floor must first be filled and crack fillers for the purpose are plentiful. Ordinary putty will do the work if the cracks are first brushed with linseed oil. Wood putty also can be used. Any excess filler should be sandpapered smooth.

If the floor is to have a clear finish such as varnish or oil the filler can be tinted to match floor color. This is not necessary if floor is to be painted.

Apply Finish Properly.

If an oiled finish is properly applied, and the right kind of oil used, it will not become gummy or be a dust and dirt collector. Linseed oil, boiling hot, can be applied with old cloths or mops or a brush.

Work must be done quickly and if oil cools it must be heated again. [Care should be taken that oil is not allowed to boil over as it is inflammable and all cloths used should be immediately destroyed as oil in them can cause spontaneous combustion.]

Every crack should be well filled, but care should be taken not to apply too much oil. The wood will absorb only so much. After giving oil an hour or so to dry—it may not take so long—the surplus oil can be wiped off. [Destroy cloths used for this wiping, too. They are inflammable!] If wood is very dry and soft it may be necessary to apply a second coat when first one has dried, and even a third. Then when finish is hard and dry it can be waxed or varnished.

Varnishing Oiled Floor.

To varnish an oiled floor a good grade of quick drying floor varnish can be used, applied in a thin coat. Places which get hard wear should be watched, and reoiled when traffic spots show.

When an oiled floor becomes soiled it can be washed, but water should be used sparingly and drying should be quick and thoro.

Before a wood floor is given any refinishing treatment, any roughness or ground-in dirt should be removed. An electric floor machine is excellent for this work, or the floor can be hand scraped with a knife or steel brush. Then the floor can be brushed and then wiped with a cloth damp with turpentine.

Another excellent treatment for a softwood floor is to paint it. Good floor paints are available in many colors.

COLLECTING OLD WATCHES LEADS TO ADVENTURES

Chicago Heights Jeweler Enjoys 40 Year Search.

BY IRENE PONTO.

Harry W. Yaseen, Chicago Heights, claims he has had 200 times more fun and adventure than his jeweler colleagues.

For him the usual business trip is a voyage of discovery thru which he may spend quiet but thrilling hours with long dead English gentry, a Turkish sultan, a Russian noblewoman perhaps, or a French gallant.

His good times are found in the 200 antique watches he has gathered together during a 40 year exploration of dusty shops, auctions, family effects, or negotiations with private sellers.

Arriving home with the latest acquisition carefully wrapped, Yaseen sits down at a workbench that has been at the same site on a Chicago Heights thorofare for 34 years, and proceeds to investigate closely the charms of master craftsmanship. This appreciation is followed by a third discovery when he consults written works to learn the history and worth of the timepiece before him. A fourth step is to mount the watch on soft velvet and record revelant data.

3 Generations of Jewelers.

Son of a European jeweler, at whose workbench he made small parts for watch movements, Yaseen himself grew up to become an established jeweler and to have a son, Herbert, to work with him in the family profession and to inherit a fine collection of timepieces, if his father does not present the collection to a museum.

The smallest watch he has ever encountered, says the watch-wise collector, is a certain gold engraved ladies' watch in his collection. The works are thinner than a half dollar. It is a specially built Swiss movement executed for Lapine, famous old Parisian watchmaker.

Repeater Type Spectacular.

His most spectacular timepieces are the repeater watches which chime the quarter hours, strike the hours, and play music box melodies. And among these is, of course, a favorite—Father Time. As the hands of this watch reach the hour, Father Time and an English bellringer move into a proscenium. The bellringer strikes Father Time's scythe to record the hours. Fifteen minutes later two little angels seated below the arch raise their arms to strike chimes. This particular collector's item is described in F. J. Britten's book on old clocks and watches, a text Yaseen has in his library.

Sparkling with beauty and value is a round watch, its case of cobalt blue enamel, the other rim encircled with oriental pearls. A snowflake of diamonds flashes in the center. The watch hands are manufactured of platinum. In the stem or winder there is a diamond weighing a half karat. This watch and another with Chinese characters are his latest and proudest purchases.

Few of the watches, which are from 75 to 350 years old, have jewels in their movements. The introduction of the mainspring and the use of working jewels came about the 18th century. Odd shapes were the delight of watch carriers one or two centuries ago. They were ordered to resemble violins, hourglasses, crosses, skulls, books, dogs, seashells, and birds. The Yaseen collection has watches with pentagon, square, and fan shaped cases. One is a flattened golf ball.

He has one of the first watches offered by the Waltham company It is dated about 1860. He has a Russian watch which not only tells time in seconds and minutes but gives the week, month, position of the moon and stars, and will split seconds for a racing fan.

VAUGHAN'S SEED STORE, Dept. V, 10 W. Randolph, Chicago 1

This Week in the Garden

Monday, March 6

Some kinds of perennials can be sown now for early planting. These include such well known kinds as dianthus, alyssum, aquilegia, arabis, iberis, and forget-me-not. Salvia farinacea, a lovely blue species that is useful when cut for mixed bouquets, may also be sown.

When sowing delphinium seed at this season, soak in hot water until the seed swells, then sow. It is best to sow fresh seed in the fall in a cold frame to obtain a high germination, leaving in the frame until spring and then planting out.

With the advance of warm weather and the urge to begin garden operation, do not be hasty and remove the mulch from perennials and roses. Heavy material should be partially removed.

Tuesday, March 7

Rockery plants may be heaved from the ground; these should be replaced firmly and a little fresh soil applied between the plants. Dead leaves also can be removed. As soon as perennials show activity, all rough materials between the plants should be carefully raked off and the finer portions carefully spaded under.

An application of fertilizer should be made before spading to stimulate growth. Simply take a handful and scatter on the ground around each plant. Roll when the ground is not too wet. Rolling levels the depressions if they are not too great.

Wednesday, March 8

Spray lilacs and other shrubs that are infested with scales. A contact spray is essential, for each insect must be hit to kill it. Spray materials can be obtained ready prepared at supply houses.

One of the finest fruits to grow on the home garden is the strawberry. They delight in a well drained, deep, well enriched soil containing plenty of humus. Consult the nurseryman regarding the best varieties to grow, but order early to be sure to obtain the plants for early planting.

Thursday, March 9

Spade under the finer portions of the mulch that is around shrubs, using care not to break the roots of the plants. If the hedge has become unsightly or parts have died from any cause, cut all the plants in the hedge to within a few inches of the ground. This is especially true when privet hedges are grown, for they respond quickly after trimming and the result is astonishing.

An application of plant food should be made and the soil on both sides carefully spaded under. Old, gnarled shrubs often can be returned to good condition by a severe cutting back, always pruning for good form or shape excepting when in groups of several plants, when the group is considered as a whole. Clean bird houses and place them in position.

Friday, March 10

If the amaryllis bulbs show activity, repot them, leaving the old roots on, and bring to a window where the light conditions are good. Water sparingly until growth advances. If seeds are sown thinly, much thinning will be unnecessary. This applies to sowing in boxes indoors and out of doors in the frame or garden.

Place a few twigs of the box elder, red maple, oak, hickory, wildcrab, hazel, shadbush, goldenbell, cornelian cherry, horse chestnut, or other shrub that may be available, for they are all interesting when buds and flowers develop.

Saturday, March 11

Give the asparagus bed an application of a complete fertilizer. Examine all perennials, bulbs, or other plants and if any have heaved tamp the soil firmly around them. When hardy chrysanthemums start into growth, divide the clump and replant in well fertilized soil.

The gardener, if he has the space, can grow fine chrysanthemums by buying young stock and lining it out in rows. They are gross feeders and applications of plant food should be made at about three week intervals. Mulch during hot weather and disbud to obtain larger flowers.

CHICAGO LEAGUE TO OPEN WINTER BASEBALL CLASS

Continuing its search for baseball talent despite the difficulties of war, the Chicago Baseball League and Training school announces a general assembly to be held at Sherman park, 1300 W. 53d st., at 7:30 p. m. tomorrow.

Boys more than 14 years old interested in developing their baseball talents are invited to attend. All capable aspirants will be placed on Chicago Baseball league teams and will play in the city-wide league this summer. Outstanding players are given the opportunity of playing in Comiskey park while the White Sox are out of town.

Will Train Indoors.

For the remainder of the winter instruction will be indoors. Later the teams will move outdoors for their scheduled games in the parks. There is no charge for tuition and uniforms are furnished.

President and founder of the league is William P. Hughes, 8104 Elizabeth st., who was recently promoted to the grade of captain in the Chicago fire department. Officials of the league who assist Hughes are: Judge Gibson Gorman, 9345 Laflin st., chairman of the arbitration board; Michael E. Hannigan, 6646 S. Honore st., vice chairman of arbitration; Michael Fredericks, 6455 S. Rockwell st., chief scout; William A. Houlahan, 6159 S. Washtenaw av., treasurer, and Charles J. McCarthy, 3542 65th st.; A. O. Harting, 6351 Racine av., and Joseph Schneider, 7703 Morgan st., vice presidents.

Sox to Help Out.

Capt. Hughes, who formerly played semi-professional ball, says he organized the school primarily "to help young players get the right kind of training." He has secured the coöperation of White Sox officials and Harry Grabiner, vice president of the Sox; Don Hanski, utility player; Vince Castino, reserve catcher, and John Mostil, Sox scout, will assist in training the youths.

S. W. SIDER TAKES PART IN INVASION OF MARSHALLS

Norman Wurmnest, 17, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Wurmnest 15812 Lathrope av., Harvey, was one of the coast guardsmen who participated in the invasion of the Marshall Islands.

As he was bringing reinforcements ashore in the second wave a machine gun opened up on his boat. He and others in the crew fell flat on the deck as the bullets whined over their heads.

On one trip they tried to rescue 15 marines who were stranded on a coral reef. But before they could be reached, 12 foot waves had knocked the marines into the water. As the men sped back to their ship they threw life preservers to the struggling marines.

WHAT A SUBSCRIPTION INVOLVES: Over 500,000 book-reading families now belong to the Book-of-the-Month Club. They do so in order to keep themselves from missing the important new books they are really interested in.

As a Club member, you receive an advance publication report about the judges' choice—and also reports about all other important coming books. If you decide you want the book-of-the-month, you let it come. If not (on a blank always provided) you can specify some other book you want, or simply say: "Send me nothing."

Last year the retail value of free books given to Club members was over $7,000,000—given, not sold! These book-dividends could be distributed free because so many subscribers ordinarily want the book-of-the-month that an enormous edition can be printed. The saving on this quantity-production enables the Club to buy the right to print other fine library volumes. These are then manufactured and distributed free among subscribers—one for every two books-of-the-month purchased.

Your obligation as a member is simple. You pay no yearly fee. You merely agree to buy no fewer than four books-of-the-month in any twelve-month period. Your subscription to the Club is not for one year, but as long as you decide; you can end it at any time after taking four books-of-the-month. You pay for the books as you get them—the regular retail price (frequently less) plus a small charge to cover postage and other mailing expenses. (Prices are slightly higher in Canada.)

'Tristan and Isolde' Will Open Met Season Here

Artists Named for 11 of 13 Performances

By Claudia Cassidy.

The Metropolitan Opera company will open an engagement of 13 performances at the Civic Opera house Monday evening, April 17, with Wagner's "Tristan and Isolde," presenting Marjorie Lawrence in her first Chicago appearance as Isolde, in a cast featuring Kerstin Thorborg, Lauritz Melchior, Herbert Janssen, and Emanuel List. Sir Thomas Beecham will conduct. There will be no performance Thursday evening, April 20, because of the season's final concert by the Chicago Symphony orchestra at Orchestra hall. The incomplete opera schedule follows:

Tuesday evening, April 18: Verdi's "La Traviata," with Licia Albanese, Thelma Votipka, Helen Olheim, Armand Tokatyan, Leonard Warren. Ballet. Pietro Cimara conducting.

Wednesday evening, April 19: Mozart's "The Magic Flute," with Nadine Conner, Lillian Raymondi, Charles Kullman, Ezio Pinza, John Brownlee. Bruno Walter conducting.

Friday evening, April 21: Thomas' "Mignon," with Jennie Tourel, Patrice Munsel, Lucielle Browning, James Melton, Ezio Pinza, John Gurney. Sir Thomas Beecham conducting.

Saturday afternoon, April 22: Verdi's "The Masked Ball," with Zinka Milanov, Kerstin Thorborg, Jan Peerce, Leonard Warren, Virgilio Lazzari, Nicola Moscona. Bruno Walter conducting.

Saturday evening, April 22: Bizet's "Carmen," with Lily Djanel, Licia Albanese, Raoul Jobin, Alexander Sved, George Cehanovsky, Alessio De Paolis. Ballet. Sir Thomas Beecham conducting.

Monday evening, April 24: To be announced.

Tuesday evening, April 25: Wagner's "Parsifal," with Kerstin Thorborg, Margaret Harshaw, Marita Farell, Helen Olheim, Lauritz Melchior, Herbert Janssen, Alexander Kipnis, Nicola Moscona. Emile Cooper conducting.

Wednesday evening, April 26: Offenbach's "The Tales of Hoffmann," with Patrice Munsel, Lily Djanel, Eleanor Steber, Raoul Jobin, Ezio Pinza, Martial Singher, Alessio De Paolis. Sir Thomas Beecham conducting.

Thursday evening, April 27: Verdi's "Aida," with Zinka Milanov, Bruna Castagna, Thelma Votipka, Kurt Baum, Leonard Warren, Virgilio Lazzari. Ballet. Wilfred Pelletier conducting.

Friday evening, April 28: Wagner's "Tannhäuser," with Rose Bampton, Marjorie Lawrence, Lauritz Melchior, Martial Singher, Alexander Kipnis, John Gurney. Ballet. Paul Breisach conducting.

Saturday afternoon, April 29: Puccini's "La Boheme," with Licia Albanese, Frances Greer, Charles Kullman, John Brownlee, Ezio Pinza, George Cehanovsky, Louis D'Angelo. Cesare Sodero conducting.

Saturday evening, April 29: To be announced.

Prices for the opening night will range from $2.20 to $6.60; for subsequent performances, from $1.65 to $5.50.

A lot of names are missing from that list. You won't find "Pelléas and Mélisande," despite the avowed preference of innumerable Chicagoans for that opera. You won't find such popular singers as Helen Traubel, Lily Pons, Grace Moore, Lawrence Tibbett, Bidu Sayao, Jarmila Novotna, or Gladys Swarthout, and you won't find George Szell on the conducting roster, despite his recent Wagnerian triumphs. Unless, of course, they all bob up on those operas to be announced. But this represents all the opera Chicago has to choose from this season. When a great city lets its own opera company die, it takes what it can get, which means what touring troupes want to bring.

LOUDEST LAUGH SHOW OF THE DECADE!

THE SEASON OPENS

movies with you some night if you want me. Just ask me a day or so ahead of time and I'll be pleased to go."

"That's awfully nice of you," he said sarcastically and walked away.

But two days later he was back again with the same grin.

"Do you suppose I could hope for your company on the evening of the 28th?" he asked. "That is, if it's convenient for your little Indian friend."

Collie laughed. "Let's see. When is the 28th?"

"Thursday. This is Tuesday. I figured that should give her ample time to arrange a cold dinner for her husband."

"I'll ask her."

"All right. You talk it over with her and let me know how it comes out."

Collie was not anxious to accept Jerry's invitation but she'd had enough of his moods. A flat refusal to be friendly with him would result in an almost unbearable situation at the stables. And fair was fair. If he wished to bury the hatchet it was only right that she should meet him half way. He was not asking too much of her.

And yet there was something not entirely free and natural about his manner. Behind the grin there was the old disagreeableness lurking, the quick sarcasm, the strange touchiness. Collie remembered how Van had thought Jerry Oliver a complex character who could neither welcome Collie into his heart nor cast her out.

"Well," she reflected, "I can be pleasant for one evening. I hope he can."

She made her arrangements with the Indian girl and hastened to tell Jerry that she would be delighted to spend Thursday evening with him. He received the news as badly as he might have been expected to receive a refusal.

"Now of course," she said to his unsmiling face, "if you've made other arrangements——" He replied shortly, "I asked you out, didn't I?"

She nodded and went back to her work. "Perhaps," she thought hopefully, "something will arise that he'll have to cancel the date."

But nothing arose. She was still hoping until 6 o'clock Thursday evening and then she gave up. "I'll call for you in about an hour," Jerry said to her as she left for home to change her clothes.

"I'll be ready," she promised.

She was aware of Ben Oliver's amazed expression as she drove away from the stables. Obviously Jerry had been in the habit of speaking of her in a way that the boy could not reconcile with the idea of Jerry calling for her. She wished desperately that she had inspired in the man a simple, wholesome dislike. That could be dealt with in simple, wholesome terms. This was all dark and complicated. She glanced up at Van Slater's house as she passed it. The people, she thought, who made rules about good company and bad company didn't always know what they were talking about. Van was kind and decent and comprehensible. He could have been the man to lean against if the world would accept him for what he was and not judge him by his business. She smiled to herself as she recalled her dream about leaning against some one in a quiet little town. The man in her dream had been a lawyer who would be kind to Tony and Little Jewel and give them standing and respect in the community.

And here she was sighing as she looked at Van Slater's house. Here she was about to go out with a strange, unpleasant man. Somehow things were wrong. Very wrong. She sighed again.

Jane Lansing and her father finished their dinner and walked out of the dining room. They strolled slowly, aimlessly toward the lobby. Things hadn't been like this in the past and they were both remembering other evenings at the hotel. They had always dined with the Bronsons and there had been laughter and good fellowship at the table. Now the Bronsons never came to the dining room and there were no more gleeful attempts to see whether the young people or the oldsters would be ready first to start for the Casino.

Jane and her father paused in the center of the lobby.

"What do you think you'll do, daddy?"

"The Rays said they'd play bridge if we could get a fourth." She nodded, looking sadly up into his drawn face. "Are you going to the Casino, Jane?"

"Yes, dear."

He turned away from her and she knew that he was taking this harder than she had bargained for. Every morning she awakened with the hope that today would be the day when he would say, "Well, daughter, if you want Slater, you take him and I'll get to like him in time, I suppose." But that was only wishful thinking. He would never accept Slater as a son-in-law with whom he could leave Jane and know no worry or regret.

"I suppose you're about ready to go?" he said.

She shook her head. "I'll go when your bridge game gets started."

"O, that might be two hours from now. You run along if you must. You're in a hurry to get over there."

"No, I'm not. If I were I'd have had dinner with Van. I wanted to be with you. I still want to be with you. Shall we sit down for a while here?"

"Let's take a little stroll."

"All right, daddy. Whatever you say."

They walked out into the night air that was so exciting in the desert winter. The stars were absurdly large and white and they seemed to hang within reach of any one who dared climb the mountains. Jane gathered her wrap more closely about her.

"It's a little chilly, isn't it? Altho the air is divine."

"Drink in a lot of it. You'll be surrounded with cigaret smoke and perfume for the rest of the evening."

His tone was so bitter that she could not bear it unless she laughed. "Daddy, really——"

"Jane, please—I haven't asked a great deal of you—listen to me now. This man, this Slater——"

"Yes, daddy."

"You're determined to marry him?"

She drew her breath in sharply. It was coming now. What would she do if he forbade her marriage to Van? How could she tell him that he must not hope for her to marry Richard? How could she give him his chance to go contentedly when the moment came? There was no one to whom she could turn for help if he cast Van aside. But still what was Van's place in her life if her father could not see him as a refuge for her? That she loved Van did not count. She had given up living for herself on the day when a doctor had told her that her father would not survive his next attack. No, there was no point in marrying Van if her father would sooner, see her alone in the world than the wife of a gambler. Or was it that he hoped Richard would return to their lives as soon as Van was put aside?

"I am not determined to do anything, daddy, of which you do not approve."

He put his arm about her affectionately. "That's my own little girl talking now, Janie. I give you my word that man isn't for you. Just stop for a moment and compare him with Richard."

She had compared him with Richard. The boy with the man. She knew her father was not seeing them as two individual males. He was seeing the Bronson name and fortune stacked against Slater's life that was controled by luck and the whims of a wealthy group of pleasure seekers. He was not comparing Van with Richard. It couldn't be done. She knew there was no comparison.

"Your mind is pretty much made up, isn't it, Dad?"

"About Slater?"

"Yes. You couldn't be happy if I married him, could you?"

"Happy?" Clyde Lansing paused to consider the word. After a moment he repeated it as tho fascinated by the sound. "Happy? Jane, I'll tell you something. Something that will give you some idea of how I feel about Slater. If I were a sick man—a really sick man, not just a fellow who's reached the age where he can't take strenuous exercise—if I were really ill and—and, you know, on the verge—of kicking off, I'd sooner leave you alone in the world than married to that man."

Jane felt sudden, hot, quick tears start to her eyes. So that was how it was? She knew now, knew beyond a question of a doubt that she could never marry Van. He was not a man whom her father could trust. Her marriage to Van would bring him no rest, no assurance that he was leaving his daughter behind with a husband who could protect her against any and all adversity.

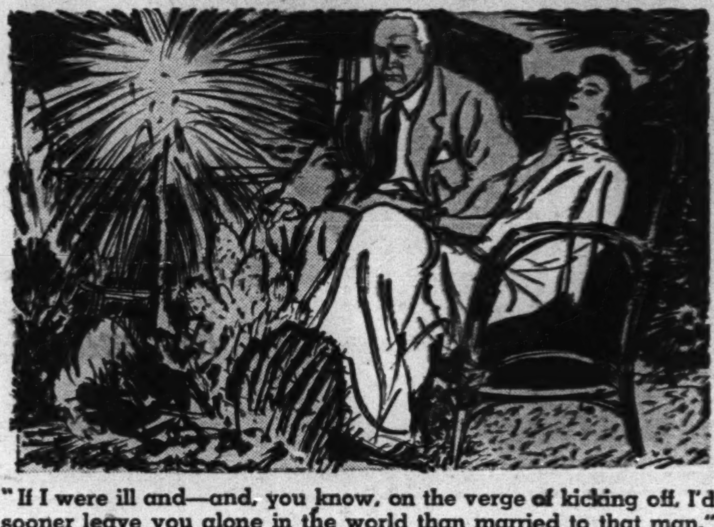
"If that's how you truly feel, daddy, I'll—I'll tell Van that I just can't marry him."

"I wish you would, Janie."

She felt for his hand and held it tightly in her own cold hand.

"Haven't we always seen eye to eye, Dad? She raised her face to his in the darkness and showed him that she was smiling, that she could do his bidding and take pleasure in the doing.

"You pretty well figure, don't you, daughter, that this has just been an infatuation? One of those things that comes upon young girls sometimes?"



"If I were ill and—and, you know, on the verge of kicking off, I'd sooner leave you alone in the world than married to that man."

"I suppose you're right. You always are."

"O, well." He was embarrassed by her unquestioning confidence. "I've been wrong often but this time I can't see how I could be. A fellow like Slater, Janie, he's in a business where it's always feast or famine, with the famine getting the heaviest play. But that wouldn't trouble me so much. There are other things I don't like about him. First of all I don't like his two-faced manner."

"How do you mean?"

"O, it was pretty plain that he never liked me any more than I liked him. I don't know why. It was just one of those things. But then all of a sudden when he wanted to marry you he got sweet as pie. I don't like hypocrites."

• • •

She was silent, remembering that Van had never liked her father because he had placed him on sight for what he was. She had admired Van for his attempts to make a friend of her father. It had been one of the things for which she had been grateful to him.

"And besides that, Janie, he doesn't really love you."

"Why do you say that, daddy?" she asked swiftly. Had it been so obvious?

"I say it because I've seen his type before. I've got to speak pretty plain to explain myself, daughter. You see, a man like Slater can't rest unless every pretty girl who passes his range of vision falls into his arms. I guess it's pretty easy for him as a rule but you were different. You were a nice girl and there was no nonsense about you. His type will go to any lengths to avoid disappointment so he's willing to marry you."

"That's the way you figure him, daddy?" She spoke quietly, keeping the irony out of her voice, trying not to laugh lest it become impossible to stop.

"Of course that's the way I figure him. That's the way he is."

Her brain began to function with cool detachment. Here was a man who understood another man as little as tho they were beings of two entirely different species. It was incredible that her father could so misread Van Slater. She wondered if all the fathers all over the world who were disapproving of their daughters' suitors were misjudging them as completely as Clyde Lansing was misjudging Van. And if so, she decided, it was because fathers did not know their daughters. What man worthy of the name would believe that his daughter had thrown herself again and again at a man and been tactfully and gently rejected. Her father believed her to be the repository of every virtue and ideal. And why should he believe that she was? From what direction would come the angelic qualities he thought he saw in her? Did fathers ever ask themselves that question? Did they ever say, "Now wait a minute, why shouldn't my daughter be human?" No, they just raised their dueling pistols or shotguns or fists when it would be far more intelligent to raise a question.

They were close to the door of their cottage now and Jane said, "I think I'll go in, daddy. Do you mind?"

"No. Not at all. Guess you want to think things over."

"There's nothing to think over, daddy. I know what I'm going to do. But of course I'll go to the Casino, you know. I can't just tell him on the phone that——"

"No, I suppose not. Well, I'll see you in the morning, dear."

He kissed her on the forehead and she patted his shoulder gently. "Have a nice bridge game, daddy."

He stood looking at her tenderly. She was the only person he had ever deeply and sincerely loved in his entire life and what he felt for her showed in his eyes at that moment. "You're a good girl, Janie. I don't think you'll ever be sorry that you listened to me."

"I'm sure I won't, dear. Good night."

She watched him walk back toward the hotel. There was more spring in his step than there had been since she had broken with Richard. She knew what he was thinking, what he was hoping. With Van out of the picture there was no reason why Richard should not return. Why couldn't he realize that none of the Bronsons would knowingly accept Clyde Lansing's daughter in the family?

She walked into the dainty little sitting room of the cottage and picked up the phone. "I want to speak to Mr. Slater, please."

It was a few minutes before she heard his voice on the phone. "Yes, Jane?"

"I have to see you, Van. Can you leave there?"

"Not now. Aren't you coming over?"

"There's something I must speak to you about."

"Could it wait a little while? A flock of people I know from New York are having dinner with me. I can't leave till we're finished unless it's very important."

"When could you leave, Van?"

"Why, I don't know exactly. Jane, why don't you come over here and——"

"No, I don't feel like coming over. Could you get away at 10 o'clock or so?"

"Sure, 10 o'clock would be fine."

"All right, Van. I'll meet you at your house at 10 o'clock."

"At my house? Jane, I think——"

"Please be there, Van. I want to speak to you alone."

Collie and Jerry had their dinner at one of the smaller hotels and shop talk carried them pleasantly enough thru the hour. The pure cussedness of horses and riders might have kept them occupied thruout the evening except that Jerry Oliver seemed to become bored with the subject on the way to the theater and his answers deteriorated into mere grunts. Collie was glad that there were such things as movies. One didn't have to make conversation in the theater.

But Jerry Oliver proved to be an unenthusiastic audience. From the beginning Collie saw that he was not going to become lost in the picture and permit the evening to slide quietly by. As soon as they were seated he complained bitterly that the theater was far too warm. For a half hour he squirmed about annoying the patrons in surrounding seats. Collie glanced at him and he swore roundly because there was not enough room for his legs. Unluckily the picture was a slow moving drama that added nothing to Jerry's enjoyment. Moreover, they had arrived in the middle and he would not make the effort to pick up the thread of the story. Collie wished he would find a way to get comfortable and go to sleep but there was no hope of that.

At last the picture reached its final closeup and Oliver signified his satisfaction. A newsreel, an animated cartoon, and a sports short followed and for these he brightened considerably. Collie had hopes that all might still be well but they were dispelled when the title of the feature picture flashed upon the screen once more.

"Do you have to see how it starts?" he demanded.

"Not if you don't want to. There's no law about it."

"Let's go then. Do you mind?"

They walked out of the theater Collie wondering if this meant that the evening was over. There was a faint ray of encouragement in the thought that surely he had not enjoyed being with her. Why should he wish to prolong their time together?

But as he helped her into the car she saw that he was determined to make it a full evening. "Let's take a ride," he said.

"O, I don't know, Jerry. It's getting on and——"

"You'd have stayed to see the picture," he said. "What's the difference whether you're in there or driving?"

"I suppose there isn't any difference," she admitted.

"Well, then—" He walked around the car and got into the driver's seat. "It was as hot as hell in there. A breath of cool air will be welcome."

He turned the car around and headed for the mountain road. Collie looked at his lean, unsmiling face and thought of the women in the hotel who came to the stables just to ride with him. They were welcome to this strong, silent specimen of manhood. He was handsome, of course, in that rugged outdoor way so dear to the hearts of eastern ladies. They could have him. She cast about in her mind for a subject of conversation. The silence was becoming heavy and oppressive. She could speak of Beaver Trail's lameness but she was holding that in reserve for a moment when there was absolutely nothing else to say.

They had driven into the desolate area beyond the town by now and she was struck for the thousandth time by the wild, frightening solitude of this forgotten land so close to a gay and glittering resort. Well, there was that she could say to Jerry Oliver. That might make a moment's conversation.

"Doesn't this bleakness——" she began.

He interrupted her without even knowing that he had done so. There were things on his mind and the moment had come to unburden himself. "I'm awfully glad," he said, "that you decided to split up with Slater."

She was well aware that this was no impersonal remark but she chose to treat it as such. "O, we discussed him long ago, Jerry. You don't want him to come to the stables and he doesn't come, so why bother about him?"

"Because he was coming to your house. I know he was. You needn't deny it."

She laughed lightly. "Deny it? Why should I? He parked the only car of its kind in town right in front of my house and walked in the front door."

"Why did you want him, Collie? What's wrong with me?"

BOOK NEWS AND REVIEWS

THE LITERARY SPOTLIGHT

by Fanny Butcher

CHICAGO has recently welcomed home two of its former literary figures . . . and one of our outstanding novelists welcomed them both almost simultaneously as house guests. . . . At Janet Ayer Fairbank's Sigrid Schultz and Ellen Du Poy Daniel met for the first time. . . . Altho both of them spent the largest share of their lives in Europe, they had not known one another. . . . Sigrid Schultz was here lecturing, and exciting as her talk was about "Germany Will Try It Again," the most exciting part of the morning that she appeared at the Woman's Athletic club was the question period. . . . She has a quick wit when questions are hurled at her. . . . When some one asked whether the guilty Nazi leaders might not be exiled on an island like Napoleon, perhaps one of the channel islands, she said, "O, the climate there is much too good."

Miss Schultz has entirely recovered from the unhappy bout with typhus which she had when she first left Germany. . . . She got it not in Germany, but in Spain as she was coming home. . . . She says that she can remember the exact moment that the insect bit her. . . . It's those "ugly, creepin', blastit wonners, detested, shunn'd by saunt an' sinner" that Robert Burns gave the dignity of poetry to, but which a nonpoet calls merely lice, that carry typhus, and Miss Schultz's attacker did a devastating job on her.

But that's all over now, finally, and she is looking her usual interesting self again. . . . She has the soft blonde hair of her Norwegian-American father, and blue eyes, and a gentle smile that belies the tremendous courage which is in her small body. . . . For it took more than most of us would have to do her job as newspaper correspondent in Berlin after the Nazis came to power—she was head of The Chicago Tribune Central European bureau—for she had been an ardent protagonist for the ill-fated republic and as ardent a denouncer of Hitler. . . . Her book, "Germany Will Try It Again," is opening many Americans' eyes and giving them a lot to worry about.

A Lost Manuscript.

Mrs. John Franklin Daniel, whom we knew as Ellen Du Poy, has, like Sigrid Schultz, spent many years in Europe. . . . She lived in Paris in the heydays between the two wars, knew every one there, was a great friend of Gertrude Stein and William Bradley. . . . He was a liaison agent between French and American writers and publishers. . . . She lived the typical life of the American writer in Paris, but her good South Dakota blood, which drives so many adventurous souls to far places, gave even more itch to her feet. . . . She went to Greece just to see what it was like and stayed six years.

She learned to speak modern Greek fluently, traveled among the islands, met there her future husband, who is an archaeologist. . . . As a captain in the American army, he is now somewhere in the British Near East service as liaison officer. . . . Before the war he was on the staff of the University of Pennsylvania. . . . She is visiting Chicago for the first time in over two years. . . . She is at work on a novel with Greece as a locale. . . . She had the unfortunate experience of losing the complete MS. of her last novel. . . . It was posted in France and it never arrived in America. . . . It was just as undramatic, but as fatal as that. . . . She never had a clew to its whereabouts.

Garbage Man's Novel.

Trying to write reminds me of a story which Martha Foley, editor of "The Best Short Stories" annuals since the death of Edward J. O'Brien, tells about her little boy. . . . "We've lived what I suppose you can hardly help calling a literary life so long that one day when my son was three years old or so and having a talk with the garbage man, he made conversation by asking politely, 'And how is your novel coming along?'" . . . Miss Foley adds that the garbage man said that he threw them out, he didn't write them. . . . The other half of that adult literary life was her husband, Whit Burnett . . . together they were editing Story magazine.

BLUE RIBBON FICTION

A Novel by VINA DELMAR

(Copyright: 1944: By Vina Delmar.)

INSTALMENT VIII.

CONNIE glanced at the boy riding beside her. Richard did not suspect that Jane had wanted Van all along. But there was still a piece missing. Jane had been in love with Van, so at the signal from him she had dropped Richard. Van had been rejected by the woman he wanted to marry, so he had taken up quickly with a pretty, young girl in order to forget. That would be simple to understand if the girl had not been Jane. Try as she might Collie could not picture Van Slater acting with careless cruelty. She could believe that if he loved Jane he would go to any lengths to take her, but he did not love Jane and certainly he would not hurt Richard when another pretty girl would have served his purpose just as well. Yes, there were still some details missing.

"My parents want to leave here," the boy declared. "They see what's happening and they want to get me away. But I'm not going. I'm going to stay right here as long as Jane does. You can't tell, Mrs. Moreland; she might change her mind again."

"Sure, Richard, it's worth the chance." She reached out and patted his arm. She knew a little something of how he felt.

"Jane's father spoke to me. He's just as amazed and depressed as I am. He can't figure it. He keeps hoping that she'll get back on the beam again."

"He could be right, Richard. It could be just an infatuation."

"I hope it is only that." Collie's soft heart was touched by the boy's simple willingness to welcome Jane back if she ever should turn toward him again.

"Now how about getting these animals out for a walk? Ginger Bites isn't accustomed to being treated like a school horse."

Their mounts came to life at the signal and Collie and Richard streaked across the sands, Collie wondering that the horses could carry the weight of their riders' hearts.

The days that followed Van Slater's proposal to Jane were among the unhappiest in his life. The unreality of them, the feeling of moving thru a confused and noisy dream made him hate everything that had gone to build up this inescapable nightmare. He found himself blinded with fury by Lansing's attitude toward him, Lansing who had created the whole miserable situation by living a life that could lead to nothing but distress and then getting ready to die just as he had stirred everybody else's life into an unpalatable mess. Van Slater was capable of sympathy and was deeply sorry for Jane and respectful of her gallantry but he was not sentimental. He had seen too much to place a halo about the head of a dying scoundrel. Death made no man a saint to Van Slater. It was Jane's courageous stand that kept him fuming silently in his contacts with Clyde Lansing. The first night after Jane had broken the news to her father was one Van would long remember.

He was in his office at the casino when the inside doorman told him that Mr. Lansing wished to see him. From the beginning Van had not liked the man but tonight he must forget that. His gesture to be worth its weight must include a camaraderie with the father Jane adored.

He walked to the door with a smile on his face. "Come right in, Mr. Lansing. Come in. Glad to see you." He saw at once that there was no answering smile on his visitor's face.

Van closed the door and Clyde Lansing came directly to the point. "My daughter tells me you have proposed marriage to her."

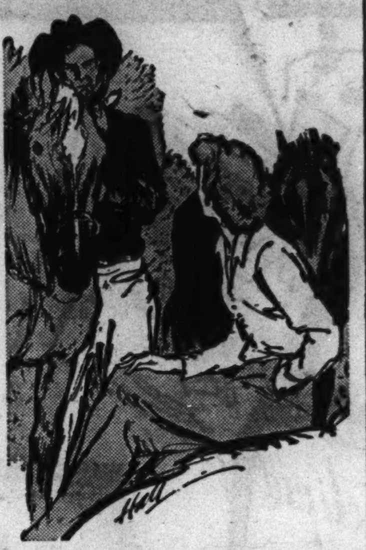
"That is true. Have you any objections?"

"Have I any objections? How can you ask a question like that? Of course I have objections."

Van picked up a pencil from his desk and turned it over and over in his long, slim fingers. It was easier to be calm if you gave your nerves something with which to occupy themselves. "What are your objections, Mr. Lansing?"

"They're so obvious that they must occur to you, Slater. First of all Jane is a young girl and she's dazzled by what she thinks she sees in you."

Lansing waved a deprecating hand toward the casino behind the closed door. "All this setup of yours no doubt is intriguing to Jane but it revolts me."



Collie had observed a definite change in Jerry Oliver's manner toward her.

Van clenched his jaws tightly together and said nothing. There was too much he could have said to the man who had made a living by selling "stocks of one sort or another." Out there at Slater's gambling tables there were no trusting widows or helpless orphans being offered a giltedged proposition on which they couldn't lose. The casino had only wealthy, worldly wise customers who hoped for nothing but a fair gamble. And Slater gave them a fair gamble which was more than Lansing's breed knew how to give.

"I believe, Slater, that if you could be convinced that Jane is only infatuated with you that——"

"Look, Mr. Lansing, Jane is out of her teens. She isn't a baby. She wants to marry me. Why don't you reconcile yourself to that and let's all be friends."

"I'll never reconcile myself to it, Slater. I want to go on record as disapproving this whole thing from start to finish."

O, you do. Slater was silent but his mind raced with the things he wanted to say.

"Look, Slater, there was a nice boy wanted to marry my daughter and she was in love with him till you moved in. Why don't you move out and let her alone?"

Slater looked coldly and levelly into Clyde Lansing's eyes but he was smiling. It wasn't hard to smile. It was easy when he stopped to think what he was taking from a man whom he detested, a man whose daughter he was marrying out of pure compassion.

"Mr. Lansing, you talk to Jane. My mind's made up but if she wants to change hers, that's all right, too."

"I'll change it for her." Lansing turned and stalked out of the office. Van sat a long while at his desk before he could bring himself to go out and mingle with the guests.

He lit a cigaret and promised himself that when it was finished he would go outside and be a perfect host and find a way to recapture the thrill he had known on the opening night of the casino. He had loved the place then. He had been proud of the elegance he had brought to that barren piece of ground. Now he did not know. There must certainly be a question when a man who had robbed the friendless and the ignorant could consider him an unworthy match.

He snuffed out his cigaret and strode from the office with long, impatient steps. A person could go crazy sitting alone regretting, wondering, doubting.

He would have been glad to have awakened on any brilliantly sunny morning and discovered that he did not own the Desert casino or hold in his hand the heart of a high spirited, dark eyed girl. He would have liked to awaken to a world in which he was a baker or a pharmacist or a grocer and had a date to call on Collie Moreland.

But every night he danced with Jane and felt her young body yearn toward him and he accepted with proper retorts the envious words of men who admired her beauty.

"How do you go about getting a girl like that, Van?"

"O, I just live right."

"I hear it's serious. Is that on the level?"

"Well, I proposed and I'm waiting for my answer."

Sometimes Van thought of the boy, Richard Bronson, but it was not pleasant to think of him. On some distant day, perhaps, Richard would know and understand what had happened. But now Van chilled when he considered what Richard must think of him.

Collie had observed a peculiar and very definite change in Jerry Oliver's manner toward her. It dated from the first night she had sat in her small cottage explaining to the children that Mr. Slater was too busy to visit them any more.

She had just delivered the last of her day's pupils safely into his governess' arms when Jerry walked over to her one bright, clear evening. He had the disarming grin on his face that he usually reserved for customers.

"What are you doing tonight, Collie?" he asked.

"The same thing I do every night. Feed my kids, put 'em to bed, and put myself to bed."

His grin widened. "You're in a rut. Couldn't you sort of climb out of it?"

"For what?"

"Well, there's a movie over at the Palace they say is good. I haven't had a chance to see it yet and I thought maybe——"

Collie shook her head. "There's no one to stay with my children."

"Who stays with 'em in the day time?"

"O, I have a girl for that but she can't stay on in the evening unless I've asked her specially in advance."

Jerry Oliver's face darkened. "I never heard of a servant like that," he said.

"What makes you think I can afford a servant? She's a young Indian woman who's married to one of the boys at the service station. She doesn't mind picking up the few dollars a week I give her but she has to be home to cook her husband's dinner."

"Seems to me that's quite a lot of words to just say no."

Collie was annoyed at his reception of her true statement of circumstances. "If I wanted to say no I'd just say it. I'll go to the

Milstein Soloist on Orchestra's Brahms' Program

17th Symphony Appearance of Noted Violinist

Nathan Milstein will make his 17th appearance with the Chicago Symphony orchestra when he plays the Brahms violin concerto in an all-Brahms program to be conducted by Désiré Defauw on Thursday night and Friday afternoon. Milstein has been a prime favorite with American audiences since his debut here in 1929, the year following that of his great friend, Vladimir Horowitz. The violinist first came to attention in his native Russia when he made a concert tour with Horowitz at the age of 19. The remainder of the Brahms program at Orchestra hall will consist of the "Academic Festival" overture and the Fourth symphony in E minor.

The only other concert to be played by the orchestra during the week will be the Saturday night "Pop" concert, at which time Mr. Defauw will conduct Beethoven's third "Leonore" overture, Schumann's "Rhenish" symphony, two Nocturnes of Debussy ["Clouds" and "Festivals"], and the suite from Stravinsky's "Fire Bird."

George A. Kuyper, who for the last six years has been associate business and advertising manager of the Boston Symphony orchestra, has been appointed manager of the Chicago Symphony orchestra to succeed the late Henry E. Voegeli. Mr. Kuyper is 45, a native of New Jersey, a graduate of Rutgers University and holds a master's degree from Harvard. He taught English literature at the University of Michigan for two years, leaving there to attend Boston University College of Business Administration. Later he accepted a post at New York university as a teaching fellow, also assuming educational administrative duties. He is the author of several grammars for the use of college students, has been active in Sunday school work and is chairman of a war garden committee in Newton, Mass.

BARITONE

Lawrence Tibbett, distinguished baritone, who appears in recital at Civic Opera house this afternoon at 3:30.

The program features Shostakovich's Fifth symphony and orchestral numbers also include Van Vactor's "Salute to Russia" and the Introduction and Procession from Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Golden Cockerel." Maria Kurenko will be the soprano soloist, singing songs by Rimsky-Korsakoff, Stravinsky, Gretchaninoff, and Dargomijsky.

"Don't Go to Strangers" Department, Todd Innovation

AMONG other innovations, Michael ["Something for the Boys"] Todd has brought to the theater the "Don't Go to Strangers" department. It is unique, helpful, and friendly, and sometimes it works. It exists in the ramifications of his Broadway lair, to take care of people who have to be taken care of. If, for instance, you want to go to "Oklahoma!" in a hurry, or even to Mr. Todd's flourishing "Mexican Hayride," or if perhaps you want to locate a bathing cap in a suddenly rubberless world, you get in touch with Mr. Todd. If you achieve that minor miracle, he puts the bee on his "Don't Go to Strangers" department.

He did just that not so long ago when his friend Merlin Aylesworth wanted tickets for "Mexican Hayride." Came the festive night, with Mr. Todd just darting out of the Winter Garden to catch a plane, when he saw the Aylesworths, all dressed up, being turned away, and pretty mad about it, too, because something had slipped and there weren't any tickets. The house was sold out, of course, and despite his first name, Mr. Aylesworth is no magician. But Mr. Todd is a bit of one, in his own nonunion style. He hasn't been in show business very long, and he doesn't know all the rules. Blissfully unaware of smashing tradition to bits, he charged over to the door and when a couple came in with a pair of good seats he made them an offer. He said if they would sell him those tickets he would give them as good or better seats, free, the next week. They were out of towners who regarded him as mildly mad, but had to go that night or never. The next couple with luxurious seating arrangements were more amenable, but also more suspicious. They kept saying, "All right, all right, but what's the catch?" Anyway, Mr. Todd got the tickets, escorted the astonished Aylesworths to down front seats on the aisle, and, having rehabilitated the tottering "Don't Go to Strangers" department, caught his plane.

approximate cost of staging a new musical, he is having erected over the Winter Garden the biggest electric sign in the history of a business not exactly noted for its lack of expansive gestures. For this block long lure to showgoing, Varga has achieved a dream girl 175 feet tall, who is being leered at by an outsize Bobby Clark. Nothing more, no "Mexican Hayride," no Winter Garden, no Michael Todd presents, nothing.

It was a shock to the contractor. Halfway out of the room, he turned and said, with mild inquisitiveness, "What, no name?" "No," said Mr. Todd, "no name." At the door, he turned again, "Whaddaya mean, no name?" "No name," said Mr. Todd, now a trifle ruffled. Halfway down the hall, the man returned, screaming in profane disbelief the equivalent of "What! No name?" Mr. Todd, not a bad screamer himself, rose to the occasion. There is no name on the Varga sign, tho I still think Mr. Todd might compromise with a cigar down in one corner, a half smoked cigar, trailing electric sparks. Any one in show business would recognize that signature.

Stogies and New Productions.

Considering the success of "Mexican Hayride," and Mr. Todd, who put his own money in it, still shudders at what might have happened had it flopped, that would be one of his luxurious cigars. One of the kind that carries its foil wrapped house on its back. This happens after shows are a hit. Beforehand, when he is debating a new show, he smokes two for a nickel stogies. They make him feel conservative, tho you never would suspect it from the shows.

Just now the stogies are being squandered on two probable productions, and one just floating about in the ether where producers juggle the pretty bubbles of what might happen. First of the probables, almost a certainty, is Mae West in her own play, "Catherine Was Great," a lavish costume piece Mr. Todd intends to open at the Geary in San Francisco late this month and to bring to Chicago in the spring, perhaps to the Civic Opera house. Next is a kind of fairy tale, tentatively called "Cabbages and Kings," with a score by Alec Templeton. Todd has always wanted to stage a fairy tale, and when you hear that he tried to revive "The Merry Widow" with Jeanette MacDonald and Vertes décor, you think maybe some one ought to let him try. The third show is that Victor Herbert musical based on what he swears is a newly discovered score, for which he hopes to persuade Edna Ferber to do the book.

Mr. Todd wanted to buy our Blackstone theater and put "Something for the Boys" in for a run, but the deal fell thru. All producers eyeing Chicago with a big show nowadays are between the booking devil and the deep blue sea, the devil being no theater at all, the deep blue sea the threat of a watery grave should the show flop in the vastness of the opera house. He might, of course, make a try for the abandoned Majestic, if he felt in the mood. Hollywood has credited him with trying to outdo Billy Rose with the double "Jumbo" of buying Ringling's circus.

Even Rumor Is Big Business.

Even the rumor of such a transaction is big business for a man who only a few years back was operating a north side theater restaurant, offering youngsters Gypsy Rose Lee, the redoubtable A. Robins, and food for about $5 a couple. Things have happened in the meantime. Things like "The Hot Mikado," "Star and Garter," "Something for the Boys," and "Mexican Hayride." Things like fantastic Hollywood offers, and like the framed blowup in a producer's private dining room of the caustic column Elsa Maxwell wrote about Todd—or, perhaps, as they used to say about Clare Luce's "The Women," scratched out with her fingernails.

But he hasn't changed. He still has what he hopes is a reciprocal passion for giving the public its money's worth, and he still is proud of that theater restaurant most of Chicago has forgotten. "Say," he demands reproachfully, "don't you remember me from the saloon?"

Two Discharged Veterans Play Soldiers in Film

Hollywood—Two actors recently discharged from the army on reaching the age limit of 38, couldn't evade reveille. Producer Samuel Goldwyn promptly hired both Elisha Cook Jr. and Lyle Talbot for soldier roles in his Danny Kaye filmusical of army life, "Up in Arms."

SAN JOSE (AMORC) CALIFORNIA

Given U. of I. in Memory of James S. Ewing

By the Rev. John Evans.

The Ewing Balinese art collection, accepted by the board of trustees of the University of Illinois, preserves notable specimens of oriental culture threatened with extinction by Japanese domination.

The gift was made by Mr. and Mrs. Spencer Ewing of Bloomington, Ill., and other members of the family to the university's college of fine and applied arts as a memorial to James S. Ewing, former United States minister to Belgium, and his wife, Katherine Ewing. The collection is displayed in the architecture building on the campus, and includes art objects from India, Thailand, China, Mexico and Netherland East Indies.

Among interesting exhibits are the Balineses krisses, handmade daggers of wood with jeweled hilts of gold laminated on silver, richly sculptured and set with diamonds and sapphires. China is represented with porcelains from the Sung and Ming dynasties.

9 Sections—a $9 Value All for only $1.00

Anyone who has learned to write, can learn to draw! This helpful book removes the mysticism that has surrounded art. By reducing the elements of drawing to its simple steps, it teaches THE BEGINNER to draw, and then takes him by easy, clearly illustrated instructions, into more advanced subjects.

As you can see from the above illustrations showing the 9 sections—this complete course covers 9 BRANCHES OF PRACTICAL ART. Each division is explained by a specialist. No previous knowledge on your part is expected or taken for granted. Within a few days you will be drawing with an ease and enjoyment you never thought possible. For the professional artist, it is a REFERENCE BOOK and veritable mine of information.

This book guides you from the first stroke on paper to selling the finished art work. Includes specific instruction, advice, tricks, time-savers, special effects, on: Still Life, Animals, Anatomy, Human Figure, Faces and Portraits, Lettering, Advertising Layouts, Cartooning, Animated Cartooning, Advertising and Commercial Art, Illustrations for Newspapers, Magazines, Books, Book Jackets, The Use of Color, etc. Teaches you by sketches, diagrams and instructions, how to draw:—hands, feet, heads, bodies, ears, noses, mouths, eyes—in different positions, of different sexes and ages, and with different perspectives. Shows you how to attain and indicate:—action, proportion, balance, composition, shading, rhythm, symmetry; and how to express—laughter, anger, terror, grief, surprise, and other emotions. Also how to draw caricatures, cartoons and comic drawings. Also how to letter, with 37 COMPLETE ALPHABETS shown. And how to illustrate and draw advertisements, etc. Includes a glossary of Art Terms, Supplies, Use of Supplies, Types of Work, Mediums, etc. Completely and profusely illustrated with over ONE THOUSAND Instructive and Example Drawings, Sketches and Pictures.

Grace Moore says:
YOU'RE ONLY HUMAN ONCE

ONCE she was yanked off a circus elephant by her outraged father, who covered her face with a handkerchief so the townspeople wouldn't see her "shame" . . . the same townspeople who later erected a sign: "Jellico, Tennessee—birthplace of Grace Moore."

ONCE she made her debut at the Metropolitan Opera House with quivering voice . . . and slipping garters . . . but both were adjusted in time for the twelve curtain calls that followed her singing of "Mimi."

ONCE she almost missed a distinguished reception when Charlie MacArthur locked her in the men's room . . . but there were command performances she didn't miss—before kings.

ONCE you get started on Grace Moore's sparkling autobiography, you'll follow the revealing memoirs of this fabulous American prima donna with delighted interest. She tells offstage as well as onstage anecdotes on herself and on others with saucy humor. Don't miss her book.

Love's Effect Described by Three Authors

"AGAIN IN OCTOBER," by Lillian Van Ness. [Doubleday, Doran, $2.50.]

"AMY FERRABY'S DAUGHTER," by Elizabeth Ford. [Coward-McCann, $2.50.]

"O WESTERN WIND," by Honor Croome. [Putnam, $2.50.]

Reviewed by Kenneth Horan.

Personality plus motivated these three short stories of what love can do to good intentions.

A careful study of the female of the species makes "Again in October" an important story, for it is a day by day account of a marriage that went on the rocks because of a woman's possessiveness. It is good reading—as are all three of these books—but it seems a little remote from present significant things, unless we remember that the world is a reflection of the separate persons who make up its population.

Anyhow, the Augusta in this story adored her husband, and expected him to be perfect, and he wasn't—with disastrous results. From the perspective of later life, when her son is married, Augusta sees the mistakes of her own past, and wishes she'd been a little smarter. This temper of mind, a composite of experience and of longing, brings about a happy ending, despite the fact that Augusta's husband had strayed afar. If you enjoy love among the ruins, here it is.

"Amy Ferraby's Daughter," on the other hand, is a Victorian tour de force. Buchanan is President, and Caroline Ferraby's parents are wealthy and cultured. Democracy is supposed to exist in her world, but there are no signs of it in the life of luxury and magnificence to which she falls heir. An unhappy love affair, conducted on traditions of prestige and custom, is her only real problem. Her story is an absolutely perfect period piece, with all the manners, modes, and environments that made the gay nineties the culmination of elaborate antecedents.

As new as yesterday is "O Western Wind," about four English girls who came to America during the blitz. Forced to meet new conditions, they try to adapt themselves and their children to a country which hasn't actually felt the war as yet. Their reactions are eloquent, their story highly readable.

Brave Tale of Fight Against Blindness Told

"I WANTED TO SEE," by Borghild Dahl. [Macmillan, $2.]

Reviewed by Walter Simmons.

This is the story of a woman's courageous, lifelong fight against blindness. An infection in babyhood destroyed one of Borghild Dahl's eyes and left the other so densely scarred she could see only thru a tiny slit, and even then had to strain the eye obliquely toward the left.

When the little girl went to school an unkind teacher remarked: "This isn't a school for the blind." And the other children chanted: "Look, kids! Look what's come to school!" But the youngster wasn't discouraged. She went thru grade school, high school, and college. After teaching in numerous small towns she took a master's degree at Columbia university and won a fellowship for study in Norway. Then she taught in a college for 13 years before a cataract finally closed off her shadow world altogether.

How Miss Dahl's gallant spirit finally won thru what to others would have been a morass of despond is a story to inspire thousands afflicted with deficient eyesight. Touchingly and honestly written, this is a book of fine faith and sometimes a pathos almost unendurable.

BOOKMAN'S HOLIDAY

By Charles Collins.

JOHN G. NEIHARDT, the poet who has been appointed director of the department of information of the office of Indian affairs in Chicago, stated his qualifications for the job long before he had any idea of accepting it. See his contribution to "Twentieth Century Authors":

"I conceived the idea [1911] of devoting the rest of my life to an epic cycle of the west, to consist of five book length narrative poems dealing with the entire trans-Missouri country from 1882 to 1890, when the battle of Wounded Knee marked the end of Indian resistance on the plains. My life in northwestern Kansas, my discovery of the Missouri river at the age of six, and my intimate contact with old-timers, both white and Indian, were responsible for my compelling desire to do this work. I have been too well acquainted with Indians since 1900 to regard them as romantic curiosities and never sought them for 'local color.' . . . The result of my long contact with Indians, especially the Sioux, will be found in my 'Black Elk Speaks,' which, for the first time, sets forth the inner world of an Indian 'holy man.'"

Admirers of the excellent books for boys written by the late Ralph Henry Barbour find slim pickings when they try to refresh their memories by consulting biographical works of reference. "Twentieth Century Authors" omits him. "Who's Who" gives him only seven lines, apparently because of his own modesty. "American Authors and Books" is brief enough, but more informative. Barbour apparently cited for entry in this publication the titles of his books for adults: "The Land of Joy," 1903; "The Lilac Girl," 1909; "The Turner Twins," 1922, and "Phyllis in Bohemia," 1897. The latter was written under a pen name, Richard Stillman Powell, in collaboration with Luther H. Bickford, who was for a few years early in this century associate editor of the Chicago Inter Ocean.

The activities of the Boswell club of Chicago have come to the attention of The Club of London, which descends from the 18th century circle of which Dr. Samuel Johnson was the Great Cham. A letter from Hugh Cecil [Lord Quickswood] to Rousseau Van Voorhies, secretary of the Boswell club, says:

"The Club still meets about once a month except in holiday season, but during the war it has been found better that its meetings should be at luncheon than at dinner, as formerly, because of the black-out. The meetings have still the old character of a social meal varied by conversation among the members. There are no formal speeches, but conversation according to the tradition of The Club at its beginning."

The Club of London has the traditional 40 members. [Remember the Forty Club of Chicago?] The roster contains Charles Oman and George Macauley Trevelyan, veteran historians; Desmond McCarthy, journalist and critic; T. S. Eliot, poet, and Max Beerbohm, often called "the inimitable," in addition to numerous knights and lords, and two archbishops.

It is time for somebody to demand the reformation or abolition of the booze-and-bawds school of "mystery" fiction. If no steps are taken in this direction, we intend to swear off reading them. The trend is distinctly American and may be traced to the influence of Dashiell Hammett. It has attained dreadful proportions, and deserves sentence to the Socratean cup of hemlock for corrupting the youth of the land. . . . As we wrote this paragraph over our shoulder came the voice of a publisher's representative, talking shop with the book editor: "Any mystery story will sell at least 4,000 copies."

The authors of such alcoholic and lecherous fantasies should be given a slush detector test before acquiring a franchise to write. When a manuscript is completed its inventor should be compelled to drink as much ardent spirits in 24 hours as he has poured down his detective's throat in the same time. That would be equivalent to a death sentence.

Our latest experience with this form of dementia Americana was "The Lady in the Morgue," by Jonathan Latimer, first issued in 1936 and now available as a paperback. It deals with the Chicago scene and gives the right names to places.

Historic Ties Link Russia, U. S.

"RUSSIA AND THE UNITED STATES," by Pitirim A. Sorokin. [Dutton, $3.]

"THE ROAD TO TEHERAN," by Foster Rhea Dulles. [Princeton University Press, $2.50.]

Reviewed by Paul Engle.

These books have one thing in common—an effort to show that the past history of both the United States and Russia has been one of common interest. The period since the rise of the soviet has been the first exception to this general condition. Both books suggest that the period of that exception is past.

Sorokin's is the more formidable and intellectual account. He traces the relationships and similarities between various cultural institutions, such as the church, social organizations, the arts, crime, moral standards, etc., in Russia under the czars and America up to the present.

His case here is difficult to criticize because he has access to a bulk of facts about such things as the hierarchy of the Russian Orthodox church and the criminal legislation of 19th century Russia which an American can hardly refute. But one does have the feeling that the first part of the book, when Sorokin is trying to prove that Americans and Russians have been traditionally very much alike, is made up to a large degree of large generalization with too little actual fact, especially about America.

The last portion of Sorokin's book is obviously a summing up of his sociological, theoretical views on war and its causes which he has expounded at length elsewhere. He makes no effort to integrate it to the first part of the book, and the result is that it dangles in space, and actually diminishes the impact of his earlier argument. Why could he not have used the formulation of the causes of war and peace which he makes at the end for some direct pronouncement on the United States and Russia, the stated subject of the book? He hardly mentions the two countries at the end. The rest of the book is of considerable factual interest.

"The Road to Teheran" begins with the impatient waiting, for two years after 1781, of the American representative, Francis Dana, in St. Petersburg. It traces the gradual recognition of the new country by Russia [delayed even longer than the later recognition of the soviet in this century] and the harmony of foreign policy between the two countries all thru the 19th century.

The book is a fluently written and, on the whole, very dispassionate report of the constant similarity of interest between Russia and the United States.

Neither book acknowledges the single great problem of dealing with a country whose government is rigid, prolonged, and absolute.

Jimmy Dorsey Delighting Hotel Sherman Patrons

Bonnie Baker Now Starring at the Stevens

By Will Davidson.

They've reinstalled that swinging Dorsey in the Hotel Sherman's College Inn. Business, thank you, is brisk.

Bonnie Baker. [Kollar Photo.]

If you've ever been within 10 feet of a juke box you know all about the Jimmy Dorsey music, so there is little need of repeating the eminently well known fact that it is delicious. It might be pertinent, however, to indicate briefly a few of the reasons for its general appeal.

One can be found in the title of Jimmy's theme song, "Contrast." When the Dorsey boys put "Shoo Shoo Baby" on their racks the result is a jitterbug's delight. When "Besame Mucho" is the selection the same melting music is poured into a softer mold.

Another Dorsey talent is in selection of musicians and singers. He lost Bob Eberle, but he came up with Paul Carley, who is doing quite nicely with the moody sort of songs such as "My First Love," and the above mentioned Latin hit. Jimmy found Gladys Tell out of a job when the army took Johnny Messner, and now she is doing "Shoo Shoo Baby" to the delight of the saddle shoe babies.

All in all, Jimmy has maintained his musical excellence despite present conditions. Take a peek at the College Inn [Panther room, if you prefer] any night.

While you're peeking, incidentally, you'll probably see the College Inn models performing in the new "Play As You Go" skit. They are beautiful gals. Gene Cedric continues with the hot intermission music.

"O, Bonnie!" is the theme at the Stevens now. The little Baker girl, who sings with her eyes, is the star of the current show in the Boulevard room, where Bernie Cummins and his music hold forth.

Little Bonnie rode to sudden fame on the way she sang "O, Johnny!" with Orrin Tucker's band, but Little Bonnie had been preparing for success for quite a time. She was unique among singers. Her voice was as small as her stature, shy and childlike. But it was a very sure voice and Bonnie knew exactly what to do with it. Her presentation consisted of almost complete immobility—the exception being those bright, shining eyes. It was unusual, personal, natural. It became a trademark.

In a way that was unfortunate, because every one wants to widen his horizons, and when Bonnie set out upon her own she attempted to break with the past, to some extent, at least. Now she wears her hair in a much more exotic way, and has altered her singing style infinitesimally to match it.

The result is that everybody still calls for "O, Johnny" and "Especially for You" and all the old Baker specialties, and poor little Bonnie finds herself right back where she was, except for the coiffure.

Bernie Cummins fills out the show with some of his orchestral novelties, and he, brother Walt, and Jeanne Bennett, very pretty and an excellent singer, give with vocals that are much on the credit side.

Friday's the night the Chez Paree opens its new show, but the latest word is that Benny Fields will not be in the cast, a movie assignment delaying his arrival for an as yet undetermined time. At this writing the Chez is looking for Jackie Miles, Cross and Dunn or some one to sub for him. At least they are sure of Hal Le Roy, the Murtah sisters, the Hudson Wonders [I almost said Rawlison], two girl acrobats, and Gay Claridge's band.

Boswelling the Bistros:

As a first birthday celebration the Sarong room has opened its new cocktail lounge on the second floor, where informal, late entertainment will be the order of the night. The dinner shows and food service continue in the third floor Sarong nook. . . . It is good to hear that Hermann Leopold, Viennese satirist, is clicking at the Blackhawk. He is a delightful entertainer and I'm glad that the loop crowds enjoy his unusual offerings. That "I Am a Quiet Drinker" song is a special favorite. The Three Billetta girls, whirlwind dancers, are adding flash to the Blackhawk revue.

A bow to George Tapps for the courage and the ability to dance that moving and beautiful "Ave Maria" at the Rio Cabana. George has long wanted to do this number, but wisely has made his preparations carefully. It is an inspirational achievement. I strongly doubt, however, the wisdom of presenting it regularly in a night club. George had the opening night crowd completely at attention and possibly he could do it regularly; but one garrulously inattentive table might prove disastrous. This dance should be presented again and again, but as a concert number. It is rather a letdown to have it followed by a wiggling line of rhumba girls.

Formula for a small band—saxophone, half dozen of the other.

Eight Movies on Best List for February

FEBRUARY'S BEST MOVIES.

"No Time for Love"
"Hands Across the Border"
"Over the Wall" "Desert Song"
"None Shall Escape"
"The Cross of Lorraine"
"Gung Ho" "Woman of the Town"

By Mae Tinee.

Good Morning!

Harking back this morning over February's "bests" we find that:

"No Time for Love" [with Claudette Colbert and Fred MacMurray] "is rough and tumble farce comedy . . . ingratiatingly played. . . . Abounds in laughs of the stomach variety. . . ."

"Hands Across the Border" [with Roy Rogers and Trigger] "has scenery that fairly pulls the breath out of your body, music you love to hear . . . one of the most thrilling races you ever saw in which horses being trained for the army give a demonstration . . . you'll be downright intrigued with the whole sparkling production. . . ."

"Over the Wall" [with Dane Clark and Tom Tully] is a short "that rates a review all by itself. . . . The moving, suspenseful, and powerfully acted story is about a prodigal and a priest. . . ."

"Desert Song" [with Dennis Morgan and Irene Manning] was, "viewed from any angle, a thrilling and beautiful screen achievement."

"None Shall Escape" [with Alexander Knox, Marsha Hunt, and Richard Crane] "has some highly dramatic sequences. . . ." A "best" because of acting and an unusual angle—that of a possible international tribunal after the war.

"The Cross of Lorraine" [with Jean Pierre Aumont, Gene Kelly, Richard Whorf] "is based on the novel, 'A Thousand Shall Fall,' but named in honor of Gen. De Gaulle and his Fighting French troops, whose emblem is the cross of Lorraine . . . brutal, terrifying, and convincing. . . ."

"Gung Ho" [with Randolph Scott, J. Carroll Naish, Noah Beery Jr.] "is a dramatization of America's first offensive on Makin Island . . . wonderful picture. It takes guts to even play act in a production like this. . . ."

"Woman of the Town" [with Claudette Colbert and Albert Dekker] is the screen biography of William Barclay [Bat] Masterson. . . . "Melodramatic border romance is tempestuous and engrossing. . . . It is also beautifully acted. . . ."

See you tomorrow.

Quick Study.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—Loretta Young, who can't play a note on the piano, nevertheless managed to learn a Chopin waltz by ear in less than a week for a dramatic scene in "And Now Tomorrow."

AMONG THE AUTHORS

By Frederic Babcock.

IT has been a long time since Chicago was referred to as the literary capital of America, but enough writers and publishers are circulating among us these days to give our city the idea that some day it may be able to reclaim the distinction once conferred upon it by H. L. Mencken.

Rockwell Kent, artist, traveler, and author, was the guest of honor at a luncheon given at the Bismarck Friday by the Society of Typographic Arts and the Art Directors' Club of Chicago. . . . Senora Isabel de Palencia, peace worker, former Spanish minister to Sweden, and author of "I Must Have Liberty," will talk over W-G-N at 1:15 p. m. March 19 and at Evanston March 21. . . . Elizabeth Janeway, whose first novel, "The Walsh Girls," has been getting its share of the spotlight, landed here Thursday with her husband, Eliot, for a week-end stay. . . . She related that it took her seven years to write the first one and that, profiting by what the critics said about it, she hopes to write more decisively in her next one.

Theodore Maynard is coming to town to spend two months at Columbus hospital while writing the first complete life story of Mother Cabrini.

Charles Jackson, whose "The Lost Weekend" is a best seller in Chicago, blew in last week with Richard G. May of Farrar & Rinehart. . . . Once a book salesman for A. Kroch, Mr. Jackson now divides his time between teaching at New York university and writing a day time radio serial, "Sweet River." . . . It took him a year to do his story of a binger.

Samuel Rapport arrived in search of authors. . . . After collaborating with Harlow Shapley and Helen Wright on "A Treasury of Science," and serving for years as advertising manager of Harper & Brothers, Mr. Rapport last Wednesday took over the entire supervision—both editorial and advertising—of the trade week-end binge and its effect on the book department of D. Appleton-Century. . . . Another arrival was James F. Heidelberger of E. P. Dutton & Co., bringing with him the story of the passing of John Macrae Sr., head of the Dutton firm.

Still another personage among the arrivals was Maj. Peter W. Rainier, whose "Pipeline to Battle" is reviewed in this issue. . . . This is the major's third book; his others were "My Vanished Africa" and "Green Fire," the latter dealing with emerald mining in Colombia. . . . An engineer by vocation but a traveler by avocation, he was mixed up in the North African campaign for three years beginning in June, 1940. . . . From Chicago he was headed for the Pacific northwest, where he hoped to see Mount Rainier, named for his great-great-grandfather.

This column is supposed to be devoted to professional writers, but at a luncheon last Monday I gathered enough material for a dozen columns about the work of five Chicago amateurs. . . . The occasion was the awarding of war bonds as prizes for the best essays, by high school students, on the advantages of being educated in democratic America, as opposed to Nazi-controled Germany. . . . Sponsored by the Chicago Round Table of the National Conference of Christians and Jews, the contest produced a large number of amazingly good essays. [How do I know? I was lucky enough to serve as one of the judges!] . . . In an eloquent talk Paul McGrath, star of "Tomorrow the World," related that the prize winning entries were "remarkable not so much for their literary excellence—altho all have that—but for what they have said. All show a clear understanding of the meaning of democracy." . . . As Mr. McGrath further remarked, "three of the five winning writers would have been slain, enslaved, or sterilized under the Nazi system."

Frank Novel Depicts Race Animosities

"STRANGE FRUIT," by Lillian Smith. [Reynal & Hitchcock, $2.75.]

Reviewed by Edw. Wagenknecht.

There have been other novels of miscegenation. "Strange Fruit" is not a story of miscegenation. It is the story of this white boy who loved this Negro girl. We conceal human realities behind words—"man power," "Jap," "saturation bombing"—until no wholesome nakedness shows thru.

In words, like weeds, I'll wrap me o'er,
Like coarsest clothes
against the cold.

Lillian Smith.

"Strange Fruit" is a book which shocks us, for a moment, into awareness, and as such it is excellent.

Personally I regret that it does not finish as the kind of book it seems to start out to be. Instead, it turns into another kind of book altogether. Ceasing to explore the relationship between Tracy and Nonnie, it concentrates instead on the social consequences of that relationship.

These consequences develop in the conventional novel patterns. Tracy, somewhat improbably, turns his back on Nonnie and decides to become respectable. Her brother kills him and gets away, and suspicion falls instead upon a rascally but innocent Negro whom a mob proceeds to burn at the stake.

The book is written in the modern idiom. It has been influenced by "stream of consciousness," tho it is not fully a "stream of consciousness" book. The style is distinctly impressionistic, as penetrating, at its best, as the finest modern verse. Miss Smith treats her subject comprehensively; toward the end, too comprehensively, indeed; the poignancy of the personal situation is lost in the town's-eye view.

Incidentally, I recall no book by a woman writer whose sexual frankness quite equals that of "Strange Fruit." A distinguished British novelist was rightly disgusted not long ago when she was accused of having a learned brother. Miss Smith must not be too much surprised if some readers accuse her of having a dirty one.

Brisk Memoirs of Grace Moore

was decorated by the royal still holding thrones.

But the nicest present of all was the one she received in Copenhagen. Twelve little chickens, all dressed, with pink ribbons trussing their legs and pink roses thrust in where the guillotine had fallen. Somehow, I think this rates with Ganna Walska's birthday surprise of all the implements made by International Harvester. In fact, I sometimes think Miss Moore's book rivals Mme. Walska's "There's Always Room at the Top!" as vivacious reading. Tho not, invariably, for the same reasons.

Combat Correspondent.

Tales of his experiences in various South Pacific battle zones are told by Lt. Jim Lucas, combat correspondent for the United States marine corps, in his book, "Combat Correspondent." Reynal & Hitchcock will publish the book in April.

Air Supremacy.

Foreshadowing the coming struggle for commercial air supremacy, Mathew Josephson's new book, "Empire of the Air: Juan Trippe and the Struggle for the World's Airways," will be published by Harcourt, Brace & Co. this spring.

50 YEARS OF CHILD CARE

by Dr. Isaac A. Abt

The wise and warmly human story of a great man and the small patients he has tended through the years.

"It should be read by every father and mother in the land, by every teacher, by everyone who has anything to do with babies, children or young people. The author's homely philosophy and his wise counsels are set forth in fascinating anecdotes and experiences . . .

"A vein of delightful humor permeates the story, which epitomizes the career of a man who is still active, whose counsel is sought everywhere, and whose devotion to his profession and his friends passes understanding."

Breathe Upon These

A Novel

By LUDWIG LEWISOHN

The Burnetts were a typical, well-to-do, mid-western family. Their sons were in the army, their factory was working on war contracts, and yet the war as a struggle between the forces of light and darkness seemed vague and remote. Then Dr. Dorfsohn came to help in the research on optics at the factory. The story he tells the Burnetts about the struggle of his people to find a haven in the old world shakes them out of their complacency.

Dr. Dorfsohn's greatest contribution to the United Nations was not his scientific knowledge of optics, but the vision he brought to people like the Burnetts of the battles to be fought and won in the hearts of men. He makes them feel that "too much of the mental and emotional area in the Western world is enemy territory." $2.50

BOOKS ALIVE

by Vincent Starrett

HISTORIES of the past appear to be getting shorter. In just two evenings last week I read "A Short History of the Chinese People," by L. Carrington Goodrich, recently published by Harper. It is really short. John Richard Green, the 19th century historian, managed to get his "Short History of the English People"—a masterpiece—into four large volumes, but Prof. Goodrich has compressed his chronicle of an older civilization into 232 pages, a miracle. That is shrinking history to the dimensions of an essay, which is all to the good—for general reading anyway. Perhaps the absolute of this sort of streamlining is an epigram; the idea has its merits.

Seriously, this is a remarkable little book, packed with fascinating information that cannot be found, I think, in any other single volume. By passing lightly over the personal adventures of kings and nobles, the intrigues of favorites, and similar aspects of romance, the author—one of the best of contemporary Sinologues—has been enabled to dwell at greater length on the intellectual and social advances that are the real history of a people. It is less a history of kings and conquests than of that civilization which, in general, kings and conquests serve only to interrupt. The early chapters on prehistoric, legendary China, documented and footnoted by the archaeological and ethnological research that was interrupted by Japanese aggression, are probably the best to be found anywhere. And there are many gratifying pages devoted to literature and the other arts.

Just the same, I wish Prof. Goodrich would write the huge history of China that some day will have to be written—that he could have written this time if he had wanted to—with all the pomp and circumstance of courts, all the kings and conquests, all the enchanting rogues and wicked eunuchs also in the picture. That would be a book that would make the "Arabian Nights" look like a dime novel. This most wonderful of stories, as it seems to me, is scattered thru a thousand volumes, but it still awaits its Gibbon. Prof. Goodrich's précis is a brilliant preliminary sketch of the book I have in mind.

A Quiz on Detectives.

Pocketbooks' most entertaining compendium of crime and detection, "The Pocket Mystery Reader," which is going to war in thousands of pockets, closes with a series of test questions on famous detectives that readers of this department should be able to answer standing on one foot. The answers are given in the book, an inexpensive joy at a quarter, but I shall be disappointed if you have to look at them. Miss Lee Wright edited the volume; here are her descriptions of 10 famous fathomers of fiction:

1. He lives on Punchbowl hill, has 11 honorable children, and is fond of talking in the axioms of an ancient civilization.
2. A famous cricketer, an authority on vintages, he toiled like Jacob for his bride, whom he first saw in the dock.
3. He saves lives by saving souls, and his best friend is a reformed lawbreaker still wanted by the French police.
4. Only once in his career was he lured away from his orchids, his beer, and the superlative cooking of his own menage.
5. Possessor of a superb mustache and inordinate self-esteem, he scoffs at evidence and relies on his "little gray cells."
6. This modern Robin Hood leaves the drawing of a haloed figure at the scene of all his exploits.
7. He smoked Regie cigarets and talked interminably of ceramics, chess, and Mother Goose.
8. He risks his neck to prove his clients' innocence and springs surprises at their trials.
9. Distinguished by his bulldog tenacity, this chief inspector of Scotland Yard is the outstanding breaker-downer of alibis.
10. He plays the violin, astonishes his worshiping colleague, and employs a staff of ragamuffins.

Ragamuffins, eh? So that's what Miss Wright thinks of us! She may hear about this from the whole staff, I shouldn't wonder. Moreover, to continue to be critical, I should not myself have called No. 6 precisely a detective, altho he does sometimes function in that role. Be a little careful with No. 2. Raffles was not the only cricketer of fiction, he wasn't a detective, and I don't recall that he ever married.

Starrett's Choice Popular.

I was pleased to learn from Mr. Babcock's column last week that "Fourteen Great Detective Stories," a Modern Library anthology, was a top ranking favorite with Princeton men, at home and overseas. Nobody had thought to mention the circumstance to me, least of all the publishers, and I am interested. I edited that book for the Modern Library away back in 1928, and apparently it has been selling like mad ever since. . . . No, my pecuniary interest in the volume ended when I cashed the first [and last] check, shortly after turning over the manuscript.

Distinguished Translator.

Not all translators are unappreciated, as I may have suggested they were in a paragraph a few weeks ago. The poet John Hervey, who is a resident of Chicago, writes in to say that he has no complaints to make. For 15 years he has been understandably proud of the gold medal—the Prix à l'Etranger—awarded him by the Académie Française, for his translation of the "Trophies" of Heredia, done in collaboration with John Myers O'Hara. The book was published by the John Day company in 1929, and found such favor with the Académie that in 1930 a gold medal was awarded to each of the translators, the only award of the kind, says Mr. Hervey, ever made by the Académie for a translation of French verse into English.

I should like to add that Mr. Hervey's own volume of verse, "The Conquerors," published by Stackpole Sons a few years ago, is one of the most interesting on my poetry shelves. In a series of nearly 150 epitaphs in the form of sonnets, the poet has characterized the "tragic masks" of history and legend with remarkable success, creating a sort of historical "Spoon River Anthology."

Maine Woods' Clean Smell in This Book

"DIRIGO POINT," by Elizabeth Foster. [Houghton Mifflin, $2.50.]

Reviewed by Maureen Daly.

Here is a novel with a plot so slight that nothing but intelligent planning and ingenious padding rounds the story out to a book length narrative of 214 pages. What action there is involves Jasmin Hawthorne, who falls in love in New York with Tony Carteret, a fascinating chap four years her junior, only to find that he lives next door when she and her mother move to their lake camp in the Maine woods for the summer.

In face of an opposition they cannot understand, Tony and Jasmin become engaged. The truth is that years before Jasmin's mother had divorced her father because of an affair with Tony's mother—and the fear that Tony may be his fiancee's half brother tortures the minds of those who know the shady secret.

In the nick of time Mr. Hawthorne comes forward to explain that he and the seductive Mrs. Carteret had enjoyed only a hand holding friendship and from then on the novel pulls out of the minor key.

Curious, indeed, are the "have a drink" sequences with which the story is punctuated. No major action is allowed to get under way unless each character is fortified with a scotch and soda, a little straight bourbon, a rum collins—or what are you drinking? Perhaps this is an author's trick to establish the pre-war setting of most of the book.

But however hackneyed the plot, dubious the characters, and questionable the morals, the reader will be refreshed by the clean breeze from the Maine woods, the smell of pines, and the invigorating tingle of cold lake water. The description is accurate, animated, and by far the best feature of the book.

Stage Notes

"Abie's Irish Rose" and "Blossom Time" are back on Chicago's play-going schedule, Anne Nichols' comedy to open at the Studebaker Monday night, March 20, after "The Patriots" ends its engagement March 18, and the Romberg musical to light up the Blackstone Sunday night, April 2, three weeks after the departure of "Good Night Ladies," which closes its fabulous 100 week run next Saturday night. Other probable bookings, not yet dated, include Richard Kollmar's musical, "Early to Bed," which hopes to arrive at the Blackstone in May; the revival of "A Connecticut Yankee," and an end of the season visit by Katharine Cornell in "Lovers and Friends," with Henry Daniell replacing Raymond Massey. Meanwhile, Ralph Kettering has gone east to book the Civic theater. If he has no luck, he will fall back on a mystery play called "The Spider Spins," written by Li Chin, a Chinese, about a Japanese villain.

Edward Chodorov, the author of "Decision," now playing at New York's Belasco theater, announces a second company to open in Boston Easter Monday, April 10.

Richard McCracken, the handsome hero of "Kiss and Tell," writes plays when not acting in one on the Harris stage. A New York producer, unidentified, has taken an option on his piece called "Family Circle," and he hopes the option ripens into such tangible fruit as a cast and opening night.

Richard McCracken.

Ever since "Oklahoma!" bloomed into a musical hit based on "Green Grow the Lilacs," the Theater Guild has been searching for another suitable play to turn over to Oscar Hammerstein II. and Richard Rodgers. Now they have chosen Molnar's "Liliom," and no doubt will put a couple of ballets in it, too, probably taking pictorial advantage of the scene depicting the courtroom of the next world.

BERNADETTE

The long awaited "Song of Bernadette" is at last unreeling on the State-Lake screen. Here is its young star—Jennifer Jones.

Milton Watson steps into Bill Johnson's singing shoes tomorrow night as the hero of "Something for the Boys," at the Civic Opera house. Mr. Watson was a matinee idol hereabouts when Paul Ash and his orchestra had a following to prove the Frank Sinatra craze is nothing new.

Do you like costume statistics? Then "Ice-Capades of 1944" is your show. Its 700 costumes kept 170 fitters, tailors, seamstresses, and so on busy for three months in advance of production. They used more than 10,200,000 sequins, 18,000 yards of silk, 500 yards of velveteen, 2,000 yards of satin, 6,000 yards of organdy, 1,000 yards of metal cloth, and dozens of other materials to match. Mary Grant designed the lot, and it was her first assignment on her own after working as assistant to Raoul Pene du Bois.

The Actors company lost a mainstay to the army recently when Arthur Peterson Jr. left for camp. Mr. Peterson has served the group as leading actor, press agent, carpenter, and general factotum, even teaching a poetry class of apprentices. His wife, Norma Ransom, is left to keep the family on the boards.

Philip Barry's "Holiday" will be presented by the De Paul university drama school at 64 E. Lake st. for an indefinite engagement opening Monday night. David Itkin is the director.

The performance of Guy Sorel as Alexander Hamilton in "The Patriots" is rarely greeted with indifference. People are for him, or against him, vociferously. Mr. Sorel is a young man who made up his mind. On Dec. 28, 1940, precisely, he gave up his job as buyer in a Philadelphia department store, saying "I'm going on the stage. I give myself one year's trial. At the end of that time, if I don't succeed, I'll quit and go back into business." Then he boarded a train for Broadway. On Dec. 28, 1941, he opened on Broadway in John Huston's play about Woodrow Wilson, playing the 78 year old Clemenceau in "In Time to Come." In between had been five months of dramatic school, four months of summer stock, three months to land, rehearse, and perform a job. The schedule was precise, but it was lucky, too. Otto Preminger, director of "In Time to Come," needed for Clemenceau an actor who could speak perfect French or English with a French accent. Sorel was born in Paris.

The Theater Guild plans to organize a ballet company next season, and has announced a prize of $500 for the best original ballet play written on an American subject, "employing dancers who act, or actors who dance." It should run from 20 to 40 minutes. Ballet productions may be made of Weldon Stone's "Devil Take a Whittler," and of the Guiterman version in verse of Moliere's "The Would-Be Gentleman."

Notes of Music and Musicians

By Albert Goldberg

John Kirkpatrick will play a program of piano music by American composers at the next to the last concert of the Musical Arts Piano series at Orchestra hall on Tuesday at 8:15. Mr. Kirkpatrick is a graduate of Princeton university and studied in France with Philipp Decreus and Nadia Boulanger.

John Kirkpatrick.

With the exception of selections from Edward Macdowell's "Woodland Sketches," "Fireside Tales," and "New England Idylls," the program lists all first Chicago performances: three pieces by Theodore Chanler, Charles Ives' Second Sonata, "Concord, Mass., 1840-'60," and the first sonata by Roy Harris.

Elie Siegmeister, American composer and folk song specialist, will be presented by the Modern Musical guild in a program of his own music at Thorne hall this afternoon at 3:15. Participants include Cecil Leeson, saxophonist; Frances Glickman, soprano; William Paglin, violinist, and Frank Palmer, baritone. Proceeds will be devoted to Russian War Relief.

Bronislaw Huberman, violinist, and Sidor Belarski, bass, will appear in joint recital at the Civic Opera house Sunday, March 19, at 3:30.

Marjorie Lawrence, Metropolitan Opera soprano, will give a recital in Orchestra hall on Saturday, March 18, at 8:15. Her Chicago appearance will take place four days after her scheduled appearance in "Tristan and Isolde" at the Metropolitan.

Isaac Stern, violinist, and Alexander Zakin, pianist, will give the third of the Chamber Concert series sponsored by the music department of the University of Chicago at Mandel Hall on Friday at 8. Stern will play the Bach Sonata No. 1, in G minor, for unaccompanied violin, and will be joined by Mr. Zakin in the Handel Sonata in D major, Brahms' Sonata in D minor, the Debussy Sonata, and the first Chicago performance of a Sonatine by the Mexican composer, Carlos Chavez.

Lawrence Tibbett, baritone, will give the last recital of the season in the History and Enjoyment of Music series at the Civic Opera house this afternoon at 3:30. His program includes two Handel numbers, "Defend Her, O Heaven," and "Silent Worship," the Four Serious Songs of Brahms, "Vision Fugitive," from Massenet's "Herodiade," "Pilgrim's Song" and "None but the Lonely Heart" by Tschaikowsky, and songs by Warren, Marx, Vaughan Williams, Rupert Hughes, and Deems Taylor. Edward Harris, pianist, will play two Albeniz compositions, "Evocation" and "Seguidillas."

Doris Stockton will give a recital on the marimba and the vibraharp at the Civic theater this afternoon at 3:30. For part of the program she will be accompanied by an orchestra composed of members of the Chicago Symphony orchestra conducted by Clair Omar Musser. Her program is largely composed of compositions originally written for the piano by Staub, Mendelssohn, Chopin, and Weber, tho there is an excursion into the violinist's repertoire with Paganini's "Perpetual Motion" and a Scherzo Caprice by Mr. Musser.

How Fighting Britons Got Water Supply

"PIPELINE TO BATTLE," by Maj. Peter W. Rainier. [Random House, $2.50.]

Reviewed by James E. Sloan.

To fight, man must have water, which must somehow be transported to the front lines. In North Africa, Maj. Rainier was "the water bloke" who constructed the pipelines for the valiant British 8th army in its see-saw struggle with the Germans and Italians.

Maj. Peter W. Rainier.

Refreshingly unexpert in its approach and content to cover the war mostly from the viewpoint of personal adventure, "Pipeline to Battle" tells of the bloody African war from winter, 1939, when Wavell's 20,000 men and dummy tanks and planes beat the Italians in the first lap of the "Bengazi Stakes," until the allies' smashing defeat of the axis hordes in Tunisia last May.

Spiced with anecdotes both humorous and grim, here is the full panorama of the turning point of the war. Highlighting its battle stories, which are well diagrammed, is one on the epochal British breakthru at El Alamein, which, incidentally, discloses that Rommel punched a hole in the British line guarding Alexandria and Cairo but was unable to capitalize on it because salt water filled Rainier's pipeline at one spot.

Some of the book's dramatic sidelights tell how Rommel chased Gen. Cunningham's GHQ across a great desert area and almost caught it in a deadly hare-and-hounds game, how a German submarine pulled a "Pearl Harbor" at Alexandria to blast two British battleships, how a German commando raid became a fiasco because Nazis had equipped themselves with the wrong kind of money, how a Mickey Mouse film unreeled its gay humor in a dugout under the noses of spouting guns, and how Montgomery switched real and fake tanks to set up his Alamein knockout.

The war in North Africa has been covered by many able writers, and "Pipeline to Battle" ranks with the most entertaining of them.

Self-Teaching Texts Printed for Civilians

"PHYSICS: COURSE 1, MECHANICS;" "PHYSICS: COURSE 2, HEAT, SOUND, AND LIGHT;" "PHYSICS: COURSE 3, ELECTRICITY, RADIO." Adapted from Charles E. Dull's "Modern Physics," by staff of United States Armed Forces institute. [Holt, $1.50 each.]

Reviewed by Arthur Bergholz.

This group is the first of the excellent self-teachers created by the United States Armed Forces institute to be made available for civilians. The USAFI is doing a superb job of adapting basic texts in all major subjects for use by those who are unable to avail themselves of teachers. Each text is rewritten and reorganized so that the prospective student is given every assistance in instructing himself.

In this particular case physics is broken down into three self-contained courses. The writing is crystal clear, the illustrations are simple and well produced. In addition there are essential aids such as simply devised laboratory experiments, summaries of basic mathematics involved, dictionaries of key terms, and at well spaced intervals there are review tests.

The publisher is to be commended for making these texts available to civilians. The vast number of workers in war and civilian industries will find them excellent sources of instruction. It is hoped that in time all 15 basic texts in a variety of subjects will be released for civilian use.

THE MURDER CHART

By Drexel Drake.

ENTRY.	PERFORMANCE.	PAY-OFF.
"AN EYE FOR A TOOTH," by Dornford Yates. (Putnam's, $2.50.)	The murderers of Major Bowshot wanted his corpse to be found on Austrian road. Jonathan Mansel hid body, and played shrewd game of patience to uncover deeply plotted crime.	Brilliant detective work in forcing murderers to come out into open. Story moves deliberately, but with polish and fascinating developments. Clever mystery technique.
"MEASURED FOR MURDER," by Babs Lee. [Scribner's, $2.]	Murder of wealthy woman patron is sequel to style show in swanky Manhattan shop. Hatreds, money deals, and rivalries complicate puzzle of that and succeeding deaths for Argus Steele.	Smart setup of models, designers, and customers gives luster to background. Neatly engineered plot, with enough motives and dubious alibis to make it a first rate puzzle.
"THE CASE OF THE LAVENDER GRIPSACK," by Harry Stephen Keeler. [Phoenix, $2.]	Elsa Colby, making debut as criminal lawyer in Chicago, assigned to defend a John Doe on trial for murder. Loss of case would mean loss of her inheritance. Nasty conniving.	Knotty puzzle of many twists and angles, with every one taking part in it afflicted with loquacity. Excitement reserved for final court episode.

THE JUNIOR BOOKSHELF

By Agatha L. Shea.

Director of Young People's Work, Chicago Public Library.

TITLE.	SUBJECT.	VERDICT.
"CHILD OF COLOMBIA," by Pearl K. Wimberly. (Dutton, $2.)	Ten year old Celina, who lived on the edge of the jungle in Colombia, longed to be like those strangers from far away lands whose little girls wore short dresses and went to school. Then one day just such strangers moved right into Celina's own village, and real adventures began for the little peon girl.	An informative and realistic picture of peon life in Colombia. Simply written for the 10-12 year group with no exploitation of the bizarre. Illustrations by Avery Johnson are especially appealing. A timely book on a subject which will be of increasing interest to our children.
"ROAD TO ALASKA," by Douglas Coe. (Messner, $2.50.)	A fascinating story of the building of the Alaskan military highway from Dawson Creek to Fairbanks, Alaska. An unforgettable picture of the United States army engineers at work — for older boys and girls.	One of the most inspiring accounts of accomplishment of the present war. Well illustrated. Good reading for all ages.
"PAINTER'S COACH," by Ilse Bischoff. (Longmans, $2.25.)	Gay adventure, good humor, and well earned success mark this story of young Timothy and Amanda Dunton, children of an itinerant painter of 19th century New England. Their travels in the gaily colored coach, and the stops at the homey rural inns make their life a jolly one.	An entertaining story with much of interest for boys and girls who enjoy reading of a life quite different from their own. An excellent picture of New England of the period, bringing in customs of the time.

INDIAN LIFE PICTURED IN 'CRAZY WEATHER'

White Boy's Adventures Vividly Told

"CRAZY WEATHER," by Charles L. McNichols. [Macmillan, $2.]

Reviewed by Fanny Butcher.

Crazy weather, which sometimes turns the valley of the Colorado river into a literal furnace — a hot spell with the thermometer sizzling at 110 at 7 a. m. — was what South Boy woke up to one morning. And it was crazy weather which drove him to an adventure which provides readers with one of the most unusual vicarious experiences of their lives.

South Boy was a white boy. His mother "was not only a white woman, she was a lady. She said herself she belonged to Another World. Certainly she was no part of either of the two worlds around her—these according to her own description were the Rough World of the White Men and the Heathen World of the Indian. She had been forced by a fraud of nature to give South Boy to the breast of an Indian woman, but . . . she had sought to armor him with cultural advancement and Christian instruction against the Rough and Heathen Worlds." But illness had sent her away to a hospital and she would not be allowed to return until the cool weather.

What boy of 14 wouldn't have investigated the taboo heathen world if he had a chance? South Boy had the most wonderful chance that ever befell a white boy. His friend Havek, a Mojave Indian boy of his own age, was his twin in a series of adventures which any two boys would have found fascinating, for besides other excitements they literally went to a war against the Piutes.

For the four days that the crazy weather held, South Boy became wholly Indian. His hair was already "half long" because nobody had bothered to cut it after his mother went away. He had already caked it in mud and bound it Indian fashion to keep his head cool and then soaked himself luxuriantly in the cool water of the river and washed the caked mud from his head.

Havek, being a good Indian, saw the dream on South Boy's face, and from that time until the weather broke four days later, South Boy was a true Indian. He even "thought in Mojave." Together these two adolescents had the kind of time that any boy might dream of.

They went to a "far seer" and had South Boy's dream interpreted. They came upon a near murder, and Havek precipitated a "war" which already had been started by marauding Piutes. They tracked for hours two crazily painted horses which belonged to a Piute. Havek read the tracks with Indian wisdom and came to the conclusion that the Piute was crazy and not a real warrior.

When they found that the crazy man had tried to murder their old friend "The Mormonhater" they went after the maniac in earnest. They had an exciting and almost fatal battle with him.

The two boys, great heroes because of their exploit with the mad Piute, were made much of by the local Indians, but their glamor was dulled by the excitement over the death of the great Yellow Road.

When the wind and rain come to end the crazy weather, South Boy reverts thoroly to his whiteness. But he has had a fabulously exciting four day spree in the "heathen world."

Grace Moore's Life Story Is Tough but Also Gallant

"YOU'RE ONLY HUMAN ONCE," by Grace Moore. (Doubleday, Doran, $2.50.)

Reviewed by Claudia Cassidy.

"Cinderella in Brass Knuckles" wouldn't be a bad title for the Hollywood version of this slugging saga of the ambitious choir singer from Jellico, Tenn., whose lively career is presented in picturesque panoply of fairy godfathers and princes charming, plus the classic irritations of those jealous stepsisters, disguised as rival prima donnas and tenors, and that cruel stepmother, the press. Altho these ogres do their best to spoil the fairy tale, Miss Moore triumphs because the glass slipper of fame fits. She kicks with it in the clinches of what she calls "the natural instinct to tell the world where to get off."

But malice is the spice of memoirs, and Miss Moore is highly seasoned. Her book, like her singing, has undeniable warmth and freshness, and a belligerent thrust at the shoulders. When she writes, "I've been hotheaded, ambitious, and Irish; lace curtains one day, the curse of the banshees the next," she is stating facts. Her story, like her little brown trunk, is stuffed with souvenirs, and so lustrous with luck it keeps hurling her to the top and daring her to stay there.

Grace Moore.

She can be tough about it, and gallant, too. She met her handsome husband, Valentin Parera, on shipboard one night, was engaged by morning, married almost at once, and spent her honeymoon in the borrowed Venetian castle where Wagner completed the second act of "Tristan and Isolde." It was a "once upon a time" beginning, and Miss Moore clings to the "lived happily ever after" finish. From her book you would never suspect Mr. Parera's long illness, or her own courage. Where she loves, she is disarmingly loyal.

But where she doesn't! It seems the late Alexander Woollcott once ducked her, causing a bout of ear trouble she never quite forgave. She turns this caustic, plush-prosed wit into a puritanical dolt, struck dumb in the presence of Mary Garden, after Miss Moore had arranged a meeting, and brushes him off with an anecdote composed of too much warm wine and cool Mediterranean, which sent him to his hotel happily bemused, clad only in straw hat and cigaret. Having created this droll but doubtful picture, she wraps it maliciously in the confusion of flight.

In 275 packed pages, no pictures, Miss Moore retravels her high voltage trail from Tennessee to Broadway to Europe, the Metropolitan, and Hollywood. She admits she was invariably a star before she was a novice, but gets mad at the critics for agreeing with her. Ambitious to the point of the reckless, she made a dead set at the Met, and won with the third audition. Meanwhile, she had periodically packed her savings and scurried to France to study. It was typical of this era, crowded with the people from Cole Porter song lyrics, that when the little blonde finally agreed to have her hair cut, Antoine came on special order, and Mr. Porter furnished the music.

Altho Hollywood did the final brushwork with the sensational success of "One Night of Love," Miss Moore was doing all right in the glamour business right along. If she went to dinner with Jascha Heifetz, they sat on a moon drenched balcony and he played Pied Piper to a bewitched multitude with a borrowed violin. When Irving Berlin signed her for the "Music Box Revue," the contract was written on a tablecloth at Ciro's that the waiter made him buy. When she made her Metropolitan début in "Boheme," it was the first time she had appeared in any opera, and she lost her garters and her high C in the opening scene.

But these were nothing compared to the fabulous goings-on after Hollywood triumph. Only Sir Thomas Beecham held out at Covent Garden, and she takes care of him. On the wave of the sound track she made a grand tour, hung over balconies before adoring throngs, and

'Lost Weekend' Shows Men Are Interested in Hangovers

By Harry Hansen.

NEW YORK.

JUST to show that reviewers don't always know the direction of the wind I must mention my experience with Charles Jackson's "The Lost Weekend." As you know this is a detailed analysis of a binge and what comes of it. Actually nothing comes of it. When I read it, I was bored by it. This pre-occupation with how it felt to be drunk was as uninteresting to me as a yarn about somebody's operation. I had been taking my liquor sparingly and wasn't interested in men who couldn't hold it. It cuts down efficiency, and were I to indulge in it, a lot of deadlines would get tangled up.

The book was well reviewed when published; some of my colleagues had more interest in hangovers than I did. I dismissed it—for half a day; then various sober citizens around town began asking me about it. One learned man agreed that the theme was uninviting and then questioned me for 10 minutes about the exact way the author had developed it. There seemed to be a morbid interest in getting tight, a sort of nostalgia for the dear, dead days, on the part of numerous males. I haven't heard a woman mention it.

Stanley Rinehart says it's in the third edition and the fourth is to be ready this week. Would you say that it belongs to the literature of escape?

Literary Lights Glow.

New York City is filled with literary meetings; there's somebody spouting somewhere every night, and if I had to attend as the music critics attend musical programs, I'd be groggy. Budding authors attend many of them to hear successful writers talk about their novels. The New York Times sometimes sponsors meetings in its own hall; the other night it had Betty Smith, Elizabeth Janeway, and John Hersey tell how they write. Hersey ["A Bell for Adano"] is the white headed boy of Time-Life and is expected to grow above the average size. But in this instance the audience was interesting, too. One aspiring author said: "I've put off starting my novel until tomorrow. I had planned to start it tonight, but first wanted to hear these three tell how to do it."

Intellectuals Disagree.

John T. Flynn was on the air last week describing [and defending] his book, "As We Go Marching," in which he tries to prove that the United States shows symptoms of going the way of Germany and Italy, into Fascism. I was a biased chairman, because I didn't agree with him. Leo Cherne, of the research bureau, was there, as well as Oswald Garrison Villard. Cherne was against the thesis of the book, too, but Mr. Villard thinks it a great book, a warning against evil tendencies in centralization. I was, in truth, conscience stricken to find myself on the opposite side from Mr. Villard, who has been one of the great intellectual leaders of our generation. John T. Flynn is gray haired, sharp featured, and an emphatic, animated speaker. He lit into the government administration with plenty of vigor and the microphones rattled. Mr. Cherne was just as emphatic in disputing him. But what nearly knocked me off my chair was Mr. Flynn's declaration that he does not "hate Roosevelt." He says he has no personal feeling against him, whatsoever. He says we reviewers have attributed it to him, and that we are wrong. Mr. Flynn wrote "Country Squire in the White House." He may not hate Mr. Roosevelt, but so far as I can read, he was after his hide with a scalping knife in that book.

"Who's Looney Now?"

Among those who never believed that Shakespeare wrote the Shakespeare plays were John Galsworthy, Sigmund Freud, Oliver Herford, and Carolyn Wells. Among the living Gelett Burgess and Marjorie Bowen agree with their conviction that the real author was Edward de Vere, earl of Oxford. This theory was first stated in "Shakespeare Identified," by J. Thomas Looney, who died recently in Swadlincote, Staffordshire, England, and is the subject of a memorial issued by the Shakespeare Fellowship of New York, which also supports the Oxford theory. Leslie Howard's motion picture, "Mr. V," was based on the Looney book. The book appeared in 1920 and at that time I was reviewing in Chicago. I turned it over to Dr. John Matthews Manly of the University of Chicago and he gave me a report headed: "Who's Looney now?" Dr. Manly did not agree with the Oxford "detective story."

Thyra Samter Winslow has just been expressing her opinions on magazine editors to the Authors' League, made up of fellow craftsmen. "Once," says she, "I wrote a filler for an editor. He sent it back and asked me to rewrite it into a short story. He sent that back and asked me to rewrite it into a novelette. He then asked me if I wanted to do a novel on it, but I was sick of it by that time. The story was 'A Cycle of Manhattan,' and its been in 11 anthologies and if I hadn't been so lazy it might have been a novel. The best paragraph in it was written by H. L. Mencken, the only editor who ever added anything to any story I've ever written."

Authors and Books.

The March "key book" of the East and West association, which has units in many cities, will be Bruno Lasker's "Peoples of Southeast Asia," and other books dealing with South Pacific lands will be discussed. . . . The March book and author luncheon at the Hotel Astor will take place Tuesday; the speakers will be Louis Adamic, author of "My Native Land," Maj. Peter W. Rainier, author of "Pipeline to Battle," and John Hersey, author of "A Bell for Adano"; Irita Van Doren will preside. . . . Konrad Heiden, author of "Der Fuehrer" appeared Wednesday before the Overseas Press club to tell how he gathered his voluminous material for his study of Hitler. . . . Roi Ottley's "New World A-Coming," a fine journalistic study of the Negro in modern American life, is the theme book for a broadcast today on a radio project on Negro life.

Modern Art Series Off to a Good Start

By Thalia.

The series of "Modern Art" lectures which Poetry magazine is giving to add nuggets of gold to its endowment fund got off to an exciting start a week ago yesterday. A capacity crowd gathered in the Arts club's formal lounge to be fed mentally by a talk by James Johnson Sweeney on "Painting Today" and then ambled up the most originally railed stairs in the city to have more temporal nourishment in the soft blue and white baroque dining room.

Mr. Sweeney is one of the foremost American art critics and as independent as an eagle. Unlike most critics who have become famous, he is in no sense dependent economically upon his reputation as a critic. He works part of his time in a profitable business and is free the rest of the time to devote himself to his avocation. He specializes in modern art and is said by those who know to be the best authority in America on its abstract phases. He is interested in the newer forms of the other arts also, especially literature, and specifically poetry, which is probably how Poetry magazine was able to capture him for a lecture.

His apartment in New York on the river in the eighties is, I hear, almost breathtakingly dramatic and beautiful. It fills the two top floors of a tall building and every window frames a miraculous view of the city. It is a completely and uncompromisingly modern apartment, created on the principle of using space as one of the main elements of beauty. The rooms are very large, and in the main ones are hung a few really great modern paintings, a Leger, a Bracque, a Picasso.

They are large canvases and hang very low so that you have a feeling as you walk into the room that you are almost walking into the picture. The walls are an oysterish white, the pragmatic pieces of furniture are the palest of blond wood. The bookshelves are very low and receding so that, altho there are many books, you are not insistently conscious of them. There are no unnecessary ornaments. You have in the rooms, so I am told, a magnificent sense of light and air which is strangely uplifting, absolutely right, and satisfying even to those who prefer for themselves a background which echoes the past rather than proclaims the future.

Mr. Sweeney's talk, like his home, was full of light, for he had a deft and illuminating manner of discussing "Painting Today." It was the most auspicious initiation of the series which will be held alternate Saturdays until, on April 8, it ends with the first [and he swears the last] appearance of James Thurber on any stage.

The creator of those marvelous dogs which so often make one wonder if God didn't give the power of speech to the wrong species is himself usually as silent as one of his canine heroes. But he will break his lifelong vow never to make a speech and talk on "If You Ask Me," which is the title of a column he used to conduct in New York. If you ask him, he will try to answer your questions. On the walls of the Arts club gallery at that time will be hung an exhibition of the Thurber drawings which have made him a cult. Mrs. Alfred Shaw, president of the Arts club, arranged for the exhibit on her recent trip to New York.

Mrs. James Herbert Mitchell, who as Marion Strobel Mitchell acts as co-editor of Poetry magazine, had as a special attraction at her post-lecture luncheon her house guest, Mrs. John Franklin Daniel. It was a sort of old home week for Mrs.

Service Women Show Interest in Fashions Contest

Women in the army, the navy, and the marines already are dreaming up their first post-war, civilian wardrobes, and many of them believe that the uniforming of women during the war will have marked influence on future feminine dress.

A WAVE who holds this opinion is one of the recent entrants in THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE'S 1944 American Fashions contest.

"I never have been a professional fashion designer," she writes, "but always have been interested in this field, and I appreciate this chance as an outlet to some of my suppressed desires."

International Day Program to Be Musical

By Irene Steyskal.

Every traveler knows that globe trotter's nostalgia is compounded largely of remembered sounds—a whispering of guitars by moonlight in a Mexican patio; silver thread of the gondolier's song, an edging for blue twilight over the Venice of memory. The fact explains why Mrs. Arthur H. Swett, in planning an International day for the Conference of Club Presidents and Program Chairmen, is generous with music.

To assuage early spring twinges of wanderlust, Mrs. Swett will offer music of many lands to the conference members at their meeting Thursday in Fullerton hall of the Art institute. Italy of a happier yesterday will be recalled in song by the Italian tenor, Enrico Clause.

Holland of the windmills and tulips and wooden shoes will be pictured in songs and stories by Wilhelmina Wiersema. Syrna Richman will sing songs of Palestine, and the pretty and vivacious Navarro sisters, in their colorful costumes, the lively tunes of Latin America. William Daugherty, the Negro violinist, and Normandie Paradis, French pianist, are two of the instrumentalists who are to participate in the program.

Emilio Almada of Mexico is to be the conference's special guest that day.

Among the speakers on the International day program will be Cheng Pao-Nann, director of the midwest branch of the Chinese News service. Rabbi Jacob J. Weinstein of K. A. M. temple here is to give a talk carrying the title, "Amos in Times Square."

Mrs. Charles S. Clark, founder-president of the conference, which is now in its 26th year, will convene the meeting at the customary hour—10 o'clock.

Another organization setting its meeting this week to the cosmopolitan key is the Chicago Woman's club. The story of the classic Chinese theater, with its elaborate formalities and symbolism, and of the transitional changes it is undergoing as China moves into a new age, will be brought to the group Wednesday by Li Ling-Ai, co-producer of "Kukan," the technicolor film that took an Academy award in 1941. "Behind the Embroidered Fan" is the poetic title of Miss Li's lecture recital, for which she appears in authentic costume. The program is set for 2 o'clock in Curtiss hall of the Fine Arts building.

In her small and artistic person, Miss Li represents a harmonious blending of eastern and western civilization that refutes Kipling's famous dogma. Born in Honolulu of Chinese parents, both physicians and scholars of distinction, Miss Li received her basic education in American schools, was graduated from the University of Hawaii, later went to China to do her important research studies of the native theater, and finally to Europe for further study on the stage, acting techniques, and producing.

Mrs. Henry Barrett Chamberlin, the club president, will introduce Miss Li. Ethel M. Colson Brazelton will give a book talk at 11 o'clock Wednesday morning for the current events class on Mildred Walker's novel, "Winter Wheat."

The Chicago Woman's Aid, whose clubrooms are in the Medical and Dental Arts building, is to hear the famous archeologist and explorer, Count Byron de Prorok, Tuesday afternoon. Fresh from the Hills . . . . By Marge of Sunrise Mountain Farm . . . . Ozark Woodsawing

[Copyright: 1944: By The Chicago Tribune.]

We are just sitting down to lunch when we hear the roar of a motor over in the North Forty.

"The Jack's Fork Saw Outfit," says the Jedge. "And are they ever welcome!"

For weeks two huge piles of logs had been awaiting the coming of this big circular saw to turn them into lengths suitable for cookstove and fireplace. Our dwindling woodpile needed this replenishment to carry us on thru the spring.

Lunch is quickly finished and we go down the lane, cross the road, and thru the gate into the North Forty. Up the hill past the old Jesse James well the Jedge and I follow a well-worn sheep path, with Punch, Judy and Shep racing along ahead, sniffing at suspected rabbit tracks. As we near the top of the hill we hear a sharp whine, as the saw bites into the dry log, followed by a lusty thump as another stick of firewood hits the growing pile. Then suddenly at the far edge of a fresh clearing on this thickly wooded hillside, we see the Jack's Fork Saw Outfit in full operation.

And somehow, I'm instantly reminded of a circus.

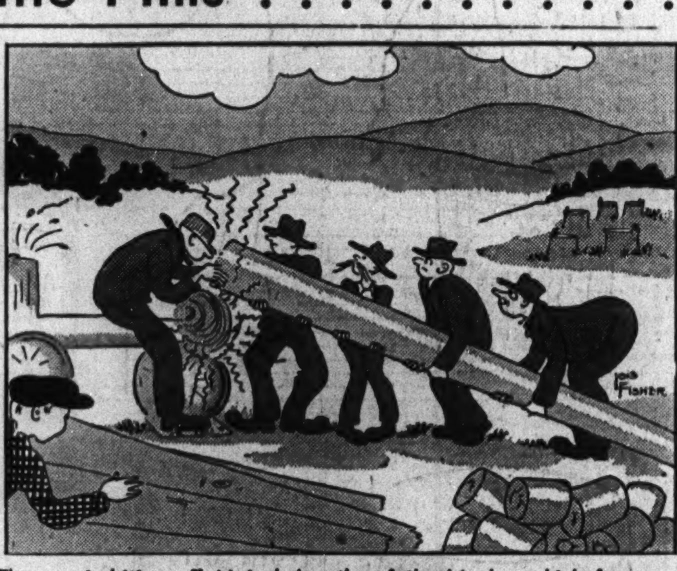
There's a surprising amount of motion for an Ozark undertaking. There's musical rhythm made up of the deep roar of the old motor that runs the saw and the staccato sound of the saw itself gnawing its way thru the logs. There's the fragrance of sawdust and the aroma of good clean earth and dry leaves, all intermingled in a heady perfume. There's the cool shaggy roughness of the bark on the logs, somehow reminiscent of elephant hide. All one needs is a sack of popcorn and a fistful of spun sugar candy; and it's circus day all over again.



The saw is biting off 16 inch lengths of the big log which four men are holding up to its teeth.

The saw is a great whirring circle at the rear end of a weird chassis that has an old automobile engine and radiator at the front end and Uncle John Tamsett's unmistakable old wagon at the rear. The saw is biting off 16 inch lengths of the big log which four men are holding up to its teeth. The men inch forward just that much each time the saw lops off a piece. Beside the saw lies the pile of logs awaiting their turn. Stepping and sliding over them, like a pint-size lumber jack, is an agile, tall, slim boy who picks out the logs and rolls them forward to the men.

Most spectacular figure in the group is Mr. Fritz. Mr. Fritz, big and broad, stands astride the driving rod that propels the saw, feet braced on a home hammered platform and his back toward the puffing engine. It is his job to guide the log against the teeth of the saw at just the right point to make a good stick of stove wood, and to receive and toss aside the sawed-off piece as it falls.

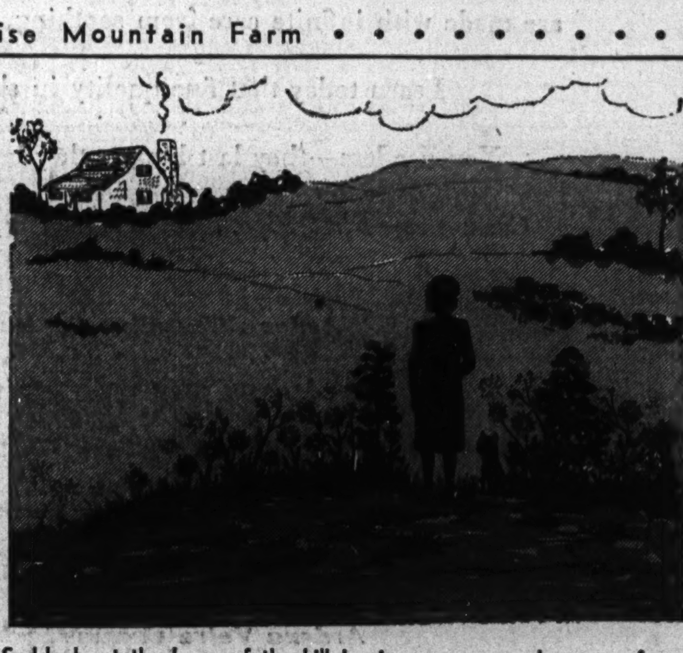
Around his neck, Mr. Fritz wears a knotted bandanna handkerchief, and his outfit of overalls and blue denim jacket is topped with an engineer's cap pulled low over his eyes. You can imagine him leaning from the cab of a great locomotive and reaching up to pull a whistle cord, as a long train of loaded freight cars rounds a curve. And that picture is not idle fancy. Mr. Fritz is a retired railroad engineer. He and his charming wife came down here to the hills two years ago, bought the prettiest little stone house and eight of the most scenic acres in the community and settled down to enjoy peaceful inactivity. Owning and personally operating a saw outfit is Mr. Fritz' idea of a life of ease, and for this all the neighbors are grateful. Even in the midst of the forests we have felt the pinch of wood shortage thru lack of wood cutters.

As we watch, the engine behind Mr. Fritz roars and puffs and begins to send out clouds of steam.

"It'll start playing 'Pistol Packin' Mama' any minute, now," says the Jedge.



Suddenly at the brow of the hill I raise my eyes and see our farmhouse at the top of the next hill.

The tall lad jumps off the log pile and runs to the front of the engine. He wrenches the lid off a milk can, dips a rusty tin can into it, and brings it up full of water. He spoons water into the radiator until the steaming subsides but the steady buzzing of the saw never misses a beat. He rushes back to tug at a log until two men are freed of their load when the log being sawed nears the end and come to his assistance.

It's amusing to guess the identity of each log as it goes up to the saw. White oak, with regular indentations on the bark. Black jack or jack oak with shaggier, rougher bark. Sycamores with smooth mottled gray bark. Now and then there's a hickory with fine textured gray bark or a slim stalk of pungent sassafras.

The pile of sawdust grows until it covers Mr. Fritz' braced feet. The pile of unsawed logs grows less and the stack of sawed lengths grows higher. The men holding the log begin to joke and laugh. Mr. Bates, a widower on the shady side of 75, who lives with his dog, Pard, in a neat little white house yon' side of the Harlow schoolhouse, is the target of their jokes. Mr. Bates has been given the easiest position on the log . . . he is middle man! He tugs valiantly at the log and grins at their jokes about himself and a local widow. Everybody laughs when one of the men asks the Jedge if he is all set to hitch Mr. Bates and the widow come springtime.

I linger long after the Jedge has returned to the house to see the men finish the last of the logs in that pile. I watch while a team of shaggy black horses which has been tied to a near-by tree is brought up and hitched to the front of the ancient chassis. With one of the men driving from the side, the horses settle into their collars and pull the heavy saw over to the second pile of logs a hundred yards away. Mr. Fritz brings his platform and puts it in place while one of the men scoops out enough dirt and dried leaves to allow the rear wagon wheels to drop down a few inches and come to rest firmly braced.

With the saw idle, I can examine it more closely. Mr. Fritz explains how the saw is mounted on the driving rod of the old engine, a heavier piece of metal which fits snugly into the bore of the saw having been welded to the rod. He demonstrates how the saw runs in reverse, high, low, or second gear, just as a car might be driven. He's as proud of this saw, so fearfully and wonderfully contrived, as of his finest locomotive.

Then at the front some one cranks the engine, the saw starts up, the tall boy hands over a slim log and the routine begins all over again.

As I call the dogs and start for home I look about me, and suddenly the clearing here on this wooded hillside seems tragic and pathetic. I remind myself that grass will grow in this cleared space next summer, making this North Forty better pasture land. I remember too, that less timber decreases the fire hazard. But somehow I can only feel regret that these tall, sturdy trees have been cut down. I wonder about the little wild things that have lived in them! I see on several raw stumps the hulls from big acorns and the tough shells of hickory nuts, and I wonder if deposed families of squirrels might not have come back, like peasants driven from battle grounds, to eat on the sites of their former homes.

Gloomily I pause at the edge of the clearing to finger clusters of sumac berries, looking and feeling like something fashioned of maroon velvet and whimsically fastened to bare branches. But I haven't the heart to pick a winter bouquet. With head low, I walk along the sheep path, with ghosts of Queen Anne's lace and head high spectres of mullen stalks lining my way. Flakes of soft blobby snow begin to fall, and my thoughts are gray as the sky overhead.

Suddenly at the brow of the hill I raise my eyes and see our farmhouse at the top of the next hill. The Jedge has obviously just fixed the fire in the fireplace and a pale blue curl of smoke rises high above the big stone chimney. Wood smoke! The fragrant symbol of a sparkling, cheerful open fire that warms the heart with its glow as it warms the body with its heat. I hurry home cheered by the thought that perhaps God made trees, as only He could make them, to give mortals the great heartening joy of wood fires.

Daniel, who many years ago used to live here and who has devoted friends here. She had been spending a few days with Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank before visiting Mrs. Mitchell.

Mrs. Daniel's husband is an archaeologist, now a captain in the American army somewhere in the near east, acting as liaison officer with the British. Mrs. Daniel met him in Greece where he was "digging" and where she had gone because she is an inveterate traveler. She is also an adventurous one, and her adventurousness nearly ended her life. She tells a wonderful story about one encounter she had in Greece with an ochia, a rare Greek adder.

She had spent three weeks in a little inn on the side of a mountain, Tsoumerkâ, next to Olympus the highest mountain in Greece. No American had ever been in the village before, and she was an object of great curiosity to the villagers. When she decided to leave and hired a guide to take her over the mountain, the innkeeper insisted on her taking a "cocoretsi," a special Greek sausage, a kind of Greek "hot dog." This special delicacy was for luncheon and had to be cooked over a fire.

Ellen Daniel is no shirker and when her guide went in search of water, she decided to have a pile of twigs ready to start the fire on his return. She wandered off the path and had leaned over and was picking up a stick when a nasty gray snake with black rings around it darted at her from a rock and buried its fangs in her hand. She showed us the two scars, a couple of inches apart which she will wear forever and which graphically prove the size of the serpent's mouth. "Don't tell me snakes aren't aggressive and never attack unless disturbed," she said. "This one wasn't under the twig or even near it. It just didn't want me around."

Her guide, after the manner of all Greeks, she said, who always want to make you happy, declared, "It is nothing, it is nothing." But it was anything but nothing. Even his quick slashing of her hand and her own efforts to draw out the poison and to keep it from spreading with a tourniquet weren't successful.

By the time the guide got her back down the mountain to the village and the local doctor-chemist did some more blood-letting and released the tourniquet, she was swollen like a barrage balloon. All the village women began official mourning for her and vied with each other in telling tales of the horrible deaths of such serpent bites.

The tales were not Greek to her because she speaks modern Greek fluently after her six years' sojourn there. She was willing to agree with her comforters because, she said, she never before or afterward suffered such agonizing pain.

But she proved to be a great disappointment to her corps of mourners, altho not for long. Because of her recovery she became a sort of local miracle worker herself. The local priest had said that magic had cured her, and the villagers were convinced that she possessed the magic herself. They brought babies to be kissed, sick to be touched.

The innkeeper told every one he had made an American summer resort of the village, and his chief recommendation was that even those who were bitten by the deadly adder didn't die in his inn. He had five daughters, all unmarried. "What a catastrophe," he had exclaimed to Mrs. Daniel. "How can I provide five dowries?" He couldn't, but Ellen Du Poy did, for Calliope, the eldest catastrophe, begged a bit of finery, now an article of miraculous virtue and sold it to an old woman who wanted something of the miracle woman's to insure that her son in America would write to her.

One by one, Calliope disposed of the miraculous one's belongings [unknown to their owner], and coin by coin piled up her dowry. One day, when Mrs. Daniel was nearly well, Calliope asked tenderly for a lock of her hair, which she also sold. By that time, Mrs. Daniel said, the villagers had come to a point where they might quite affectionately and devoutly have started cutting her up in the certainty that a new finger would grow overnight, so she decided she had better leave before it was too late.

The guide who had killed the snake was very loath to have her go because he was making money, charging visitors to look at it. But it was the innkeeper who was most insistent on her staying, at least until she helped get the other four catastrophes married, for Calliope had finally got her man.

Mrs. Daniel, under her maiden name of Ellen Du Poy, has written two novels. This episode may enliven a third.

One of the worst of all defensive errors is to supply the declarer with an entry that he cannot acquire thru his own efforts. In the following hand, for example, East's defense was characterized more by altruism than by shrewdness.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 spade	Pass	2 no trump	Pass
3 spades	Pass	3 no trump	Pass
Pass	Pass

West opened the heart jack; declarer won and immediately took the spade finesse. East won, and having no heart to return, shifted to the six of clubs. Declarer put up the king and led the club queen right back. East won and then made a return that was, to put it mildly, not imaginative. No doubt impressed by the fact that his long club suit was now within one trick of establishment, and feeling that he might get in again with the diamond queen, East doggedly led back the nine of clubs. In so doing, he presented declarer with a trick that could not have been promoted in any other way.

Declarer now ran off the spade suit, which gave him a total of eight tricks. When the last spade was cashed, poor West found his discarding problem unsolvable. Holding the ace-ten of hearts and the ace-jack of diamonds, he had to abandon one card. Whatever he chose would be equally unsatisfactory from his point of view. To blank the heart ace would merely invite declarer to lead dummy's heart, and West then would have to concede the fulfilling trick to the diamond king. To blank the diamond ace would certainly lead to a throw-in play in diamonds, with a subsequent heart trick for the declarer.

If East had taken the pains to count, he might have seen that giving declarer two club tricks would be tantamount to giving him his contract. Declarer already had one heart trick, and five spade tricks were in plain sight. The diamond king, whether or not West had the ace, was bound to win the fulfilling trick—certainly, declarer would not lead away from that card but would lead up to it, or promote an end play that would have the same effect.

Successful defense, then, involved nothing more complicated than keeping declarer out of his own hand. To do this, East could have put dummy in with a spade, or led a diamond. It required very little arithmetical talent to count that if declarer had the diamond ace, any defense was hopeless.

State D. A. R. Meet to Open Here Mar. 15

Plans are moving to completion, under the energetic direction of the general chairman, Mrs. Albert E. Woodruff, for the 1944 state conference of the Daughters of the American Revolution in Illinois, which opens Wednesday, March 15, in the Drake hotel.

Among special guests who are expected at the assembly are Mrs. Samuel J. Campbell of Mount Carroll, treasurer general of the national D. A. R. and a candidate for the presidency general. This is a presidential election year for the national society, whose continental congress will be held from April 14 to 20 in New York. Other visitors will be Miss Helen McMacklin of Salem, vice president general, and Mrs. Vincent W. Koch, Wisconsin state regent.

Prefacing the conference will be the traditional state officers' dinner on the preceding evening, over which Miss Florence Deneen, head of the officers' club, will preside, and for which the regents of the 30 D. A. R. chapters in the 4th division will be hostesses.

Highlighting the entertainment for the officers' party will be a program of monologs by Lillian Drodahl Smith, who specializes in Norwegian characterizations.

Another of the more festive assemblies auxiliary to the conference will be a dinner Wednesday evening, March 15, for the "good citizenship" high school girls, to be held at Tracy's on the Avenue and which Miss Deneen is arranging. Present at the dinner will be Mrs. Ira E. Owen of Petersburg, state chairman of the good citizenship committee. This year 549 high schools in the state have named girls for the D. A. R. annual citation, and one will be chosen at a youth activities session after the dinner to receive a $100 war bond in lieu of the trip to Washington during the continental congress which was the Good Citizen award in peace time.

The annual state dinner is set for Thursday of the conference, and the women are to hear an address that night by T. J. Thomas of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy railroad's committee on economic development.

Presiding over all of the general sessions will be Mrs. J. De Forest Richards, state regent. War work for the Red Cross will, of course, give the conference proper its main theme. Exhibits and motion pictures will augment the Red Cross programs, and Mrs. Gertrude S. H. Galloway, state chairman of Red Cross, has arranged for Paul Edwards to speak at the Thursday afternoon session.

Mr. Edwards, a Red Cross field director, has been in England, Scotland, and Ireland for the last 15 months. Mothers of sons overseas will have the privilege of asking him questions and Mr. Edwards will show an overseas film.

Mrs. Alonzo N. Benn. [U. & U. Photo.]

Mrs. Alonzo Newton Benn, who is state chairman and national vice chairman of the D. A. R. correct use of the flag committee, will hold a flag forum at 3:30 o'clock that afternoon. Mrs. Benn has acquired more than 50 gadgets to illustrate various points of the flag code which she uses in illustration of her informative talk. These and posters will be on display. Mrs. Benn will have a similar forum at the congress in New York.

Mrs. George F. Dasher, state chaplain, will conduct a memorial service for deceased members on the opening morning in the Grand ballroom of the hotel. Round tables will be conducted by Mrs. John F. Dille, national defense chairman, and Mrs. Donald S. Bartlett, who heads the state committee for the D. A. R. Ellis Island project.

This year four state offices are open for election, and the names of four candidates have been presented: Mrs. Thomas Richard Hemmens, Chicago, for vice regent; Mrs. Ole Bly Pace, Farmer City, for treasurer; Mrs. Frank Wirt Disbrow, Bloomington, for corresponding secretary, and Mrs. Carl O. Nyman, Rockford, for librarian.

What are the reasons women volunteer for military service?

Three officers, Lt. Comdr. Philip Solomon, Lt. Meyer Brown, and Lt. [j. g.] M. R. Jones recently reported to the annual meeting of the American Orthopsychiatric society that 91.3 per cent of 1,000 marine corps women's reserve recruits surveyed had a personal reason for enlisting, in addition to the patriotic one.

The officers' study revealed that 26 per cent of the women was attracted by a sense of duty for personal reasons. Three per cent wanted to represent their families, because there were no men members to go into uniform. Eighteen per cent enlisted to share military experience with relatives or sweethearts, and 4 per cent joined to replace or avenge a casualty.

Personal gain attracted the largest group, 37 per cent. All except 10 per cent of these desired further educational training, and a few joined to lose or gain weight.

A desire to "develop personality" caused 8.7 per cent to enlist, and a few recruits said they had been "spoiled" and wanted to learn to take discipline. The glamour of a uniform, new places, and new people appealed to 6.3 per cent.

Nineteen per cent fled from civilian life into the service. They were "bored with their jobs," and 4 per cent claimed that civilian life was no longer fun "with everybody gone."

Women can better be spared from civilian duties for certain tasks in the military forces than can men between 38 and 45 who have family responsibilities, 1st Lt. Ethel Kuhn Barnett, WAC recruiting officer in Illinois, said recently.

She issued the statement following one made in Washington, D. C., by National Selective Service Director Hershey, in which he said that military service is "the basic obligation of every man 19 thru 45."

Women can be used to replace men now occupying desk jobs in the army, Lt. Barnett said. Failure of WAC recruiting to meet quotas, altho enlistments have risen sharply during the last four months, has prevented the filling of requests for women from army posts, she added.

There are demands for 600,000 women for this purpose, a number greater than the authorized strength of the WAC, which is 200,000. The present strength of the corps, based on the last official figure, is 62,000.

Women Artists Exhibiting at Cordon Club

By Eleanor Jewett.

A number of new exhibits are ushering in Chicago's famous windy month. At the Cordon club, Fine Arts building, a particularly timely and interesting show has been installed. The Cordon galleries are sponsoring an exhibit of paintings by women artists who have won prizes at the Art institute over the years. The show includes early prize winners like Anna Lynch and Lucie Hartrath [Pauline Palmer and Anna Lee Stacey might well have been included too] to more recent winners, among whom are Gertrude Abercrombie may be counted one of the most consistent.

In many instances the prize winning canvas is on view; where that is impossible a picture painted at the same period is hung. This is one of those shows that take one back charmingly thru the years and give one an excellent background upon which to formulate a decided opinion as to whether art has progressed or retrogressed in the last quarter century. Modern art has its points, but likewise the painting of 1920 had its desirable qualities. It is any one's guess as to which will be most appreciated in 2044.

The Cordon exhibit will continue thru March.

Last Friday saw the opening of two exhibitions at the Arts club, Wrigley tower. These exhibitions, by the way, in answer to many letters on the subject, are open to the public. The artists involved in the current show are Grigory Gluckmann and Herbert Matter.

An exhibition of the work of members of the Porter County Art association of Indiana may be found to March 11 in the Club Woman's Bureau, Mandel Brothers. It is not a large show but for its size has a number of good things. The water colors by A. C. Gondring are strong. One of his four entries was painted in Australia where he has been stationed for some time. Paul W. Ashby offers a group of little paintings, priced absurdly low. "Moonflower" and "Christmas Night" are two of his charming little studies.

Caroll Bailey Barr, Mathilda Lunbeck and Hazel Hannell contribute several beautifully handled flower pictures and Miss Hannell has an interesting group of ceramics. J. H. Euston, Ruth Bicknell, Andrene Kauffman, Leathe Worthington, and V. M. S. Hannell are other artists who add to the variety and interest of the show. In the large Tea Room gallery, Tom Wilder has a stunning exhibit of recent paintings. His work is always popular.

Probably the most beautiful exhibition in town for March is the brilliant showing of paintings by Aston Knight, which opens this afternoon with a tea at the Findlay galleries, Michigan av. at Van Buren st., and opens tomorrow to the public to continue thru March 31. Mr. Knight is a noted painter; there is scarcely a French decoration or medal of importance that he has not won. His list of honors reads like a tale from an international romance. He is equally famous on this side of the Atlantic. His father was the celebrated landscape painter, Ridgeway Knight.

Aston Knight was in Paris [he had long been a resident of France] at the time of the Nazi invasion and just barely managed to escape, carrying with him many of his paintings. Part of the unusual interest attached to his current show is the fact that he will be in the galleries and tell of his exciting adventures. Those will seem very out of character contrasted with the great beauty and serene charm of his landscapes and water scenes.

The Metropolitan Museum of Art, New York, has currently placed on view a magnificent canvas by Rembrandt, "Lady with a Fan," the gift of Mrs. Francis Neilson of Chicago.

The 22nd annual art exhibit of the works of north shore artists will open March 28 at the Woman's Club of Evanston to continue thru April 3.

Three new exhibitions have been placed on view in the print rooms of the Art institute, where they will remain for several months. In Gallery 13 are 22 drawings and lithographs by George Bellows. Some of his most famous boxing subjects are included — "Stag at Sharkey's," "Dempsey and Firpo," and "Introducing John Sullivan."

A group of abstract and semiabstract color woodcuts by Louis Schanker has been hung in Gallery 16. The prints are decorative in character, possessed of vivid color and frequently witty in subject matter or manner of treatment.

In Gallery 12 an extensive exhibition of French prints from the period of Louis XV. has been installed. Fragonard and Watteau dominated the art of France during these years and the prints are plentifully supplied with shepherds and shepherdesses, little ruffles and bows, all the extra touches of adornment which gave the name "Rococo" to the pictures of the days just before the French revolution.

Fashions and Fancy

By Judith Cass

In bright contrast to the gray and dreary weather outside was the sprinkling of spring flowers and motifs among the hats of members and guests of the Illinois Opera Guild, when they met recently at the Arts club to hear Robert Weede, baritone of the Metropolitan Opera association, in a morning concert. It was particularly in recognition of the work the guild is doing at the Great Lakes Naval hospital, where it has equipped and maintains a music room for convalescent service men, that Mr. Weede came from New York to sing, and a highlight of the program was his presentation of his own recordings to the guild president, Mrs. James G. McMillan, for use in this recreational room. Mrs. McMillan was wearing one of the most interesting hats of the day, a confection of snow white straw fabric with red velling on which were cunningly arranged numerous little kittens of red silk with extraordinarily large and coquettish eyes. With this she wore a navy wool suit, one lapel cleverly faced in red and the other in green, and the bright fabrics of these facings were repeated in duotoned pockets on the jacket. Her white blouse was tucked in front, the round neckline flat and tailored. Following the musical, which threatened to become an afternoon affair so insistently did the audience request encores, there was a bit of difficulty when Mrs. McMillan and Mrs. William Ragland [Edith Mason] conferred, heads close together. Mrs. McMillan's kitten decor and the yellow flowers on Mrs. Ragland's pale green hat became entangled, the former emerging triumphant with a yellow blossom as prize. However, tho minus one flower, the prettiness of Mrs. Ragland's hat remained unharmed, and Mr. Weede, who sat between the two women at luncheon, appropriated the bright blossom as a boutonniere for his lapel.

The times for wearing dinner dresses are few and far between these days, but occasionally at some festive party in a private home the feminine guests arrive in something long and gala. Perfect for dinner at home is the powder blue long sleeved gown girdled in silver that is flattery to Mrs. Stuart Sherman's striking black hair and dark complexion. The skirt is full and cut on flowing lines, and the dress undoubtedly was in the baggage that accompanied Mrs. Sherman to Arizona at the end of last month. A sartorial note of interest is struck by her husband when he appears in an oxford gray business suit with its accompanying double-breasted vest of the same material. A hint of pastel blue in the form of flashing sequin insertions from the hipline down brightened the svelte black dinner gown with short sleeves which Mrs. E. Franklin Motch wore to a recent dinner party. The skirt of the dress was draped cleverly toward the sequin trimming, and the tightness of the pencil slim skirt was relieved by a knee high slit. Also slashed to the knee was the attractive dinner frock of Mrs. Theodore Tieken, which combined an American beauty bodice with elongated peplum and a vivid blue skirt. The back of the blouse was slashed from shoulder to waist line, and there was gold sequin embroidery here and there.

W.'s Loop center business and professional department committee, headed by Miss Frances Jacobson, is the hostess group, and actively assisting in plans for the party are representatives of the four clubs of business girls which meet at the center.

Miss Beverly Boyd of Oak Park has arranged the program, which will consist of songs and instrumental music, dance demonstrations, and a dramatic skit. Miss Harriet Hindelwicz is in charge of decorations, and Miss Adele Grosscup, refreshments. The invitation chairman, Miss Charlotte Schmidt, has included on her guest list offices where Japanese-American and Negro girls work side by side with white girls.

Chicagoans in Palm Beach Social Whirl

By Helen Van Hoy Smith.

PALM BEACH, FLA.

Chicago has been much in the limelight during the past week. Its residents, now temporarily transplanted in Palm Beach, have given some of the best parties of the season, while many have been prominently identified with several large projects.

Mrs. Joseph M. Cudahy is chairman of the exhibition of shells and tropical plant material, which the Palm Beach Garden club is presenting at the Society of Four Arts. This exhibition opened on Wednesday with a benefit preview and tea. Proceeds will be used to provide flowers for service men hospitalized in this area.

Now Palm Beach would certainly never lay claim to being a beach combers' paradise, but this showing leaves no doubt that sea shells, fish scales, and palm fronds are invading society. The shells, which include several famous loan exhibitions, are shown in their relation to art and architecture. Mrs. Donald McLennan has charge of plant material, while Mrs. Charles S. Davis has sent various rare potted plants for this show.

Adjoining the Four Arts building are eight exquisite miniature gardens, maintained by individual members of the garden club. Four of these gardens were used as settings for the serving of refreshments on Wednesday. Mrs. Lorenzo E. Woodhouse served tea Chinese style in her garden of smiling harmony, a rare and beautiful plot which captures the mood of its title. Mrs. Clifford Vail Brokaw served tea in the formal green and white of her British colonial garden, while Mrs. Joseph Frederick Gunster served coffee in her own fragrant moonlight garden, which is so planted that it sends out a nocturnal symphony of perfume to mingle with the moonlight.

Mrs. William Quinn of Chicago, mother of Mrs. Le Ray Berdeau, was quite the belle of Palm Beach on Tuesday when the Berdeaus entertained in her honor with a tea at Villa Taday in celebration of her 84th birthday. Guests were received in the stunning patio which overlooks the lake. A sunset in a modernistic fanfare of colors was matched in brilliance only by the list of guests who came to congratulate Mrs. Quinn. These included Lily Pons and her husband, Andre Kostelanetz; Mrs. Maria Pons, Mr. and Mrs. Drew Pearson, Mrs. John Charles Thomas, the Hon. and Mrs. Joseph E. Davies, Mr. and Mrs. Sumner Welles, the Luxembourg minister and Mme. Legallais, Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Davis, Mrs. Robert Henry Ritchie, Mrs. Frank Osgood Butler, Arthur Bradley Campbell, and many others.

Mrs. Ritchie, who is spending the season here as the guest of Mrs. Butler, entertained 20 guests in the orange gardens of the Everglades club last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Vaughan C. Spalding have as their guest at their villa on Elvedado road, Mrs. Austin Niblack of Lake Forest. Miss Helen Gurley of Chicago is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Johnson on Manana lane. Mrs. William Snyder also is the guest of Chicago friends in Palm Beach.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry N. Gifford, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Herendeen, Mrs. Edward Scott Beck and Mrs. William Howard Lyon were among the Chicagoans attending a buffet supper and card party given by Mrs. John Gefaell.

Mr. and Mrs. Gray Foster, Mr. and Mrs. Varick Foster, Mr. and Mrs. John Wheeler Peck and Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Spalding III. gave an informal dinner at Sandy Loam farm, having 30 guests.

Mrs. Carleton R. Dodge gave a dinner at the Patio and guests included Mr. and Mrs. Sigurd Olsen and Dr. John Jay Ireland of Chicago.

Mr. and Mrs. Mansfield gave a luncheon on the Everglades golf terrace where fellow Chicagoans among the guests included Mr. and Mrs. John D. Allan, Mr. and Mrs. John B. Gallagher, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph J. Kelley, Mrs. R. A. Cavenaugh, Mrs. John Bowen, and Mrs. Richard D. Jarnagin.

Mrs. Bruce Strong and daughter, Cara, have arrived to be guests of Mrs. Strong's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Franklin Miller, on Australian av. Maj. Strong is stationed at Ogden, Utah.

WED IN WEST

Mrs. Dennis Martin Mitchell, whose recent marriage to Lt. (j.g.) Mitchell of the navy, son of Mrs. Thomas Hartnett Mitchell of Staunton, Va., took place at St. Mary's church in San Francisco, Cal. The former Miss Muriel Elizabeth Jacobi, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Jacobi of Wilmette, attended Central college in Fayette, Mo., and Marywood School for Girls. The bridegroom, who returned to duty with the fleet following a wedding trip in California, is a graduate of Mount Saint Mary's college in Maryland.

Phoenix Guests Dance Attracts Gold Diggers

By Ruth Dickinson.

PHOENIX, ARIZ. The annual Gold Diggers' ball was held Saturday night at the Camelback inn. There was straw on the floor and bales of hay for the spectators to sit on. At midnight a miners' lunch was served on checkered tablecloths with candles stuck in beer bottles furnishing the only light. The party got off to a good start with an "open house," given by the Leo Hoffmans, who served champagne to all comers.

Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Wolff of Elgin returned to the inn just in time to lead the grand march, dressed as Mandy and Rastus. Mrs. Jay Wescott won the prize for the funniest costume, which was a dig at our bad weather and consisted of a suit of red flannel underwear with a sable cape and a hat made of cactus covered with snow. Mrs. A. Frederick Gartz won the prize for the best Spanish costume and a very handsome donna she made in her black lace dress and mantilla.

After the grand march there were some clever stunts put on by the various guests. Marcy Wescott [Mrs. C. Nicholas Johnson Jr.] did "The Surrey with the Fringe on Top" with "Brad," the head wrangler, at the inn and nearly stopped the party. She had been offered this part in "Oklahoma," but her husband had already insisted that she retire from the stage. A linen cart was used for the surrey.

Dr. and Mrs. David Fitzgerald arrived in time for the party, and he played the part of the parson in one of the sketches entitled "The Weddin' of Little Nell." Phoebe Mizen played the role of the "bride's mother," Maw Hawkins. Leo Hoffman was the shotgun toting bride's father, while Mrs. Burr Kulp was the bride. Miss Alice Sexton and Miss Rosalie Casey managed to stop off for the Gold Diggers' ball, en route to California where they will attend the wedding of Martha Schueller of Chicago to Hamilton Herman of Highland Park.

One might as well admit it, it has rained continually for one week. Phoenicians say the rain came from California but wherever it came from, it is here. The resort managers have reached the point that they run and hide when a guest approaches. Anyway, its been a good excuse for many cocktail parties. Mrs. Frederick Woodruff began the week with one at the Arizona Biltmore for the Edward A. Cudahys who left the following day for Palm Springs, and for Mr. Woodruff who just arrived. Mrs. Walter Ware also had one in honor of Mr. Ware's birthday.

The Robert Forgans entertained in honor of their 40th wedding anniversary on Friday. Mrs. Roland Keyes entertained Saturday evening in honor of Mrs. Sallie Dunbar. The Sterling Hebberds of Phoenix gave a cocktail and dinner party the first of the week at El Charro in honor of the Cudahys. Their guests included Mr. and Mrs. Henry Sturgis, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Woodruff, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Bell, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Ware, and Mr. and Mrs. James R. Offield.

One of the largest parties was that given Thursday at the Biltmore by Miss Nora Carney in honor of the Charles F. Glores. Mr. and Mrs. Roy Osgood also entertained on their 41st wedding anniversary. Mrs. Elsa Bartholomay has joined her sister, Mrs. Henry Sturgis.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Press Hodgkins have just arrived at the Biltmore for their annual visit. Mrs. Louise de Koven Phelps is there with her son, Peter. Mr. and Mrs. Glen Traer have also returned for the spring season. Mr. and Mrs. Silas Strawn are vacationing at the hotel.

Also recently arrived and trying to find the Arizona sun, are Mr. and Mrs. Britton I. Budd, the Frank R. Elliots, the Hugh Foresmans, Lt. and Mrs. Gardner Brown, Mr. and Mrs. Philip Block Jr., and Judge and Mrs. Isadore Brown.

I don't know what the Jokake inn would have done this week without Mrs. William Mitchell who keeps things lively with her music. Mrs. Mitchell not only plays beautifully but she can, and does, play anything any one can hum. So between Mrs. Mitchell's playing, round robin pingpong and many bridge games, the guests have survived the week.

Mrs. Chester Sargent has returned with her daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. William Weiboldt, and their two small children, Billy and Ann. Billy was here last year, so takes great pride in showing his superior knowledge to Ann. Whenever the rain stops for a few minutes, Dr. and Mrs. Omar Fareed, Mrs. Glore, and Mr. Mitchell are out on the tennis court batting a few balls hopefully about. Mr. and Mrs. Chester Lehr of Peoria, arrived on Saturday and Mr. and Mrs. Stuart Sherman are expected the middle of the week, with their two children.

Literary Clubs Plan Meetings During Week

Mrs. Thomas F. Charlton.

Altho emphasis always is on the literary when Friends of American Writers gather each Wednesday in club quarters at the Fine Arts building, members and guests have come to anticipate almost as eagerly as the program itself, the tea hour afterward with its warmth, informality, and opportunity for friendly conversation.

This week's tea, which follows a dramatized book review, to be presented by club members at 1:30 o'clock, will again find Mrs. Thomas Charlton, who is rounding out a two year term as social chairman, in charge. It has been under her ingenious direction that this portion of the program has proved increasingly successful. Assisting her at the tea table this week will be Mrs. T. E. Mead, Mrs. C. H. Richardson, Mrs. John L. Baker, and Mrs. C. P. Van Schaack.

Mrs. Edward R. Walter will be narrator for the review, and her supporting cast will include Mrs. A. Everett Joslyn, Mrs. William W. Weldon, Mrs. Francis D. Howard, Mrs. William J. Bargen, and Mrs. David H. Gifford.

Another literary group also gathering this week at the Fine Arts building is the Chicago chapter of the Catholic Poetry society, whose meeting at 8 o'clock tomorrow night will bring as guest speakers the Rev. Albert Durant, literary critic and script writer, and Dr. Cecil Williams, author and professor of American literature. Father Durant's talk will be concerned with "Poetry in the Theater," and Dr. Williams will discuss his book, "In Time of War."

Famed Ski Run on Pikes Peak Again Is Open

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. [Special].—News of interest to ski fans over the nation is contained in the announcement by the Pikes Peak Ski club that the 11,500 foot Glen Cove ski run is now open to civilian and military skiers—after a two year shutdown due to the war.

One of the world's most famous ski courses, the Pikes Peak run was shut down two years ago due to lack of highway equipment to keep Pikes Peak highway, main artery to the course, open for the heavy winter snows at that altitude.

Thanks to assistance of the army, whose thousands of men training near here needed such sports, equipment was made available and the course opened. The highway is now in excellent condition and skiers report the snow is deep and powdery, ideal for skiing. The two giant electric tows are in operation.

Snow remains on the Pikes Peak course late in the season. Good skiing has been enjoyed on the Fourth of July in several past seasons and the snow is consistently good until June.

Several spring meets are being planned for the Pikes Peak course in the near future. The course is only an hour's ride by auto from downtown Colorado Springs.

Howey-in-the-Hills is 35 miles northwest of Orlando, in the central part of Florida, a section famous for beautiful scenery, rolling hills, and lakes.

Water Vital to Development of Southwest

TUCSON, ARIZ. Time was when the history of the west was the story of the quest for gold. That apparently ended when the gold started going back into the ground again, at Fort Knox.

The search for water, however, still has a great deal to do with the story of the development of the southwest. And that story has been very much in the news of late, a special session of the Arizona legislature just having finished ratification of the state's contract for delivery of Colorado river water, 2,800,000 acre feet of it per year.

The difference between habitation and the barren stretches of the southern Arizona desert largely is a matter of water. It rained one day last week, the first good precipitation recorded in the vicinity of the Old Pueblo for nearly a year. Such a day darkens tourist countenances, but it brightens the leathery visage of the cattle man for it means forage.

The visitors accepted it smilingly however. The Arizona inn gardens were rendered more verdant by the day's shower, and the possibilities of lovelier cactus blossoms in May were enhanced. Chicago guests at the inn at present are Mrs. Donald MacMurray, Mrs. Marjorie Spiers, and Mr. and Mrs. James M. Hopkins.

At the Bar B R this week are Mr. and Mrs. Thomas B. Hunter of Lake Forest. They were joined at the ranch for the week-end by their son, Tommy, who is enrolled this winter at the Southern Arizona school for boys out Sabina canyon way.

Mr. and Mrs. Francis R. Dickinson of Chicago have just arrived at Silver Bell ranch for a winter holiday. They join a congenial group of Chicagoans at the McLean resort, among them the Stephen Gregorys —Mrs. Dickinson and Mrs. Gregory are sisters—Mr. and Mrs. Erwin Gilruth, Warren Davis and Peter Harper of Winnetka, and Mr. and Mrs. Ayres Boal of Winnetka, who have returned to the Old Pueblo for the second time this season.

Over at the Triangle T., near Dragoon, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Lindstrom of Chicago are spending a winter vacation. Dr. Ralph Grim of the University of Illinois also is at Triangle T.

At El Rancho de los Robles, near Oracle, guests include Mrs. James A. Drain Jr., with her children, Ann and David, of Michigan City; and Mrs. Thomas M. Blackwood and daughter, Amy, also of Michigan City. Bart Bushnell of Danville and Mrs. Herbert E. Zipprodt and daughters, Barbara and Connie, are likewise at the ranch.

Mrs. Frank Berry of Chicago, who has been wintering with the Archie Augustines at Granada Court, will remain in Tucson another month before returning home.

At Rancho de los Lomas in the Tucson mountains a number of Chicagoland folk are vacationing. Mrs. Rena Babcock of Evanston recently arrived for a three months' vacation. Mr. and Mrs. Curtis H. Bevington, with their son, Curtis Jr., of Elmhurst, are at the ranch. Miss Edna Wrase and Miss Gladys Jones of Chicago are also at the ranch.

At the Hacienda del Sol this week are Mr. and Mrs. Ralph L. Bogan, together with their boys, Michael and Ralph Jr., of Evanston. Horseback riding into the mountains, for the entire family, and golfing at El Rio, for Mr. Bogan, make up their vacation schedule. Others at the hacienda are Mr. and Mrs. R. Douglas Stuart, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Warden and their daughter, Rhoda, the Kenneth Clouds, Mrs. Mildred Brown, Mrs. Benjamin Peters, and Mrs. Frank Zeman, all of Chicago; Mrs. Ernest Reitsch of Rockford, Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Young of Bloomington, and Mr. and Mrs. Foster Beansley and daughter, Martha Jane, of Kenilworth.

This Home-Mixed Syrup Relieves Coughs Quickly

Needs No Cooking. Saves Money.

The surprise of your life is waiting for you, in your own kitchen, when it comes to the relief of coughs due to colds. In just a moment, you can mix a cough syrup that gives you about 4 times as much for your money, and is amazing for quick results.

Make a syrup by stirring 2 cups of granulated sugar and one cup of water a few moments, until dissolved. No cooking needed—it's no trouble at all. Or you can use corn syrup or liquid honey, instead of sugar syrup.

Then put 2½ ounces of Pinex (obtained from any druggist) into a pint bottle. Add your syrup, and you have a full pint of really wonderful cough medicine. It never spoils, lasts a long time, and children love it.

This home mixture takes right hold of a cough in a way that means business. It loosens the phlegm, soothes the irritated membranes, and quickly eases soreness and difficult breathing.

Pinex is a special compound of proven ingredients, in concentrated form, well known for prompt action in coughs and bronchial irritations. Money refunded if it doesn't please you in every way.

Gray Spring Suits Feature Smart Details

By Rea Seeger.

There's a distinctive elegance and sleek perfection to all costumes worked in tones of gray. This season some of the top flight designers have chosen gray as their leading color for their smartest spring originals. But this spring gray woolens, rayons, silks, and half and half combinations of precious wool and other threads are true neutral grays, most of them the precise half and half weaves of black and white yarn that make a perfect gray.

All the difficult grays are gone: gray tinged with blue, pink, or yellow, all problem shades for complexions. The one good thing war has worked for the lovers of gray, as a background color or basic color round which to assemble a most unusual array of costume accessories, is this lavish assortment of gray materials, achieved without complicated dyeing formulae.

Some of the smartest two piece suits are now here, ideal buys for shoppers to select now for wear under fur coats or jackets, later with furs, and still later with the high colored accessories of late spring. There are tailored suits with unimpeachable evidences of expert simplicity.

These include such effective stripes as shadow, chalk, and the more definite ones of white, black, red, blue, and brown . . . the white stripes being the most popular. Clean cut, precision tailored, these are the suits long the special love of travelers and career girls. Such twosome units may be worn with other jackets, skirts, even simple tailored dresses of silk or linen.

A second choice in suits includes the tailored models softened with edgings of braid, or self-material bands expertly stitched in scroll or bias patterns. Also included are the brief jacket suits. These jackets are really snappy, short boleros with long sleeves that turn back to show the contrasting blouse worn underneath.

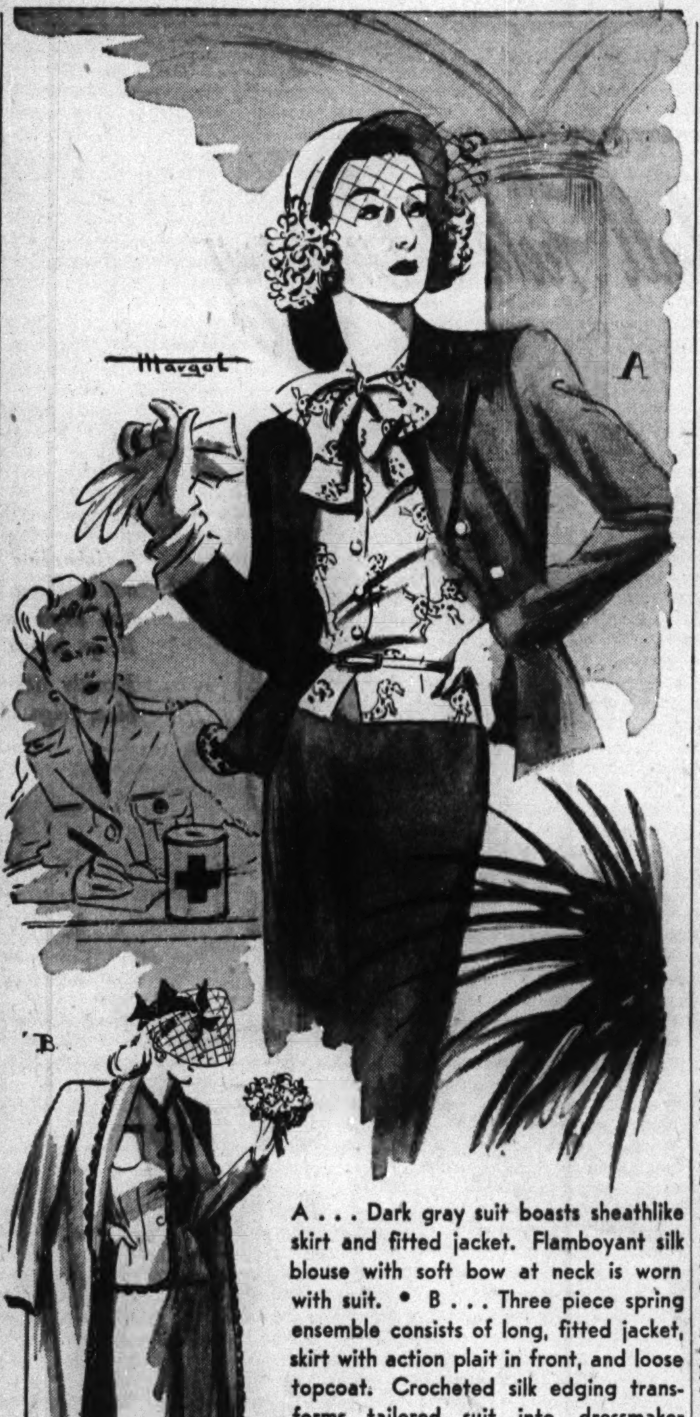
Many of these softened classics boast the same fitted body lines of the spartan plain tailleurs, but the braid-bound edges, the narrow yarn fringe along a fake pocket and around a shawl collar change them into obliging models to wear anywhere from dawn till dusk. Some have the inevitable companion topcoat, likewise trimmed or embellished to match the suit. And the threesomes of suit and topcoat are unending, whether you ask for a coat of the same material as the suit, the same details as the suit, whether you crave contrast in color, pattern, or length.

Costumes of blouse and suit provide a third and wide choice in the "gray" collections. Notwithstanding the edicts that each be priced separately, blouse so much and suit so much, they are definitely costumes that should be purchased and worn as one.



A . . . Dark gray suit boasts sheathlike skirt and fitted jacket. Flamboyant silk blouse with soft bow at neck is worn with suit. • B . . . Three piece spring ensemble consists of long, fitted jacket, skirt with action plait in front, and loose topcoat. Crocheted silk edging transforms tailored suit into dressmaker model.

These and other models are available in Chicago shop. For information, Sup. 0200.

Writer Prints Selections for Child's Album

By Gladys Huntington Bevans.

[Copyright: 1944: By News Syndicate Co., Inc.]

Many times I have said in this column that our young sons and daughters do more thinking and have deeper feelings than we realize—or than we give them credit for. One more tangible evidence of that is to be found in this letter, which came to me not long ago:

"Dear Mrs. Bevans: Quite a while ago, in your column, I read a poem about the things a mother must and does give up for her children. I remember two lines of it, if this will be of any help to you, in securing a copy of this for me:

"'You are the trip I did not take,
You are the pearls I cannot buy.'

"That is all I remember, but I think it is one of the most beautiful poems I have ever read.

"I have a daughter 14 years old, who is graduating, and she would like me to write this in her autograph book, so she may have it all thru the years.

"Would you be good enough to send me a copy of this poem?"

The poem, which is called "To My Child," is by Anne Campbell, and reads:

You are the trip I did not take;
You are the pearls I cannot buy;
You are my blue Italian lake;
You are my piece of foreign sky.

So, I said to myself when I read the letter I've quoted, here is a young girl who cares what goes into her autograph book.

Ordinarily I have thought of the poems and selections that mothers and fathers write at graduation for their children as being something they themselves think beautiful or interesting. In fact, it was a request from a father of foreign parentage for a poem to write in his young American daughter's autograph album at her graduation which resulted in a collection I now have. Here are suggested verses:

This above all—to thine own self be true;
And it must follow, as the night the day,
Thou canst not then be false to any man. —Shakespeare.

If one life shines,
The life next to it
Will catch the light.

Youth's for an hour,
Beauty's a flower,
But love is the jewel that wins the world. —Moira O'Neill.

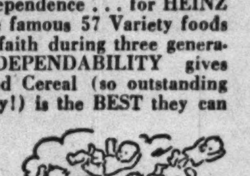
A Weekly Sponsored Column of Things Advertised and Interesting.

New York, Mar. 5th. Whether you're agonizing over those income tax forms yourself or have shoved the whole printer's disgrace into the hands of someone who claims to be good at de-ciphering . . you still need a shot-in-the-arm to help you through. And why not a new hat? It's the first of March . . . and high time every woman's thoughts turned right to her head! Good news, too . . . you'll find hats that don't require a new, special hair-do! The revival of natural or "flat-top" hair styles means that you can wear nearly all of the spring chapeau styles without rushing out for a special pompadour, roll or wave. And now let's see what's what on the BUY-LINES' roll for this week's shopping tips . . .

Nancy Sasser

Budget
Budget

No matter whether our budget is encyclopedic in size or a pocket-midget . . . every one of us is quality-conscious today! Wartime does that . . . teaches us the necessity of avoiding waste and depending on the most reliable of BUY-LINES. And that's why I think you'll agree that the complete line of quality baby foods made by the H. J. HEINZ Company is most deserving of wise mothers' dependence . . . for HEINZ has devoted 75 years in the preparation of the famous 57 Variety foods and thereby won and held American women's faith during three generations! This RELIABILITY and proven DEPENDABILITY gives Mothers assurance that the HEINZ Pre-Cooked Cereal (so outstanding for its flavor, fine texture and easy digestibility!) is the BEST they can buy their babies. There are 17 nutritive HEINZ Strained Foods for infants, too . . . and 12 Junior Foods for the days when baby graduates from strained-food products! You'll find a complete line of HEINZ Baby Foods at your Grocer's. Ask him for them if you value RELIABILITY and DEPENDABILITY!



Here's the most exciting BUY - LINE in many a month . . . SPRED! I almost hate to call it a paint . . . because it really revolutionizes home-painting and removes "bugaboos" from dip-and-brush jobs so you can "re-do" your rooms yourself! SPRED requires only water for mixing, covers beautifully in one coat, takes only ½ hour for drying, has no "painty" odor and gives a washable, fresh newness in any of the beautiful shades you choose! Best of all,—SPRED slides on RIGHT OVER WALLPAPER, eliminating expense, delay, and bother of paper-stripping. So put on your hat,—go to a GLIDDEN Paint Dealer for a gallon of SPRED . . . mix with water, dip in a broad brush and go to work! It slaps on easily, without sizing or sealers, is finished and dry ½ hour after painting! $3 per gallon!

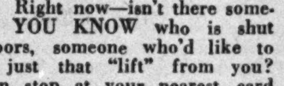
If you've ever been kept indoors . . . sick and feeling blue, or maybe in a hospital . . . then you know how much it means to receive a word of cheer from your friends! It's then you appreciate those friendly greeting cards . . . the "lift" they give, for it means a heap to know you're not forgotten! Right now—isn't there someone YOU KNOW who is shut indoors, someone who'd like to get just that "lift" from you? Then stop at your nearest card shop tomorrow and pick up a few cheery RUST CRAFT Cards . . . select some EXTRAS at the same time, so you can send a card every few days, or perhaps to someone else who's tucked in bed, either ill or convalescing. Your friendly card of cheer may speed her (or his) recovery. Doctors, they say, prescribe cards—they're good for their patients! But remember, ask for RUST CRAFT Cards!

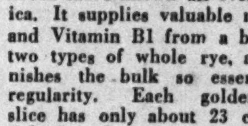


Want to know the rewards of a dependable filter? Then ask the pretty milkmaid . . ask the woman with baking-magic in her fingers . . . ask the flier whose plane performs equally well in desert, steppe or mountain regions! They'll tell you about what a filter or sifter means from PRACTICAL experience! Then ask the woman who smokes a VICEROY Cigarette . . . and she'll tell you what PLEASURE its unique filter tip brings! That's because the efficient filter checks those tobacco irritants that tend to irritate the throat . . . leaves mild, clean smoke that comes from the choicest blend of fragrant Turkish and Domestic tobaccos. In addition, VICEROY'S Filter Tip firmly holds the tobacco IN the cigarette, eliminating crumbs in your mouth and on your teeth, and littering your handbag. Ask your Tobacconist for VICEROY Cigarettes!

If you could swap your complexion for HERS . . . bet you would! But since nature didn't provide for such changes . . . you'd better do the next best thing and do all you can to help your own skin appear more baby-fresh, smooth and blush-pretty! At any price, you simply can't beat EDNA WALLACE HOPPER'S Homogenized Facial Cream . . . it lubricates dry, rough and fading skin and helps it appear firmer, fresher! Ask your Cosmetic Counter for it . . . briskly pat it over your face and throat with upward, outward strokes. Leave on 8 minutes . . . then see how the "at home" facial you've given yourself has given you a thrilling "beauty lift"! HOPPER'S Facial Cream is inexpensive, but oh, so rewarding!

Weight—Worried?

Did you know that there's a bread that's particularly popular in get-slim diets? It's RY-KRISP . . . the crisp, delicious whole grain bread that's known all over America. It supplies valuable minerals and Vitamin B1 from a blend of two types of whole rye, and furnishes the bulk so essential to regularity. Each golden-brown slice has only about 23 calories! Ask your Grocer for this unusually delicious and wholesome bread . . . wonderful to serve with soups, salads, snacks and as an every meal bread. You'll love the hearty rye flavor and appreciate its wax-wrapped package that keeps RY-KRISP fresh indefinitely!

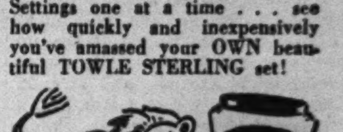


None of that putting off 'til tomorrow that which can be done Johnny-on-the-spot, when it comes to polishing pots and pans . . . not if CLUB Aluminum Cleaner is right within reach! First time you use it, bet you'll grin like the housewife in the ads! . . . and thank us for news of this new kitchen BUY-LINE, especially designed by the makers of famous CLUB ALUMINUM utensils. Stained and dulled surfaces respond with the greatest of ease to this sudsy cleaning powder . . for it polishes AS it does away with dreary spots and leaves a gleam to be proud of. Safe, easy, s-p-e-e-d-y . . . CLUB ALUMINUM Cleaner is a MUST for the kitchen! Ask for it at Grocery, Hardware, Drug, and Department Stores!

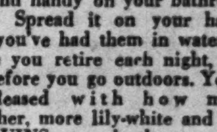
Here's just what you've been looking for . . . a lipstick refill you can fit right into your YARDLEY Bond Street metal case . . . or use just as it is in its own colorful, lacquered container! Cost for this YARDLEY Lipstick Refill is only 60c . . . in Cherry, Vivid, Holly Red, Red Burgundy, Full Red, or Red Fuchsia. The trick part is the collar of wax paper . . . perforated in two rows. This acts as an extra stabilizer when the stick is used in its durable container . . . a protector of clean fingers if you're fitting it into your standard metal case! I know you'll want this new and economical beauty-help . . . and you'll find it at finer shops where famous YARDLEY Products are sold!

You're "on the beam" . . .

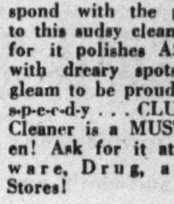
. . . if you think of sterling silver in terms of something PRECIOUS . . . for solid silver is a life-time treasure! But if you think of it in terms of beyond-your-means luxury, you're dead WRONG! Ask your Jeweler to show you the TOWLE Sterling Silver Place Settings. Little more than $20 is the cost for 6 essential pieces . . . a sum you frequently spend for a dress, draperies, etc! Such a small investment for STERLING makes it wrong to accept a substitute. To help you buy, there's the TOWLE War Bond Plan. Ask your Jeweler about it! Buy TOWLE Place Settings one at a time . . . see how quickly and inexpensively you've amassed your OWN beautiful TOWLE STERLING set!



Beware the Lion of March . . . winds-a-bluster, chilling changes! There's a special menace to your hand-beauty in them . . . UNLESS you let PACQUINS help safeguard against chap and reddening effects of exposure. So easily done . . . just keep a jar of this fragrant, snow-white cream near your kitchen sink and handy on your bathroom shelf! Spread it on your hands after you've had them in water . . . before you retire each night, and just before you go outdoors. You'll be pleased with how much smoother, more lily-white and soft PACQUINS can make them appear! Cost is low at Department, Drug and 10c Stores . . . ask for this famous hand-beauty cream!



Those days when we'd rather be alone with feminine "misery" are gone . . . for who among us can afford in wartime to give way to this old-fashioned defeatism once every month? I suggest AMOLIN Personal Deodorant Powder as help No. 1—a complete sanitary deodorant that also guards against chafing and friction, AMOLIN sifts on, —a fine, cooling powder that won't clog finest mesh or feel sticky or greasy. Try it . . . see if you don't agree! AMOLIN Deodorant Powder is the name! Ask your Druggist for it!



If you knew there was something you could do to relieve the dreary waiting of a single American prisoner of war . . you'd move heaven and earth to do it! If you knew you could help the wounded boy just brought into a dressing station, you'd forget everything else . . . and pitch in! If you found that you could relieve the dire distress unexpectedly visited on the family of a soldier away at war . . . you'd try your best! But only your prayers can span global space . . . AND the RED CROSS! But the Red Cross IS you . . . freely dispensing food, bandages, blood, cigarettes, and the more personal tangibles of sympathy, understanding, hope and comfort. It is an extension of YOU . . . wherever there's a need, because YOU support the RED CROSS in its work all over the world! So give . . . and give generously to its War Fund Drive this month. The Red Cross depends wholly on individual financial support for helping those you love most in all the world! Help them to give the help you'd give anything to give personally! This is the message to you this week from the makers of SANI-FLUSH and MEL'O . . . not a BUY-LINE . . . but a GIVE-LINE!

Plentiful Foods Add Nutriment to War Menus

By Mary Meade.

[Copyright: 1944: By The Chicago Tribune.]

In our third winter of war we're blessed with an abundance of most of our really important foods. Eggs are rolling to market in an avalanche, and selling below ceiling prices. Potatoes crowd bins and basements all over the country. Citrus fruits never were more available to all income groups. And bright heads of green, mineral and vitamin bearing cabbage are part of the largest crop on record.

Before the American housewife learned to cook cabbage, this poor vegetable acquired a bad reputation. It used to be cooked for hours at a time, smelling up the kitchen and the whole house, turning gray and flabby, tasting strong and unpleasant to many palates. This kind of cooking destroyed the vitamins in cabbage and often made it indigestible. Cabbage, when overcooked, undergoes actual decomposition, and becomes a sorry caricature of itself.

Few cooks cling to their old cabbage cooking ideas. Most of us have become vitamin and mineral conscious at least to the extent that we want to save and eat all of the food nutrients which naturally exist in a vegetable. So we cook cabbage for the shortest time possible, and serve it while it is still clear and green in color, while its texture is still firm, altho tender, and before it has had a chance to develop its sulfurous odor and off-flavor.

Cabbage is a vegetable which doesn't bear warming over, so the careful cook prepares only enough for one meal at a time.

Cook cabbage covered, in a small amount of water, bouillon or broth, and serve that liquid with the vegetable, for it contains dissolved minerals which shouldn't be lost. We used to think that all strong flavored vegetables should be cooked in a large amount of water, uncovered, but have found that if the cooking period is short, color and flavor may be retained without the vitamin and mineral loss which occurred with the open kettle method of cooking.

Season cooked cabbage with meat drippings, especially those from ham, salt pork, sausage or bacon. As a variation from everyday quick-cooked cabbage, seasoned with salt, pepper and a little margarine, try "panning" the vegetable in drippings from one of these meats. Shred the cabbage and place it in a skillet with several tablespoons of fat, cover tightly and let the cabbage cook in its own steam until just tender. You may need to stir it once or twice to keep it from sticking. Season with salt and pepper and serve immediately.

Here's an interesting variation of panned cabbage.

Sweet-Sour Cabbage.
[Serves six.]

2 apples, chopped
1 onion, chopped
2 tablespoons melted drippings
½ medium cabbage, shredded
⅓ cup brown sugar
½ cup vinegar
Salt, pepper

Cook apples and onion in drippings 5 minutes. Add cabbage with ⅓ cup water. Cover closely and cook for 20 minutes, adding more water at intervals to keep steaming. Add sugar and vinegar when cabbage is tender. Add salt and pepper to taste. Serve hot.

Cabbage may be stuffed and baked. Hollow the cabbage from stalk side and save removed portions for salad. Boil cabbage shell in salt water for 10 minutes. Drain and stuff with meat filling or Spanish rice. Place in baking dish which has a cover. Cover bottom of dish with water. Cover closely and bake at 375 degrees until cabbage is tender and filling is hot.

The dress portion of your spring wardrobe depends upon simple, tailored items which may be worn at virtually any time. Today's two pattern suggestions afford an excellent clothes collection foundation.

At the left: A jumper model with deeply slashed neckline and front buttoning in the skirt only. The blouse, a typical shirtmaker, may be a jolly print or a plain color. Remnant counters will present many an inspiration for this twosome.

At the right: Surplice buttoning in an afternoon frock which adopts a lingerie collar as frosting. Below the molded bodice is soft fullness lending charm to the skirt.

Lady of the House

Tree Silhouettes.

In March, when the sap begins to climb and the buds begin to swell, I find myself looking at familiar trees with renewed appreciation of the beauty of their characteristic silhouettes. The great spreading limbs and crowns of maples, the graceful vase and urn-shaped elms, the rugged oaks, the feathery bursts of new growth where huge limbs of box elder were amputated, or heads of hoary willows cropped close, add interest to a winter weary landscape.

There is much beauty in a silvery birch against dark evergreens, the great sprawling reach of a gnarled old apple tree, the bold outflung branches of black walnut, the slender profile of Lombardy poplar. Seen more and more frequently now is the triangular fan of Ginkgo biloba [also gingko], the Chinese maidenhair tree that is the sole survivor of its ancient race.

Presently much of this beauty of line and color and form will be hidden by the fresh green that comes with each return of the south wind and the sun; so let's enjoy it while we may.

The American Forestry association's campaign to locate and preserve the giant specimens of American trees continues with its challenge to all tree lovers to locate and report big trees.

Illinois has credit for possessing the biggest trees of several species, as reported up to Jan. 1. Red ash in Riverside woods, and pagoda dogwood in Black Partridge woods, in Cook county. Cockspur hawthorne, crataegus sertata, hills haw and pear haw in Cook county forest preserve. Dotted thorn in Billy Caldwell's reserve, Chicago. Northern pin or jack oak in Dunes park.

Chicagoland also has the largest speckled alder, bigtooth aspen, black maple, bur oak, nannyberry [Viburnum], northern witchhazel, rock elm, eastern wahoo [Euonymus], eastern poplar [eastern cottonwood], and shadblow.

Wishful Thinking.

I'd like to wear a uniform and military cap;
I'd like to join the WAVES and WACs and get into the scrap;
I'd like to drill and march away to foreign battle fronts.
To leave my housework flat and do some interesting stunts.
I know that washing dishes, making beds, and cooking
Are necessary, but those suits are so darn good looking!
I know that counting ration stamps and washing windowpanes
Help just as much to win the war as flying aeroplanes.
Uncle Sam has asked us all to help him out, in fact
He says it's quite important to keep the homes intact.
That's an order, Uncle Sam, and we will do our best,
So the soldiers and the sailors, and marines can do the rest.
But when I see a uniform, natty, neat, and blue,
I DO get envious and wish that I could wear one, too!

I Am One of an Army of Women.

I work in your factories, in your offices and in your fields.
I weld a seam, I take a letter, or I plant a seed;
But the heart of me is home
Baking a cherry pie, hanging crisp curtains to the window or kissing tears away.

I am one of an army of women
Working for the way
When I can go back to Hanging crisp curtains to the window
Baking cherry pie
Kissing tears away . . .
. . . Listening for your step.

Final Call.

So many crowding tasks there are
And lovely things to hear and see,
Will I resent the time, however far,
The final call resounds for me?

Or will delusion fill my heart
And weariness encompass me complete?
I pray the years a strength impart
That I may go on eager feet!

Sleet Defeat.

I took a stand. This, my position
"I have two good feet";
Far was I from base submission
To that wifely admonition,
"Wear your rubbers, Sweet."

Thus fortified—I took my chances
On "that awful ice."
"Cease, my dear, those anxious glances,
This is how a man advances;
I don't need advice."

Alas! I lost my standing, clearly;
I am on the spot;
And that spot hurts quite severely,
So I'm telling you sincerely—
Bossing helps a lot.

When Chicago Was Young

By Herma Clark

Letters from Martha Freeman Esmond to her friend Julia Boyd of New York.

Chicago, March 1, 1896.

Mrs. Zebulon Hall.

Dear Julia: I have spent the afternoon at Martha Junior's home as Will is in Springfield on legal business. I usuall walk the seven blocks to her house but Martha insisted on sending her carriage for me. I was glad that she did, for the wind was very high. March came in like a lion, so that her coachman had to wear a cap instead of his customary beaver which he keeps in spotless order. Her coachman is English and his name, as pronounced by him, is 'Enery. The bays he drives are 'osses, and he recently requested Sandy to get a different coal for the furnace, as he liked the kind that burned to a h'ash.

I found at Martha's a delightful friend of hers, young Mrs. Lloyd J. Smith, who lives out north, on Evanston av. and Oakdale in the Lake View section of the city, which is country-like and pleasant. She is a brilliant person, with five years of school teaching to her credit, both in Oregon, where her father at one time owned a ranch, and here in Chicago. Her father, Zebulon M. Hall, died only two years ago and as she is devoted to his memory she told us much about his life, which interested me, for I never tire of hearing of our pioneers. I never shall be able to understand how boys, for many of our pioneers were so young, could venture so far from civilization, becoming merchants and manufacturers in this city and laying its foundations so wisely.

Mr. Hall came to Chicago when he was only 17. His father had died in New York state and the boy decided to migrate west. His grandfather, Gershom Hall, came with the lad in a covered wagon or, rather, started with him, dying on the way in the little town of Bellevue, O. Young Zebulon came on alone, reaching Chicago with only a sixpence in his pocket. He sold the horses and wagon at once and having burned his bridges behind him called on Mr. Charles Walker, who was in the grain business, asking for a position. Evidently Mr. Walker was pleased with his appearance and what he had to say for himself, which was that he had taken a bookkeeping course at Middlebury academy in New York state. The young fellow assured Mr. Walker, as the young heroes in Horatio Alger books did, that he would do anything honorable, his funds being low.

Mr. Walker's next words were those of most employers of the time. He told young Hall he'd give him a position; he could get a shovel and start moving the grain in the warehouse, as the other men were doing. This was a test by which "stuck up" young men from the effete east were weeded out. Chicago employers of the '30s wanted their men to have no hifalutin' notions, but as soon as the aspirant for a position tackled a menial job manfully, the employer was satisfied and usually promoted him rapidly.

Young Zebulon was luckier than most. He didn't even have to lift a shovelful of grain, for, as he was walking toward the warehouse, Mr. Walker called him back, gave him a job as bookkeeper at $100 a month and sent him to a good hotel.

When he began to prosper, Mr. Hall invested in sailing vessels, and later in steamers, having large holdings in many of these. On one of his trips on the lakes, he met his fate in the person of a young niece of A. W. Rosman, a famous lake captain. She was 10 years the junior of Zebulon Hall, but it was a happy marriage, and soon they had their own pretty home on N. State st., then called Wolcott st., near Chicago av. They were living here when the fire of 1871 came. Mr. Hall was engaged in the wholesale grocery business at the time, renting space in the Lind block, at Randolph and Market sts. With the help of his clerks and his sons, Frank and Edgar, he managed to save the building and it still stands, a monument to their courage and resourcefulness. They fought off the flames with water from the river, bringing it at first in barrels and soaking blankets; hurling burning brands into the river, when they fell on the roof. Soon he was able to get a small engine, which pumped water to help in the fight, but still can never see how the building was spared. Some shift in the wind may have saved it. For three days Mr. Hall fed the hungry from the provisions in his store and when all was gone he closed it. Insured in Chicago companies, which could not pay the enormous losses caused by the fire, Mr. Hall's fortune was quite depleted, and he bought a ranch in Oregon hoping to recoup what he had lost. But ranching, for one not used to the privations of the far west, was beyond Mrs. Hall's strength and they returned to Chicago after two or three years. Sarah [Martha's friend, Mrs. Lloyd Smith] had taught school in Oregon and on her return here obtained a position in our schools, teaching until her marriage four years ago. And now Selma has announced dinner and I must not write more. Much love,

Martha Freeman Esmond.

Foot Notes.

The Lind block, saved by Zebulon Hall in 1871, is still standing at Randolph and Market sts. Two of this pioneer's daughters are still living in Chicagoland, Mrs. Lloyd J. Smith, 40 E. Oak st., and Mrs. Bessie Hall Morey, 2200 Forest View rd., Evanston. . . . Broadway was called Evanston av. in the '90s.

It looks like a long season here, because winter visitors can't obtain railroad space to return home.

MIAMI BEACH, FLA.

Thousands more than can be accommodated are seeking space, and the railroads say the jam probably exceeds that of the 1925 boom period.

A high percentage of seats and sleeping car space is under control of a government reservation bureau under supervision of this war department, who insure the movement of military and essential government personnel, and what is left is available to civilians on a first come, first served basis. No troop movements are involved, as special trains are provided for that purpose, and the civilian rationing system is voluntary and unofficial, altho government sanctioned. Pessimists, who said "there are no tourists in Florida this winter," change their opinion when they go to the railroad offices. Reservations are on a 30 day advance basis, with only one day's reservations handled at a time, and the few berths available each day are exhausted in a few minutes.

Tourists temporarily "stranded" here will find plenty to keep them busy, however, until their train time 30 days hence. Racing starts again at Tropical Park tomorrow, after closing with a flourish at Hialeah Park yesterday, and most winter attractions will continue unabated at least thru March.

Final days at Hialeah Park attracted many parties. Mrs. Warren Wright of Chicago was hostess in her box to her house guest, Mrs. Royce G. Martin of Toledo, O., and Paris, Ky., and to film star Jeannette McDonald, who is vacationing at Palm Beach. Another Chicago party was made up of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert W. Young and their guests, Mr. and Mrs. Leo Wainwright Ernst and Miss Marilyn Ernst, formerly of Chicago, and Mrs. Arthur R. Jones of Chicago, who is visiting the Ernsts.

Mrs. Walter J. Merrill and Mrs. Arthur E. Chapman, both of Chicago, who are spending the winter at the Stratford, Miami Beach, are giving a series of parties, and were hostesses at a dinner-dance at the Surf club last night honoring Mrs. Chapman's daughter, Mrs. George Clifford of Chicago, and Mrs. Merrill's brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Harry R. Gerber of White Plains, N. Y.

Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Wilson of Chicago have taken a home on North Bay rd. for the winter, and have joined the Surf club. Mr. and Mrs. Herbert W. Young have returned from Palm Beach where they visited Mrs. Carlton Dodge of Chicago.

Miss Clara Winn gave a dinner at the Surf club recently for her sister, Mrs. H. W. Kirchburg. Both are from Chicago and stopping at the Broadripple.

Mrs. Charles Benjamin Shaffer of Chicago and Coldstream farm, Lexington, Ky., is vacationing at Miami Beach. Her daughter, Mrs. Otto C. Neumann, and her child, Florence, better known as "Fluffy," have rejoined Lt. Neumann and another daughter, Nancy, in Buffalo, after a visit here. Mrs. Shaffer will arrive in Buffalo in time to celebrate "Fluffy's" seventh birthday on March 24, stopping en route at Coldstream farm to visit her daughter-in-law, Mrs. E. Dale Shaffer, and 1 year old Charles Benjamin Shaffer III.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry G. Hook of Evanston recently were hosts aboard their yacht, the Northerner, to a group of Chicagoans for a cruise on Biscayne bay.
